Kansas City has authorized a $10,000,000 bond issue to enlarge her water works. Within five years our St. Louis water works will be inadequate. Shall we send the new population to Kansas City?

"BIG NAVY" MEN WIN IN FIGHT FOR FORCE OF 86,000 BY 47 VOTES

Amendment to Naval Bill, Increasing Enlisted Personnel From 67,000 Men, Is Carried in House 177 to 130 After Four Hours of Vigorous Debating.

TUMULT RISES WHEN COUNTING BEGINS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—With nearly 50 votes to spare, "big navy" men put through the house today by a vote of 177 to 130, an amendment to the 1923 naval bill increasing the enlisted force from 67,000 to 86,000.

Shot at from all sides, the bill, as framed by the Appropriations Committee and opposed by President Harding, wabbled at times like a frail craft—then went down by the head. There are other sections, of course, to be taken up next week, but the big fight was on the enlisted provision.

The vote today was in committee of the whole. When the measure reaches the House proper a demand will be in order for a record vote, but the wide margin by which the amendment won, means, according to most leaders, that the result will stand.

Some administration leaders asserted tonight that the letter presented yesterday from the President urging that the force not be reduced below 86,000 swung the tide in favor of the amendment which was offered jointly by Representative McArthur, Oregon, and Representative Vare, Pennsylvania, both Republicans.

Losers Fight to the Last.

Fighting to the last, holding his grounds through four solid hours of debate, Representative Kelley of Michigan, in charge of the bill, took the defeat with a smile when a roar, rising and growing, swept the chamber as the march of members down the aisle for a man-to-man count showed that the amendment had won.

When the moment came for a vote on the 86,000 amendment the question was put and there was a loud shout of ayes and an even louder shout of noes. No presiding officer could have decided which side was stronger in numbers. So great was the bellow of the "noes" that Representative Vare, on the winning side, jumped to his feet with a demand for a rising vote. Before this could be called, the whole house shouted for tellers and in a moment members were jammed at the head of the center aisle waiting for a chance to crowd through and be counted.

Galleries Join in Tumult.

Every seat filled, the galleries joined in the tumult. Guards who had kept the crowds in order during the day, let them shout as they pleased.

Just before the vote was announced the House halted a moment to permit Representative Mansfield, Democrat, Texas, who has been ill, to be counted without going through the ordeal of going down the aisle in the wheel chair, in which he has been attending House sessions.

Representative Kelley, as chairman of the subcommitftee which framed the bill with its provisions for a navy with an enlisted strength of 67,000 men—less than a navy under the arms conference treaty should have, opponents claimed—had the last word in the long debate. Half of the House stood as he started to speak. As the gavel tapped the warning that his time was up, the chairman, swinging away from the point he was seeking to drive home, namely, that the demand for the increase came from the navy yard sections, exclaimed:

"Let me say this, we must not permit any group of individuals or any combination of localities to throw themselves across the path of the world in the goal of world progress and peace as set by the armament conference."

Wanted to Warn Republicans.

Breaking into the debate towards the close, Chairman Madden of the Appropriations Committee, said he wanted to warn Republicans that if the right verdict did not come today on the vote, it would came in No-

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE SEEKS BAN ON ARBUCKLE PICTURES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Will H. Hays, director of the National Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributers, was called upon to prevent exhibition of motion pictures featuring Roscoe C. ("Fatty") Arbuckle by the Lord's Day Alliance of New York in a letter made public today.

Calling Arbuckle's acquittal of a charge of manslaughter and the jury's statement in his behalf a "whitewash," the letter addressed to Hays said:

"We appeal to you. We are not informed as to the exact bounds of your authority in the motion picture industry, but heretofore you have granted interviews and authorized public statements containing sentiments which your fellow citizens interested in the moral well being of the nation have gratefully welcomed.

"The request, therefore, which we respectfully urge upon you, is that you use your authority to intervene and prevent the outrage to the moral sensibilities of the citizens of this country, threatened in the proposal to again exhibit any Arbuckle films."

FULL-BLOWN TULIPS TO BE SEEN AT BOTANICAL GARDENS TODAY

Approximately 20,000 full-blown tulips will be the Easter greeting of the Missouri Botanical Gardens to visitors today.

The tulips are arranged by colors in 30 beds flanking the walk between the main entrance and the display houses. Kaiserkroons, yellow blossoms with deep red petal tips, are in the round beds, and the oblong beds are alternately pink cottage maids and white swans.

All of the trees in the garden now are in spring dress. The four white red-bud trees, the only albino forms of the variety known to exist in the United States, are in blossom.

The narcissus, of which nearly 200,000 bulbs were planted last autumn, also are in bloom, and though somewhat wind-torn, are still attractive.

ROW IN THE SENATE OVER LILLIAN RUSSELL APPOINTMENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Designation by President Harding of Mrs. Lillian Russell Moore of Pittsburg as a special immigration agent was criticised and upheld in the Senate today during discussion of immigration legislation.

Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, questioned Mrs. Moore's qualifications, saying she might be an authority on "theatricals and cosmetics," but that he did not know she was an authority on immigration. Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, interjected vigorously that the criticism of Mrs. Moore was "highly undignified and ungentlemanly."

RIVER EXPECTED TO REACH CREST HERE TOMORROW

5000 ACRES NORTH OF THE CITY FLOODED

Many Homes in the Columbia Bottoms Isolated and Others Are Deserted—Heavy Damage Done.

A stage of 32.7 feet for the Mississippi River here this morning, and a rise to 32.8 by tomorrow were predicted yesterday by the Weather Bureau, with the expectation that the 32.8 stage will be the crest of the flood here.

The river has now been above flood stage for a week, having passed the 30-foot limit last Sunday. It is expected that today's rise will cover most of the downtown levee space, including the tracks of the Terminal and Wabash railroads. These tracks have been under water near Eads Bridge for several days.

The Missouri River at St. Charles is expected to reach a 31-foot flood crest today, and this rise, amounting to .4 of a foot since yesterday morning, will spread the water over a further area on Missouri Point, and in the St. Louis County bottoms opposite St. Charles.

A fall in the Meramec River at Valley Park was predicted to begin today. The stage there yesterday was 14.2 feet, or .2 over flood stage.

The Illinois River is falling above Peoria, and the crest is believed to have been reached at Peoria, with a stage of 24.8 feet, the highest recorded there in more than 75 years.

At Beardstown the water is expected to go 6 inches higher than it was yesterday morning, and to reach 24.8 feet.

The St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross and the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross have made preparations for giving any assistance which may be called for in flooded communities in this region. The Central Division, Red Cross, now has workers at Beardstown, Ill. The policy of the Red Cross is to wait for requests from local or municipal authorities before undertaking relief work in any locality.

The War Department has ordered that relief work be done by such of the forces at Jefferson Barracks as may be needed for such work, in the territory south of St. Louis, and that tents and other supplies be furnished.

5000 ACRES OF COLUMBIA BOTTOMS LAND FLOODED

Missouri River Takes Short Cut to Mississippi—Many Homes Isolated.

The Missouri River, in the greatest rampage it has gone on since 1903, is taking a short cut to the Mississippi River through the Columbia Bottoms, which lie east of the end of the Riverview drive, 10 miles north of the end of the Broadway car line. Sweeping through the district with a rapid current in most places, it is carrying entire crops with it and is doing damage which it is estimated will run into thousands of dollars.

Some homes have been isolated, others are deserted and in most of the barnyards only ducks are seen, paddling complacently about with a contented "quack" now and then.

From hills, as far as one can see, are stretches of water. The Missouri River joins the Mississippi several miles from the bottoms, but now parts of the streams meet directly in the place and far back from the swirling currents are acres of backwater.

Mules Move From Hay Stack.

Nick Loyal, a bachelor, who lives several miles east of the Riverview drive, thought he would save himself the task of driving his livestock to higher ground, by putting his four mules, a horse and a pig on top of a haystack, for he believed the water would recede shortly. The river continued to rise, and with the rise came more rain, making it highly uncomfortable for the animals. Loyal solved this by moving them into his small home and now, as one rows up to the place in a boat a mule is likely to poke his head out a window, with a hee-haw of welcome.

FIRST REQUESTS MADE FOR MONEY FOR REPRESENTATION AT INTERNATIONAL PARLEYS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.

THE first requests for money for American representation on the international commissions authorized by the arms conference was sent to the Senate today by the President. He asked for $68,750 for American participation in the revision of Chinese tariffs and jurisprudence, and $3750 for an American delegate on the commission of jurists to consider amendments to the laws of war.

The request was accompanied by a memorandum by Director Dawes of the budget, saying it was desired to obtain Americans of highest standing to serve on the commission. For this reason he indorsed salaries amounting to $12,000 a year for one delegate to the special Chinese tariff conference, $7500 for the principal delegate to the general Chinese tariff conference, $12,000 for the American Commissioner on Chinese courts and $3750 for six months for a delegate on the war laws conference.

M'CORMACK TO UNDERGO ANOTHER OPERATION TODAY

Physicians Hope This Will Relieve Difficulty in Breathing; Singer Pleased With Telegrams Received.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Physicians in attendance on John McCormack, the Irish tenor, who has been confined to his apartment at 270 Park avenue with laryngitis, resorted today to another operation to open the upper part of the pharynx. Antitoxin also was administered. Another operation, from which doctors hope for good results, will be performed tomorrow.

The singer's wife, after three nights of uninterrupted vigil at his bedside, said this evening:

The gravity of the patient's condition this afternoon was evidenced in the following bulletin issued at the McCormack home by his physicians:

"Mr. McCormack passed a very restless night. Dr. Munroe was at his bedside all night. Dr. Smith was called in at 4 a. m. and remained in constant attendance.

"At 7:30 a. m. increased difficulty in breathing; at 8 a. m. operated on by Dr. Smith, assisted by Munroe; opened upper part of pharynx.

"At 1 p. m. antitoxin in 10,000 units was administered by Dr. Dupont.

Cornelius G. Coakley."

At 6:30 o'clock this evening the following bulletin was issued:

"Mr. McCormick has been comfortable since 1 p. m. today when antitoxin was extensively administered by Dr. Alfred C. Dupont. He has taken a little nourishment, for the first time in several days."

This statement was issued by D. S. McSweeney, McCormack's concert manager. In issuing the bulletin, McSweeney took occasion to deprecate the spirit of gloom which he said pervaded newspaper accounts of the singer's illness this afternoon.

"You can't kill an Irishman that easy," said McSweeney. "I hope the newspapers will give this the same space that they have given the exaggerated reports that Mr. McCormack is near death's door."

Scores of messages from friends throughout the country were received at the McCormack home today. One from Lawrence O'Neill, Lord Mayor to Dublin, read:

"The people of your native Ireland are grieved to hear of your illness. They fervently pray for your speedy recovery. We extend to you teh love, the gratitude, the sympathy and the hope of the Irish nation."

Another telegram came from Washington, signed by 24 members of the United States Senate.

McSweeney said this evening that McCormack was much pleased at the telegram that had ben sent to all the managers of the B. F. Keith theaters by A. L. Albee, general manager. The message follows:

"John McCormack was at the point of death this week, but is considered out of danger now. He has asked that his friends say a prayer for him. Mr. Albee wants you to hold a one-minute silent prayer at each performance today, as the world, regardless of religion, holds him as their friend."

WOMAN HOLDING BABY SLAIN IN BUS BY HER HUSBAND

Kansas City (Kan.) Man Follows Young Wife and Fires When She Refuses to Return to Him.

SAYS SHE BROKE HER PROMISE TO JOIN HIM

Clyde Sarver, Holding Child on Lap at Police Station, Declares He Didn't Intend to Shoot.

Mrs. Pearl Sarver, 24 years old, of 2925 Franklin avenue, was shot and killed last night shortly before 6 o'clock in a crowded motor bus which was preparing to leave the end of the Cherokee street car line for Fenton, Mo., by her husband, Clyde Sarver, 33, of Mexia, Tex., from whom she had been separated for three months.

Clyde Jr., 2 years old, was on his mother's lap when she was killed. Last night he sat on his father's lap in the Mounted District police station while his father related how he came to shoot his wife.

He didn't mean to shoot her, but drew the revolver to frighten her and when she answered angrily his demand that she return to him, he got angry too and—

"Then you shot her," Lieut. Vasey of the homicide squad interrupted.

"Then the gun went off," Sarver said.

Baby Senses the Tragedy.

Little Clyde, who had been fingering a penny, sensed that something was wrong and his lip quivered as he looked up into his father's face. The elder Clyde looked down at the child and burst into tears.

"I promised her everything, all my money and the best of treatment if she would bring my children back to me," he said. He told that after shooting his wife, he knelt beside her and told her that he didn't mean to hurt her and kissed her, but that she didn't answer. He started to run away, but the cry of his little son brought him running back. When he found, then, that his wife was dead, he started to run again but men in a group which had gathered seized him and held him for the police.

Sarver's story to the police was substantially as follows: He and his family, which includes a daughter, Almeida Belle, 5 years old, who was not with her mother when she was killed, resided in Kansas City, Kan. He is a carpenter and at times wrestles under the name of "Kid Sarver" or the "Wrestling Carpenter." He determined to take work in Texas and went there, his family coming to the home of his wife's father, John Gibbs, at 2953 Cass avenue. He was to send for them as soon as possible.

He did write to his wife to come to him and she named a day and train on which she would arrive, but she did not come and afterward wrote him that she was not coming. He wrote other letters to her, but he received no answer. Meanwhile, he met a relative by marriage of his wife in a Texas town and he mentioned another man and that Sarver's "wife was going out at night."

Asked Wife to Go With Him.

Finally he determined to come to St. Louis unannounced and he brought a revolver with him for any eventuality. He arrived yesterday morning and went to his wife's father's home, where he was informed that she had set out to visit her sister, who lives at the Sunset Hill Country Club, where her husband is employed. He followed and the street car reached the end of the Cherokee line before the bus carrying his wife had departed.

He entered the bus and asked his wife to come back with him to her father's home. She refused and declined to talk with him there, suggesting that he go on to the country club.

"Did you know ——— (naming a man) before you wrote that letter?" he demanded.

"What if I did," she retorted. "You haven't anything on me."

Took Revolver From Bundle.

Sarver took out a revolver which he was carrying in a shirt bundled up in paper under his arm.

"You had better come or I will hurt you," he said to her. She started to rise, he said, and in so doing jarred his elbow. The weapon was discharged, and his wife fell to the floor of the bus.

"I didn't mean to," he said; "and if I did it was only to hit her shoulder." The bullet passed through the muscular part of her arm and entered her heart.

The Sarvers had been married six years. The police notified Mrs. Sarver's father to come and get Clyde Jr.

HARDING HAS GOLF TEACHER ON LAWN OF WHITE HOUSE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—President Harding has added an instructor to the golf party in the White House south grounds. George A. O'Neill of Chicago has taken on the responsibility of polishing up Mr. Harding's driving.

O'Neill is a confidential business assistant of Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board. While in Washington he has been a member of the President's recent foursomes, and, being able to make the Washington Country Club course in 71, is considered by Mr. Harding's friends competent to give a few lessons.

The President, O'Neill and Laddie Boy, the White House Airedale, spent an hour and a half this morning, Laddie Boy acting as caddie. They ended up the practice at about 9:30 o'clock. President Harding's form on the driving tee is declared to be greatly improved.

Robber Tells Clerk to Beware of Thieves and Takes $60.

A customer who last night bought a dime's worth of cheese from Mrs. Jane Segelman at the grocery of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Marks, at 6849 Waldemar avenue, advised Mrs. Segelman to be careful about the cash in the store as there were "quite a number of 'stickups' occurring about the city."

"Oh, are you a policeman?" Mrs. Segelman inquired.

"No, I'm one of the numerous stickup men," her customer replied as he drew a revolver from his pocket and pointed it at her.

"I guess I'll look over what you have," the man declared and proceeded to take about $60 from the cash drawer.

HUGE WATERSPOUT IS OUTDISTANCED BY AN OCEAN LINER

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Cunard liner Carmania returned yesterday after a record voyage to the near East, and after passing through various climes and climaxes, gave to her passengers three days ago the thrill of their lives when she was chased by a water spout.

The ship was about 800 miles east of New York and most of the passengers were lolling about the decks when suddenly a commotion was observed in the sea about eight miles to the southward.

Some invisible force appeared to be pulling part of the ocean into the sky, twisting and turning the waves like the ribbons of a maypole, the glint of the sun showering them with the colors of the rainbow. Capt. G. W. Melson, who has sailed the seven seas these many years, promptly pronounced the heaving and weaving mass of waves a water spout.

Passengers crowded aft and gazed in wonder and awe on the swirling mass of water whizzing toward them. Capt. Melson assured them there was no danger and then rang for full speed ahead. The water spout grew until it was at least 500 feet in diameter and a mile high. Speculation of what would happen if it overtook the ship brought shivers to the watching crowd on the Carmania's deck.

The mass seemed to be gaining on the ship and for half an hour the excitement on the ship's decks was intense. Then the great sea funnel subsided, the huge ribbons of water tumbling back to their native ocean.

GAMBLER OFFERS TO PAY POLICE SALARIES FOR HOUSE PERMITS

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 15.—Mayor George Oles announced today that a well-known gambler had offered to pay the salaries of the police force for nine months if he were permitted to operate four gambling houses. The Mayor said he had refused the offer.

The Chamber of Commerce is still gathering figures in an effort to solve the crisis caused by an empty treasury, while Mayor Oles stands pat on his announced determination to reduce the police and fire departments to 25 men each unless some better plan is offered by the chamber.

SOVIET ASKS ALLIES FOR 50 BILLION GOLD RUBLES

LLOYD GEORGE'S AIM AT MEETING

Agreement of 34 Nations Against Invasion of Territory Would Resemble Harding's Idea of Association.

By the Associated Press.

GENOA, April 15.—Premier Lloyd George has announced that his aim at the Genoa conference is to bring into being a pact among the 34 nations represented, agreeing not to invade one another's territories. It would be similar to the four-Power pact negotiated at Washington.

Britain is against a pact with military sanctions, it is declared, because sanctions belong to the order of ideas that an endeavor is being made to get away from, and guarantees would mean a new grouping of the Powers. The military holiday is not considered practical by Britain.

In response to questions the spokesman for the British said that Lloyd George's plan resembled President Harding's idea for an association of nations, which it was hoped would bring disarmament or a big reduction of armaments in its wake.

Russians Must Reply Yes or No.

The Russian delegates were told today to answer definitely yes or no as to whether they will put into practice the conditions of the Cannes resolution and the guarantees contained in the London experts' report, according to a French communique issued tonight subsequent to the adjournment of a lengthy meeting between the allied leaders and the Russians.

It seemed impossible, said the French statement, to get anything tangible from the soviet delegates, who astonished the allied representatives by demanding 50,000,000,000 gold rubles as the amount due Russia because of foreign intervention. This is two and a half times greater than the amount the allies claim from Russia.

Italian Statement.

An Italian statement regarding the meeting was more optimistic. It pointed out that the subjects discussed are vaster in scope than was dreamed of when the Genoa conference originated.

"This," said the statement, "is an attempt to bring about the coexistence in the world of finance, economy and commerce of two opposite regimes—capitalism and communism. This morning the experts were struggling in a kingdom of figures and in the afternoon the allied leaders took the discussion back into the kingdom of principles."

The Bolshevik delegates have been asked to expedite the discussion as much as possible, and the conversations will be resumed as soon as possible.

Discussion of Three Points.

The discussion between the allied leaders and the Russian delegates today centered on three points:

First, debts; second, war debts, and third, restitution of private property.

With regard to the first, the Russians explained what they called the "confused condition" of their people, who believed they had made a new world out of chaos and after a terrible convulsion. If the Powers asked them to pay their old debts,

MAIL CAR ROBBERY CONFESSION MADE, INSPECTORS STATE

One of Three Arrested Friday in Connection With M. P. $32,000 Hold-Up Exonerates Two of Five.

Postoffice inspectors announced last night that they had obtained a confession from Henry Welks, Terminal switchman, one of three men arrested Friday on charges of participation in the robbery of a Missouri Pacific mail car within the St. Louis city limits, the night of Aug. 18, 1920. About $32,000 in cash, Liberty bonds and Government certificates was taken by the robbers.

At the same time, the inspectors announced that they had arrested the last man for whom they were looking in this case. He is Aloys Wiegers, formerly a clerk in a drug store at 500 DeBaliviere avenue. He was arrested at Germantown, Ill., yesterday, and was brought to St. Louis last evening.

As was told yesterday, Weiks, Albert Vaughn and Carl Ferguson were arrested Friday. Ferguson is a former switchman for the Missouri Pacific, and he now has a farm at Ward, Ark., which he is said to have bought after the robbery, for $4500 cash. He was arrested there. Vaughn is a mail clerk running on the Frisco line between St. Louis and Monett, Mo.

Text of Alleged Confession.

Alfred A. Oliver of 3139 Park avenue, an airbrake inspector for the Terminal Association, was arrested in December, 1920, charged with participation in the robbery, and was convicted last November in the Federal Court and sentenced to five years in the Leavenworth penitentiary. He is at liberty on an appeal bond.

Welks, in his statement to the Postoffice inspectors, declared that Wiegers, who formerly roomed with him at 3453 St. Voncent avenue, had nothing to do with the robbery. He also said Vaughn was innocent of any part in it.

Welks said the robbery was committed by himself and Oliver, in the mail car, and Ferguson, as their outside accomplice, and that they three were the only ones who took part in it.

Oliver has denied being in the mail car, and the theory of the inspectors has been that Welks and Wiegers were in the car, and that Oliver, Ferguson and Vaughn cooperated on the outside.

History of the Holdup.

The two men, of whom Welks admits being one, appeared in the mail car of Missouri Pacific train No. 5, shortly after the train had left Tower Grove Station. Five mail clerks, at work in the car, were held up by the two robbers, who gathered up five pouches of registered mail, and threw them off and themselves jumped out at Bates street.

The contents of these pouches included a $25,000 currency shipment destined for a bank in Poplar Bluff. The robbers threw the sacks into the Mississippi River after removing their most valuable contents. The sacks, still containing books of blank money orders, postal cards and stamped envelopes, consigned to postoffices, were found in the river not far from the scene of the robbery.

Welks related to the inspectors that the proceeds of the robbery were "split three ways," being equally divided between himself, Oliver and Ferguson, each receiving more than $10,000. He declared that Oliver, after his arrest, made demands on him and Ferguson for money to pay for his defense. Welks said Oliver got nearly $9000 from him, and got from Ferguson most of the money that Ferguson had left after buying his farm in Arkansas.

Continuance of Confession.

Welks, in declaring that Vaughn had no part in the robbery, said that Oliver was the originator of the plan, and that Oliver represented himself, to him and Ferguson, as "an old hand, who knew the game from A to Z," and who had held up a mail car on the L. & N.

He said that Oliver tried to get Vaughn into the robbery, and questioned him, in the effort to get information as to the movement of valuable registered mail on the Frisco line. Welks said Vaughn refused to give any information along this line.

Welks said the automobile used in connection with the robbery was the property of Ferguson, and not of Vaughn, as the inspectors had believed, and that it was Ferguson who placed torpedoes on the track near Bates street, thus causing the train to slow down sufficiently to enable the robbers to escape from the mail car.

Wiegers, in a statement to the inspectors last night, said he was rooming with Welks at the time of the robbery, and that he knew Oliver, but that he did not know of the part taken by them in the robbery, and had nothing to do with it himself. He said that, some time after the robbery, Oliver asked him to sell a number of Liberty Bonds for him, and that he did so, and turned over the money, $970, to Oliver.

Story Told by Wiegers.

Two weeks ago, Wiegers said, Oliver asked him to sell a larger amount of Liberty Bonds for him, and he did so, getting more than $4500 for the bonds.

"I didn't take that money to Oliver," Wiegers said. "I decided, instead, to take a trip, and I quit my drug store job and went to Moberly, then to Springfield, Ill., and Chicago, and later to Germantown, Ill., my old home. I buried the money I had left—I don't know just how much—on my father's farm near Germantown. I was planning to come down here and hunt up Oliver, and dicker with him to return the remaining money to him. I guess my skipping out with the $4500 was the real cause of my being arrested."

The inspectors, accompanied by Welks, went last night to a place on St. Charles road where, according to Welks' story, money, bonds and jewelry had been buried by Oliver. They dug where Welks directed, but found nothing of value.

Rings Reported Found.

Vaughn has denied any complicity in or knowledge of the robbery. Ferguson was taken to Little Rock and is to be brought to St. Louis this week. According to information received from Little Rock, he has made no admissions.

A telegram from Inspector Rowe, at Aurora, Mo., said that two rings, which were included in the list of articles, taken in the robbery, had been found in possession of a young woman there, and that she said Welks had given them to her.

The postoffice inspectors who have worked on the case are K. P. Aldrich, in charge of the St. Louis office, and Inspectors Ward, Noah and Cain.

GENOA DISCUSSIONS SHOW 3 DIFFICULTIES IN WAY OF HELPING EXCHANGE VALUES

By JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES, M. A., C. B.

(Fellow and Bursar of King's College, Cambridge; Editor Economic Journal (London), Author "Economic Consequence of the Peace," and a Revision of the Treaty).

GENOA, April 15.—The currencies and exchanges of Europe fall into two distinct groups: those which, in spite of wide seasonal fluctuations, no longer suffer progressive depreciation, and those which are still chaotic. Great Britian, France, Italy, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and all the neutral states might claim place in the first group. The remaining states of Central, Eastern and Southeastern Europe comprise the second.

The conference might very well declare that for the first group a return to the gold standard at an early date is worth attempting, provided that those of them whose exchanges are more than 20 per cent below prewar parity abandon the idea of regaining the former parity. This declaration would command wide, if not universal assent.

I would like to go further and draw up an actual scheme. But the discussions at Genoa have already shown that when we try to go further we meet with three chief obstacles. First: It is difficult for Great Britain to enter any general scheme immediately because, whilst she is not ready to re-establish her gold standard on its prewar parity, yet she is averse to re-establishing it upon any other, whilst the neutrals, some of whom are more nearly ripe for prewar parity, are afraid to allow free withdrawals of gold until Great Britain allows them also. Thus the desire of Great Britain to improve her exchange delays the rest of Europe from fixing theirs. Nevertheless this British view is now incapable, I think, of being reconciled with the immediate adoption of a general scheme.

Reference to U. S.

The two other obstacles would involve reference to the United States, which country now holds so large a proportion of the world's gold that its policy must largely fix its value. It might not be imprudent, after some kind of understanding with the American Federal Reserve Board; and it might even be possible to agree on certain broad lines of policy between the board and those European central banks which resume on a gold basis with the view of keeping their commodity, the value of gold, as steady as possible. The theorists, Prof. Cassell and Mr. Hawtree, have persuaded practical bankers that such considerations are really important.

It is also necessary to act in conjunction with the United States for adequate precautions to prevent a seasonal trade balance in favor of the United States against Europe from overwhelming the new gold standards in their early days. When confidence has been re-established this can be looked after as it was before the war, by the movement of floating balances of international bankers from one center to another. But, at first, special safeguards may be required and they cannot be arranged adequately without the friendly assistance of the banking authorities of America.

Further Conference Possible.

If, however, the view is correct that for these three reasons the Genoa conference itself can do nothing for the exchanges, then everything points to a further monetary conference issuing out of this one. It would carry the matter decidedly further if the financiers assembled in Genoa were to convey a definite suggestion to the United States Government that the interests of the world would be served if, in conjunction with the Federal Reserve Board, they would invite Great Britain, Belgium, Italy, France, Spain, Holland, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries, the Czecho-Slovakian countries, Japan and Argentine, each to send one representative of their treasury and one representative of their central bank, or office of issue, to a conference at Washington at which political questions would be excluded, for the purpose of drafting a monetary convention which would permit all those countries which could comply with its conditions to resume a gold standard.

At any rate, if the Genoa conference is not to leave matters exactly where they were before, we must meet something a little bolder than what they are offering us at present from the men of very real talents collected here.

"BIG NAVY" MEN WIN IN FIGHT FOR FORCE OF 86,000

vember, when they would be forced to explain why they had failed to bring about economy, one of the objects hoped to be obtained by the arms conference. Madden asserted the amendment as adopted would add $60,000,000 in one lump sum to the total of $233,000,000 carried in the bill.

Representative Padgett of Tennessee, the former Democratic chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, which formerly prepared the naval bills, made one of the principal arguments for the increase, asserting the efficiency of the navy could not be maintained without it. The movement for the increase on the Republican side was in the hands of McArthur, Vare and Representative Rogers of Massachusetts.

After adopting the Vare amendment the House, without division, adopted one offered by Representative McArthur, increasing from $93,000,000 to $107,000,000 the amount carried for pay of officers and enlisted men in the next fiscal year.

HARDING SHOOK HANDS OF 1500 VISITORS YESTERDAY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The stream of visitors that has flowed into the White House since President Harding opened the gates and inaugurated the practice of holding daily receptions reached high-water mark, when 1500 persons shook hands with the chief executive. They filed past him in his office at the rate of from 40 to 55 per minute. White House officials estimated that 7500 persons had shaken hands with Mr. Harding during this week.

Sightseers and students from high schools and colleges made up the larger groups of callers, all of whom were admitted at a fixed hour on letters from their Senators and Representatives in Congress.

HARRY VOKES, OF WARD AND VOKES COMEDY TEAM, DIES

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 15.—Harry Vokes, comedian, who, with Hap Ward, entertained thousands in this country and abroad for years, died at a hospital here today. Death was due to injuries sustained in an explosion yesterday at the plant of the Beacon Oil Co., in Everett. He had been employed there recently as a pump tender.

Although Vokes attained his comic fame as a member of the team of Ward and Vokes, he came of a family of clowns that played in circuses. The team appeared in vaudeville from 1886 to 1904, first in variety, then in farcical sketches.

BORAH WANTS SEMENOFF HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

COSSACK LEADER HOOTED BY CROWDS

Hundreds Surround Jail to Vent Their Hatred, and His Picture, Drawn by Child, Evokes His Wrath.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—A new complication over the presence of Gen. Gregorie Semenoff in this country arose today when the Senate Labor Committee sought to subpena in its investigation of the case Boris Bakhmeteff, the last accredited Russian Ambassador to the United States, and found its right to do so contradicted under the practice of "diplomatic immunity.

Bakhmeteff, sent here in 1917 by the Kerensky government of Russia, was not in Washington when the subpena was issued, but it was said at the embassy that immunity would be claimed. Embassy officials added they would suggest to the State Department that American statutes make it a punishable offense to attempt to serve a subpena on an Ambassador.

Borah Determined.

Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, chairman of the Labor Committee, was not deterred by the statement of the Russian officials, however, saying that the question of Bakhmeteff's status would have to be determined when it arose through his failure to respond to the commitee's summons. It seemed rather illogical, the Idaho Senator said, for a man to claim to be Ambassador of a Government which went out of existence five years ago.

When Chairman Borah directed that a subpena be served on Bakhmeteff the Sergeant-at-Arms called the Russian embassy on the telephone and, being informed that Bakhmeteff was in Charleston, S. C., sent him the following telegram:

"You are requested to appear before the Committee on Education and Labor of the Senate on Monday, the 17th, at 10 o'clock to testify relative to matters under consideration by said committee. Accept this notice as servic of subpena and appear at time named."

Telegram to District Attorney.

"Is there any possible way by which Semenoff now in Ludlow jail can be held responsible for the murder of American soldiers in Siberia? The evidence seems very clear."

In explanation of the message, the committee chairman said that in his opinion the evidence collected by the committee during its hearings was sufficient to warrant an indictment for murder if there was any way by which it could be done.

"The evidence leaves no doubt in my mind," said Senator Borah, "that Semenoff has been guilty of that crime."

Semenoff, Hooted by Crowds at Every Move, Still in Jail.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Gen. Gregorie Semenoff, former Ataman of the Siberian Cossacks, now the butt of East Side hooters and catcallers, spent another day in the Ludlow street jail, where he is held in default of bail on a civil warrant, while crowds mill about, waiting for a chance to see him, and howl out their anger and hatred.

Most of the day the General showed no sign that the crowd's presence disturbed him. But he refused to exercise. To do so meant he would have to go into the courtyard, while hundreds of persons on nearby roofs shouted at every move he made.

He sat alone on a bench under a wall. But in the middle of the afternoon a note addressed to Semenoff was tossed from a roof by a child. It was taken to him. All it contained was a picture of himself—but the General for the first time showed something of the flashing anger with which he has been credited as leader of the Cossacks. He threw the picture to the ground and stamped on it, then went inside the jail.

Efforts of his lawyers to get bondsmen or to free him on a writ of habeas corpus failed again. The general will have to spend Easter Sunday in jail, and his attorneys said he may have to remain there even longer.

A request that charges of murder be placed against Gen. Semenoff for the death of American soldiers in the Siberian expedition, killed by the Ataman's anti-Bolshevik forces, was contained in a letter sent today to Secretary of State Hughes by Cody Marsh, Adjutant, attached to the New York headquarters of the Siberian veterans.

"The men who served in France felt no more bitterly toward the Kaiser than we felt and still feel towards the bandit chief," wrote Marsh. "We feel that in this case, especially, the American flag should mean something more than sentiment and that charges of murder should be brought against Gregorie Semenoff. Any steps that are taken in this direction will at least have the value of tending to plaec the blame where it belongs if it does not belong directly to Semenoff himself."

ARMED MEN FILL HOUSES IN SLIGO; GRIFFITH DUE TODAY

Followers of De Valera Plan to Prevent Speech of President of the Dail Eireann; He Says He Will Speak.

DUBLIN VIRTUALLY AN ARMED CAMP

By the Associated Press.

SLIGO, Ireland, April 15.—This picturesque Irish town, where Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, is to deliver an Easter address tomorrow in favor of the free state treaty, was full of armed men tonight, and reinforcements for the insurgent followers of Eamonn de Valera were pouring in from the country. Nearly every house in the city was occupied by troops, and there was wholesale food commandeering.

It was stated tonight that the insurgent troops intend to allow no civilians on the streets after 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. In view of the presence of so many armed men, it is feared that few citizens will attend Griffith's address, which it was suggested tonight might be delivered in the county jail, the sole important building now in possession of free state troops.

The route which Griffith will take in coming from Dublin was unknown, but it was the subject of general speculation.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, April 15.—Eamonn de Valera this evening issued through his publicity department an Easter message addressed to the Republic of Ireland, his special organ, but as this newspaper does not appear again until Wednesday, and since he wanted the message to appear on Easter Sunday in the press of the world, he dictated it to the newspapermen as follows:

"Young men and young women of Ireland, hold steadily on. Those who with cries of woe and lamentation would involve you in a disastrous rout will soon rally behind you and vie with you for a place in the vanguard.

"Beyond all telling is the destiny God had in his mind for Ireland, the fair, the peerless one. You are artificers of that destiny. Yours is the faith that moves mountains, the faith that comforts cowardly reason and its thousands of misgivings. Yours is the faith and love that begot the enterprise of Easter, 1916.

"Easter, 1922."

Belief was expressed in some quarters in Dublin that the character of the last sentences in De Valera's message would strengthen current rumors of a Republican coup this Easter.

Arthur Griffith's attention was drawn to the menacing situation in Sligo, where the Republican insurgents were strengthening their positions and where he is booked to speak. "I am going to Sligo," was Griffith's only comment.

London Expects Trouble in Sligo if Griffith Speaks.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 15.—Developments in Ireland over Sunday are anxiously awaited here, in view of the republican seizure of the four courts in Dublin and Arthur Griffith's determination to hold his pro-treaty meeting in Sligo tomorrow, over the decree of the local Irish republican commander.

It will be a surprise if Sunday passes in Sligo without trouble.

Griffith's latest statement was that he was determined to fulfill his promise to speak here, and there seems to be every reason to expect that if he attempts to make the address a clash of the rival parties will result.

The Daily News says: "The outlook is one of almost unrelieved blackness," and the Westminster Gazette says it "can scarcely believe Michael Collins' tolerance will survive this outrage in the capital of the country for whose government he is responsible."

Two British Warships Arrive Off Irish Coast.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, April 15.—Two British warships arrived in Lough Swilly, County Donegal, northwest of Londonderry, it was learned this afternoon.

The movement of the British warships into the waters of County Donegal, Ireland, announced in Belfast advices today, is interpreted here as a precautionary measure, in view of the tense situation in Ireland.

ANECDOTES FROM 'POP' ANSON'S LIFE RECALLED BY MANY

LANDIS COMPLETES PLANS FOR FUNERAL

Public Services to Be Held at 2 O'Clock This Afternoon—Ball Park Flags at Half-Mast.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Chicago tomorrow will pay its final tribute to Adrian C. Anson, revered hero of baseball for half a century, who died following an operation yesterday at St. Luke's Hospital, when public funeral services for the honored sportsman will be held at a downtown funeral chapel with prominent men of the city, the Chicago and Detroit American League baseball teams and various leaders in the sport world in attendance.

The Rev. R. Keene Ryan will preach the funeral sermon.

Arrangements were completed today by Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, and members of the family of the famous old ballplayer, for the public services. It had been planned to hold the services at 3 o'clock, but they were put forward to 2 o'clock to give the Detroit and Chicago ballplayers an opportunity to attend. The game between the White Sox and Detroit teams was postponed to 3:30 o'clock. Burial will be private in Oakwoods Cemetery Monday, which would have been Anson's seventieth birthday, had he lived.

Many Telegrams of Condolence.

Today thousands of telegrams, letters and telephone messages were received by members of Anson's family, expressing their sympathy. They came from all parts of the country and from men in every walk of life.

Among the telegrams received by Anson's family was one from "Roaring Bill" Lange, the big outfielder, whose brilliant playing was a White Sox feature 20 years ago. Lange, always a close friend of Anson, now is in business in San Francisco.

Flags flew at half mast in every American and National League ball park today as a tribute to Anson's memory. Every organized baseball club in the country is expected to follow the lead of the big league officers.

The day before Anson became sick he met Al Spink on the street and asked him how old he was. Al replied that he would be 70 next summer, Anson replied:

"I have you beaten two months. I will be 70 this April and I am good for another 20 years."

Anson used to make his bats of yellow poplar. He would have the wood cut bat length and hang the pieces in the chimney to be dried in winter. After that, according to Charles Essig, he would have them turned into the regular bat form. In those days it was the custom to drill a hole in the end of the bat, weight it and replug the hole with cork and paint. Later stringent rules were made by the National League against this practice and it was discarded generally.

Incident of Stop-Watch.

A. G. Spalding, when it was decided to move the Chicago White Stockings from the lake front to the west side, sent Essig to J. B. Skinner, the representative of the ground, which was in litigation, to see if it could be rented as a baseball park. Skinner agreed to let the baseball men have the park for $175 a year.

Anson was a billiard fan and a fight fan as well. There was a grudge fight scheduled between Al Shrosbe and Billy Leads. Billy Murphy a sporting editor, had a stop watch and gave it F. Meyer, the swimming instructor at the North Clark Street Natatorium, near the car barns. Anson declined to referee the fight, but sat as a spectator. Back of him were a number of trees and bushes in storage. The battle went nine minutes straight and at the end Shrosbe knocked out Leeds. Meyer was asked why he didn't divide the time into rounds. He replied the watch didn't stop at three minutes. Anson laughed so much at this he toppled over back into the trees.

Spalding's Plan Fell Through.

Anson was called into A. G. Spalding's office once and there Spalding told him of a plan to enlist the aid of a citizens' committee for a stupendous testimonial for the old player. Anson said that when a man as healthy as he was needed charity, he would let Spalding know. He slammed the door and walked out and that was the end of the testimonial.

In the latter days of the big infield, Ed Williamson, himself a tall, heavy shortstop, with a wonderful arm, would delay his throw until the runner was within a few steps of first and then let the ball go. The throw would be five inches or so from the ground, almost at Anson's feet. Anson, because he wore a small fielder's glove, could not handle these, but dropped them at his feet and the runner would be safe. That was the shortstop's way of teasing the big fellow. He and Anson had been suitors for the hand of the woman who chose Anson.

Anson opened a second-floor billiard hall in Madison street where the La Salle Theater now is. It was a well lighted room with high ceiling, but somehow did not draw the players. The place possibly was too lonesome. At any rate it did not pay. Anson would have done better to have opened his hall in New York, for he was always more highly regarded as a player in cities other than his home town, where he had remained too long as an exhibitor.

Ban Johnson's Tribute.

Anson was a good shot with the gun and in 1886-87 he could be found with a group of sportsmen of the day that included W. W. MacFarlane, Abner Price, George Kleinnan, Abe Kleinnan, Charles Gannon, Frank Willard, Lem Willard, Bob Watson, Ben Fobeli and W. P. Mussey. They shot at live pigeons at Watson's Park in Burnside.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, was one of Anson's greatest admirers. Johnson was a sport writer in Cincinnati in the days when Anson was at the zenith of his career as a batting and fielding first baseman.

"He was a wonderful ballplayer and a great man in every way," Johnson said. "None of the present-day first sackers excels Anson in any way, and most of them are far inferior to 'Cap' as a baserunner. The game was placed on a high basis by Anson and his players. Too much credit cannot be given him."

Comiskey's Appraisement.

"'Pop,' as we called him, was an idol to us fellows in those days," Gleason remarked today. "Whenever Anson was discussed among the ballplayers of my time we used to think that to equal Anson's ability would just about satisfy us for the rest of our lives. 'Pop' always had a good word for the youngsters and delighted in trying to teach the raw recruit the finer points of the game in his spare moments."

STARS INDICATE HARDING MAY GO TO GENOA, SAYS ITALIAN ASTRONOMER

By the Associated Press.

GENOA, April 15.

WHEN the economic conference opened, the poetically inclined discerned the spirit of Columbus hovering near. Now, even the stars themselves are helping shape its destinies, if Signor Tomba, the Italian astronomer, is to be believed. Tomba, now in Genoa, claims particular distinction because when Pope Benedict died he prophesied that Cardinal Ratti would be the next Pope. Here are some of his conference prophecies.

One of the French delegates, he says the stars tell him, soon will fall ill.

America will participate in the conference before it is over. Indeed, it is probable that President Harding himself will come over, and for his arrival the conference may be prolonged 60 days.

Tomba also says he has celestial revelations on several important subjects concerning the conference, but that he cannot divulge them because they would betray state secrets.

BRITAIN PAYS $19,672,500 AS SECOND PORTION OF DEBT

Further Installment of $12,200,000 on $122,000,000 Obligation Is Due May 15.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Payment of $19,672,500 by Great Britain as the second installment on the debt of $122,000,000 created by that Government's purchase of silver during the war was reported to the Treasury today by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. The payment consisted of $18,300,000 of principal and $1,372,500 of interest. A further installment of $12,200,000 on the debt is due May 15, which will cut Great Britain's debt in half.

Under the arrangements for payment by Great Britain on the silver purchases, the debt will be liquidated in May, 1924, these payments being entirely apart from the $5,000,000,000 of war loans due to the United States from Great Britain.

RUSSIANS TOLD TO ANSWER YES OR NO TO ALLIED DEMANDS

The allied leaders explained that the pre-war debts were not due primarily to governments, but individuals. They insisted that no Government had the right to wipe out the claims of foreign individuals.

In discussing the second point, war debts, the allies said this was something where the Governments were in a position to negotiate. They did not want to be unreasonable, because they realized the appalling state of Russia and did not desire to press Russia unduly. But the signature of the Russian Government must be respected.

On the third point, restitution of private property, the allied leaders admitted that this would be accompanied by great difficulties; nevertheless they must insist on the principle. The Russians emphasized the difficulties growing out of the fact that everything in Russia is nationalized. They asked how it was possible to restore a mine now under water.

Gold Standard Plan.

Restoration of an effective gold monetary standard and the strict balancing of budgets without resort to the issuance of surplus paper currency or bank credits are understood to be among the important recommendations being examined by the financial subcommission of the economic conference. The plan under consideration, while not yet given out for publication officially, is understood to include the following:

The essential requisite for the economic reconstruction of Europe is the achievement by each country of stability in the value of its currency. The banks, especially those authorized to issue a currency, should be free from political pressure. Countries lacking such a bank should establish one. A permanent association for co-operation among the central banks, even outside of Europe, should co-ordinate their policies without hampering their freedom.

Proposals Suggested.

An early meeting of representatives of the central banks is suggested in order to carry out this recommendation. It is desirable, it is understood the subcommission recommends, that all European currencies be based on a common standard, agreeing at present to adopt gold as the only common standard. An international monetary convention aiming at control of the power of gold, which otherwise might result from simultaneous efforts of a number of countries to secure metallic reserves, also is suggested.

The following proposals are suggested for submission for the consideration of the proposed meeting of representatives of central banks:

The Governments declare the restoration of an effective gold standard is their ultimate object. Each Government, in order to gain effective control of its currency, must meet its annual expenditures without resorting to the creation of paper money or bank credits. As soon as economic circumstances permit, the Governments must determine and fix the gold value of their respective monetary units, which must be made effective in the free market. Governments must issue additional paper money only against equal additions to their reserves of approved assets at gold centers.

Each country would be responsible to the convention for maintaining the international value of its currency at par, but would be left entirely free to devise and apply means for doing this, whether through regulation of credit by the central banks or otherwise.

Need of Railroad in Siberia.

The United States and Japan know full well the necessity for reopening the transsiberian railroad to world traffic, declared Ambassador Hayashi, head of the Japanese delegation to the economic conference, today in an interview with the Associated Press correspondent.

"While we may not definitely settle this vital matter at the Genoa conference," he added, "it stands forth as one of the practical issues of special concern to the American republic and the Japanese empire."

Lloyd George Reports Progress.

A distinct advance toward settlement of the Russian question was registered by the economic conference today, conference leaders declared.

Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain expressed this view in one of his characteristic figurative utterances, saying:

"We are building a bridge across the stream. We have driven some of the piles. We are now in the deepest part of the current, and are driving them into the mud at the bottom. Although the bridge is not yet above water, the piles are firmly fixed and we are still hammering at them."

The Russians, it became known today, have presented concrete financial proposals, in which they say they are in perfect accord with the allies over the urgent necessity of establishing a monetary basis in all countries, putting an end to "feudalism," which they declare is reigning especially in the matter of exchanges.

The Russians also propose an international monetary convention whose object would be to fix a stable ratio between the currencies of the various states. They conclude their proposals by emphasizing Russia's urgent need of being granted a loan in order to stabilize its currency.

Lloyd George, in discussing the situation with the Associated Press correspondent, said capitalism, which had been expected to be the chief stumbling block in effecting an agreement with the Russians, had been scarcely touched at all and that apparently this would be greatly overshadowed by financial problems.

Rathenau States Satisfaction.

Dr. Walter Rathenau, the German delegate, expressed satisfaction today with the good feeling displayed at the conference; it indicated that the European countries were again thinking of themselves as parts of Europe as a whole rather than as friends or enemies of certain countries and members of certain alliances, he said.

Settlement of the Russian problem, in his opinion, would help the reconstruction of Europe, but he called attention to the fact that [illegible]500,000 men were under arms in Europe now, as against 3,500,000 before the war, and that Europe was entangled in a chain of debts, which the conference could not untangle while pledged not to touch land disarmament and reparations.

Trotzky in Statement Says Russia Is Ready to Disarm.

MOSCOW, April 15.—Leon Trotzky, the Soviet War Minister, in an order to the army and navy issued last night, quoting Foreign Minister Chitcherin's disarmament proposals at Genoa and the refusal of Vice-Premier Barthou of France to permit their consideration, declares that Russia is prepared to disarm and sincerely desires peace.

The War Minister expresses the hope that the nations and peoples of Europe will compel the bourgeoisie to listen attentively to Russia's proposals. Meanwhile, however, every Soviet soldier must stand at his post fully ready for any eventualities, he says.

BEARDSTOWN FLOOD SPREADS; WATER 5 FEET DEEP ON SOME OF PAVED STREETS

Fifty Business Buildings Are Under Water and Most of Churches Are Affected—Row Boats in Streets.

By Long Distance Telephone to the Post-Dispatch.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., April 15.—The swollen Illinois river tonight was entering the East End, the one section of town which thus far has been free from the flood. The breaking of a levee which had protected this district exposed it still further to the flood.

The East End has furnished housing space for many families from the lower part of town, and if this section also is inundated, the problem of accommodations for the nearly 7500 inhabitants of Beardstown will become much more serious.

Five Feet of Water on Paved Streets

Water is five feet deep on some of the paved streets, and the public square, a parked space which stands out of the water, is surrounded by streets under two feet of water. The square is being used as headquarters for rowboats. At one corner of the square is the old courthouse where Abraham Lincoln tried the famous Armstrong case, obtaining his client's acquittal of a murder charge by producing an almanac to prove that there was no moon, at a time when a witness had sworn that he saw the murder by moonlight.

One of the substantial brick buildings which has been damaged by "settling," through the effect of the quicksand under building foundations, is the McCarthy-Charles building, a two-story structure at Third and State streets, containing a drug store and a bakery.

This and other buildings have "settled" to an extent which has thrown their doorways out of plumb and has caused the breaking of windows. The McCarthy-Charles building is still being occupied, though the occupants can leave by rowboat at any time they may wish to.

Twelve business houses are still out of water, while the rest, about 50 establishments in all, are under water, and have moved their stocks to upper floors. The stocks of grocery stores are holding out well thus far, and rules have been established against selling more than a certain amount of any staple to one person.

Water Enters Nine Churches.

Four churches have their main floors under water. Five others have water in their basements, and are surrounded by water. The three remaining churches, which are comparatively small ones, and are in the East End, are being used for housing refugees from the lower districts.

In the Beard School, which is well out of the water, the Salvation Army is running an emergency hospital, a provision depot for refugees and a shelter and first aid headquarters. The workers of the Salvation Army are also going about the flooded area in boats, and distributing provisions and doughnuts fried in overseas fashion.

The only casualty thus far, which was an indirect result of the flood, was in the case of a baby girl 18 months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cordell McDaniel. The McDaniels had to leave their home, and moved into a tent, where they installed a stove. The child fell against the stove and was seriously burned.

The town still had electric light and power tonight although the power house is on a level 5 feet below the water. An improvised levee of sandbags has been built around the power plant, and five pumps are at work, keeping the water out.

Moving picture shows are under water and so have closed. Yesterday, in some pool halls, men were walking about the pool tables in hip boots, in 12 to 20 inches of water, attempting fancy shots.

The waterworks is pumping water and the State sanitary engineers have pronounced the supply suitable for use without boiling.

An edition of the Illinois Star, a local daily, 9 by 12 inches, was issued today, being printed on a job press in a room with 6 inches of water on the floor.

Boat Service Main Reliance.

The Burlington Railroad continues to attempt to get trains here from the South. The B. & O., from Springfield, and the Burlington to the north of here, have abandoned service. The town's principal reliance, for the next few days, will be on boat service from Peoria. This, it is believed, will prevent any danger that the food supply may become exhausted.

The demand for hip boots continues active here today, though the streets where the wearers of such boots can go safely are becoming few. The sinking of sidewalks and pavements on some thoroughfares is attributed to quicksand beneath, and this has added to the apprehension.

Any unnecessary rowboat traffic in the business section is being discouraged, as the owners are complaining that the waves created by the craft make conditions worse. Policemen patrolled the streets in boats tonight, questioning rowers and directing the landing of all those who had no definite errand.

On a few streets automobiles still run through shallow water. On most of the streets the water would quickly kill an engine, and drivers have avoided such a mishap.

RICH FARMING LAND NORTH OF CITY FLOODED

Loyal feeds the pig on the rear porch. The animals, in the several rooms, walk about gingerly as if afraid they will go through the flooring.

"Oh, it could be worse," Loyal says. "The thing that disturbs me most is, that when I'm fast asleep at night, one of the mules will start braying and it wakes one with a start. I'm getting used to it, though."

Other farmers living near Loyal have placed their livestock in granaries or other buildings which are out of water. Herman Saeger has his stock in the granary, into which he had to erect improvised barriers, to keep the animals out of the grain stored there.

Ernst Bangert, who lives near Loyal, has not removed his family to the higher ground. The home is almost within a stone's throw of the raging Missouri flood, and, from the porch of the home, the swishing of the current can be heard. The home is surrounded by water. Through the barnyard and out through the field a rapid current runs. Bangert's wife and one of his three young children are convalescing from influenza. There is no telephone in the house, the family is without a rowboat and Bangert has been unable to get medicine for the members of his family since last Thursday.

Bangert was shooting sparrows from the side of his barn when a reporter for the Post-Dispatch arrived in a boat. A 16-year-old son, Ernst Jr., had just caught a large fish in the yard on a pitchfork.

"Those sparrows get up there on the side of the barn and pull wheat I have stored in the loft out of the knotholes," Bangert said, as the reporter stepped from the boat on to a small strip of ground that had not bee inundated.

"Oh, I don't think there's any real danger," Bangert said. "The river won't come up much higher, and as long as it stays where it is now, we are safe."

The children did not seem to mind the water around them. One of them played in a part of the yard about 10 feet square that was out of water and another peered out a window. The reporter and the man who rowed the boat were the first persons Bangert and his family had seen, outside their immediate circle, for several days.

Homes Surrounded by Water.

On other farms in the district the farmhouses and barns are on slight knolls that keep them out of the water. Without exception the homes in the district are surrounded by water, however, and one can row over acre after acre of crop-producing land.

Around the homes which stand out of the water, cows, horses, mules and pigs saunter up and down narrow ridges of ground, and on grape arbors, fences and roof tops, chickens perch disconsolately.

Numbers of wild ducks are flying over the district and they can be seen frequently hob-nobbing with tame ducks in the barnyards. Fish splash occasionally in the water-covered garden plots, as they extricate themselves from the meshes formed by the growing plants.

Along the edge of the quiet backwaters, where the fish go in numbers, boys and men are "gigging" them. At points where the flood crosses roads, forming a slight break in the water, boys stand with seines stretched and the fish are swept into them.

Up on the hills adjacent to the flooded territory are homes where most of the farmers driven out by the flood have gone. A small barn in the rear of St. Peter's Evangelical Church, where the farmers have kept rigs on Sunday while attending services, is used to shelter animals from the inundated area.

The farmlands in the bottoms are considered among the most fertile in Missouri. Some of the more optimistic farmers, in discussing the flood yesterday, pointed out that when the river recedes it will leave a rich layer of alluvial soil which will bring forth more abundant crops.

More Than 5000 Acres Flooded.

More than 5000 acres have been flooded. The district extends from the Burlington Railroad bridge across the Missouri River almost to the Riverview Club and from the Riverview drive to the Mississippi River.

The farmers who still occupy their homes are getting their tractors "tuned up" and farm implements in shape to do intensive work after the water subsides.

En route to the district, out the Riverview drive, one sees the Mississippi River, to the east, at a stage that extends almost to the tracks of the Municipal street car line.

All along the road "old-timers" are found who impressively point out the places, a few feet higher up, which the flood reached in 1903.

FLOOD OR NO FLOOD, MILKIN' TIME IS MILKIN' TIME TO HIM

Illinois Farmer Rows Skiff Under Marooned Cow and Proceeds With Evening Chore.

A Post-Dispatch reporter who has returned to St. Louis from flooded districts long the Illinois Central Railroad saw an odd sight from a train near New Athens, Ill., about 32 miles southeast of St. Louis, late Friday afternoon.

It was where the banks of the Okaw River are when the water is at normal stage. These banks have been obliterated and the water has spread over a large area of low-lying farm land.

In this waste of water was one high spot, a little knoll of green sloping off gradually into the water. On this knoll was a cow. The only other living creature visible was a farmer. The farmer was in a flat-bottomed skiff which he had maneuvered so that its bow was grounded fairly under the cow. On the bow seat was a bucket. The farmer, kneeling in the skiff, was milking the cow.

Army Engineers to Look Into Flood Problem.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Investigation by army engineers of conditions in the flooded areas of Illinois to determine what steps may be taken to prevent a recurrence of the floods at Beardstown and other points along the Illinois River is to begin soon, according to announcement today by Representative Shaw, Republican, of Illinois.

The army engineers will be sent from one of the nearby posts, according to Shaw and will make a survey of the river at points where the dikeage has failed to withstand the strain of this spring's floods.

Warnings Against Third Flood Stage Are Issued.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 15.—Heavy rains in the water sheds of the upper tributaries of the Mississippi during the past 36 hours, today caused United States Weather Bureau officials to issue warnings that a third stage of high water in the central and lower reaches of the Mississippi River must be expected, and that the flood period would be prolonged into May in the central portions, and until the latter part of next month in the lower river.

The certainty of a long fight to hold back the flood spurred United States and levee board engineers to renew efforts to strengthen the embankments on both sides of the waterway from Cairo southward. Reports tonight that the levees at all points south of Cairo are holding safely, but extra forces of workmen have been set to work repairing and reinforcing all weak points and topping low places with sandbags and barricades of heavy timbers in anticipation of the rise, the first swell of which reached Memphis today.

To Reach Mississippi Next Week.

Reports from all points south of St. Louis say the river is rising slowly, and a third rise is now coming down both the Ohio and Missouri, with heavy rains reported in the watersheds of the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers. The Wabash is above flood stage and is pouring a heavy volume of water into the Ohio which will reach the Mississippi early next week.

At Helena, Ark., today the Mississippi was stationary, but the St. Francis, White and Arkansas Rivers are again rising, preventing the Mississippi flood waters between Helena and Arkansas City from passing to the lower river.

75,000 Acres Near Cairo in Danger.

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Ill., April 15.—Upon the strength of a short cross levee near Ware, 45 miles north of this city, rested tonight the fate of 75,000 acres of the richest farm lands in Union and Alexander counties, already endangered by a 200-foot break in the levee made by the swollen Mississippi two miles south of Aldridge this morning.

Though the situation is serious, no immediate danger is feared, if enough material and labor can be supplied to reinforce the threatened places in the levee. The break today occurred near the mouth of the Big Muddy Creek in Jackson County, where 5000 acres of rich farm lands are threatened with inundation.

The Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific railroads have hauled large loads of sand and brought laborers in order to save the levees and the roadbeds of their tracks. At Gale, a force of men reinforced the levee and the danger of a break is reported to have been removed.

Representatives of the Salvation Army visited the threatened districts, as did representatives of the Red Cross, but found no wants. Army tents to be used by families who had to leave the lowlands, arrived here tonight and will be sent to the districts inundated by the flood.

RADIO FUTURE FACTOR IN AVIATION, FLIER SAYS

Maj. A. B. Lambert Asserts Further Progress in Air Depends on Development of New Power.

That further progress in aviation depends upon greater proportionate progress in radio was asserted last night by Maj. A. B. Lambert, former commander of Kelley Field, Texas, and an aeronaut and aviator of international note, in an address broadcast from Radio station K S D of the Post-Dispatch.

"There must be a limit to aviation," he declared, "and that limit is almost in sight, especially as to altitude and speed. Further progress in aviation depends upon the production of power—and I am firmly convinced that this power is to be created and developed by the use of radio or its principles."

Maj. Lambert's subject was the relation of radio and aviation, and he showed how the value of the latter in time of war is greatly dependent upon the success of the former, and cited the now famous case of the British knowledge of the exact minute of the departure of the German grand fleet from its base for the final sortie which resulted so disastrously to the Germans, as the greatest achievement of radio up to the present. The same power which made this possible, will, he believes, enable the world to use the source of radio for power and to make use of this power long before the earth's supply of coal is exhausted.

He described the principles on which the talk he was giving reached his hundreds or hearers, and showed how these principles may be applied to greater and more far-reaching and important achievements than the simple broadcasting of speeches and songs. In concluding he warmly commended the Post-Dispatch for the excellent service of its radio station.

Jack Ryan, St. Louis raconteur, made the countryside laugh for about 15 minutes with some of his best stories, and a program of music, presented by Miss Louise Barthel, soprano, and John A. Rohan, baritone, led to a number of requests for additional numbers by these artists.

Monday night the use of radio in the transport service during the war will be discussed by H. L. Leeb, radio operator on army transports, and there will be two other addresses. Col. Frank G. Jonah, chief engineer of the Frisco Railroad and commander of the Twelfth Engineers overseas, will talk on unemployment, and E. L. Endicott, a blind lawyer, will tell how the blind of Missouri have become self-supporting. A program of music will be presented by the Spencer orchestra.

JOFFRE GUEST AT RECEPTION AT PERSHING'S HOME AT LINCOLN

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 15.—Marshal Joffre, guest of the Nebraska Capitol a few hours today, took part in ground-breaking exercises for the new $5,000,000 capitol building, placed a wreath on the Lincoln statue here and was guest at a reception held at the home of Gen. John J. Pershing.

Gen. Pershing's two sisters and his son, Warren, were the hosts, the Marshal being accompanied by Mme. Joffre, their daughter, Germaine, and other members of the noted French soldier's party.

Before leaving for the East Marshal Joffre asked the Associated Press to make the following announcement:

"Marshal Joffre desired to make a stop at Lincoln because it is the home of Gen. Pershing. The arrangements for the day were perfect, and the Marshal is well pleased."

RUTH KELSO WINS FIRST AUTO SAFETY TROPHY

Thirty-six masked women parked their automobiles and assembled on Lindell boulevard west of the Jefferson Memorial yesterday afternoon where their pictures were taken by newspaper and moving picture photographers previous to the safe driving contest for women graduates of the traffic school of the Safety Council.

It had been announced that the masks, which included black dominoes, silk handkerchiefs and veils, more or less effective for concealing identity, would be worn during the contest, so that the judges, two local automobile manufacturers and the local manager of an oil company, would not be prejudiced. The masks were uncomfortable or inconvenient or something—certainly not undecorative—anyway, they weren't worn during the trials. Newspapers and cloth wrapped around license plates were not removed.

How Tests Were Made.

Large wooden boxes were placed on Lindell between De Baliviere and Skinker road, which section was closed for the event, as hazards for the drivers, in an erratic zigzag line that resembled the position of furniture in a set for "Dr. Caligari's Cabinet" or the trees in a fresco after the Egyptian futuristic school of the favorite fairway of Rameses II.

The tests, consisting of circling and backing among these boxes, were said to show driving ability in everything from shifting gears in traffic to parking across the street from the American or Shubert-Jefferson at 8:15 p. m. or driving into a nine-foot garage from a 15-foot alley.

This garage, an arrangement of boxes near the south curb, fussed most of the women, and only a half dozen maneuvered into it without touching the "walls." Police Judge Mix, locally well-known for bench lectures on traffic rules and safe driving, was a spectator at this point, and admonished many of the drivers to "Stick out your hand" in compliance with traffic laws, as they made the turn west in Lindell from the garage.

Opinion of Judge Mix.

"The Safety Council ought to hold a contest like this for men drivers," he remarked. "If some of these smart-alex drivers who do tricks on a straightaway tried to make that turn and knocked over a few boxes it would take a lot of conceit—and a lot of public menace—out of them."

The loving cup for the first event, in which seven members of the Safety Council competed, was awarded to Miss Ruth Kelso, 5911 Kingsbury boulevard. Miss Kelso is a member of the Washington University chapter of the Delta Gamma Sorority and a graduate of the Leland Powers School of Expression in Boston, and furthermore has been driving since September. Her "mask" was a heavy green veil bearing a white cross, designed after the Safety Council emblem.

Five of the 29 contestants in the second event, open to all graduates of the school, were tied for the prize. It was announced that the tie will be settled in a similar contest next Saturday.

Will Acknowledge Bonus Papers.

Bonus applications will be acknowledged free of charge for former service men who bring them to the courts of Justice of the Peace Rice, 1109 Chouteau avenue, by Joseph J. Mestres, clerk of the court and a notary public, Mestres announces in a letter to the Post-Dispatch.

WIVES AND CHILDREN OF PRISONERS PARADE

Those Who Will Go to Washington to Ask for Men's Release Carry Banners.

The five mothers and 16 children assembled in St. Louis as the nucleus of the "Children's Crusade for Amnesty" paraded along Olive Street from Broadway to Twelfth street yesterday afternoon carrying banners touching their mission, which is a journey to Washington to beseech President Harding to release their husbands and fathers serving penitentiary sentences for violations of the espionage act during the war.

The parade moved slowly, for some of the children could just toddle along. The youngest is three years, born after her father was sent away. The oldest is 18.

Four children of James Danley, who resided at Paragould, Ark., and whose mother died after their father's conviction, carried a sign: "Our Mother Died of a Broken Heart." Other of the banners were: "Is the Constitution Dead?", "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," "I Haven't Seen My Daddy for Four Years," "Debs Is Free, Why Not My Daddy?" "Shall Free Speech Be Denied?"

Mayor Kiel greeted the marchers at the city hall and Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, who will lead the crusade to Washington, said that the Mayor promised to send a telegram urging President Harding to listen to the appeal. The demonstration is in behalf not only of the husbands and fathers of the crusaders, but also of 113 other so-called political prisoners.

A public meeting will be held in Sheldon Memorial tonight as a farewell to the crusaders, who will depart tomorrow morning at 8:35 o'clock. Representatives of the Christian ministers and of the Jewish rabbis, as well as some one in the city government, have been asked to make speeches. Mrs. O'Hare will talk, as will one of the wives in the crusade, Mrs. Stanley Clark of Dallas, Tex., whose husband, an attorney, is serving a 10-year sentence.

The first stop of the crusaders will be Terre Haute, Ind., where Eugene Debs, recently released from Atlanta penitentiary, will be visited. The crusaders then will visit in succession Indianapolis, Dayton, Cincinnati, Springfield, O., Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Schenectady, New York City, Philadelphia and Baltimore. They will be joined by other women and children en route until the number that will march up to the White House is expected to reach 40—16 women and 24 children. The day planned for arrival in Washington is April 29.

THREE BARGES ARRIVE WITH STEEL FROM PITTSBURG

2800 Tons of Pipe and Steel in Cargo Assigned to St. Louis Firms.

Three barges bearing 2800 tons of steel pipe and structural steel were docked in St. Louis yesterday after being towed from Pittsburg, the second arrival of what the Jones & Laughlin Co. of Pittsburg has announced as regular river service for Western customers.

The two left Pittsburg on April 3 under power of one of the company's own towboats. The three barges destined for St. Louis were delivered to the Government River Service at the mouth of the Ohio.

The pipe is for the Frick-Reed Supply Co. and the structural steel for the St. Louis Structural Steel Co. of East St. Louis and Stupp Bros. Bridge and Iron Co.

FLOCKS OF STOLEN AUTOMOBILES PASSED THROUGH COHEN'S PLACE

Former Employe of East St. Louis Man to Whom Parole Has Been Denied Says He Changed Numbers on Dozens of Machines.

POLICE CHIEF SAYS COHEN DUPED HIM

Mulconnery Tells of Receiving Discount on "Gas" and Presents of Table Delicacies From Man Now in Leavenworth—Wrote Letter in His Behalf.

Following the recent action of the Department of Justice in refusing, notwithstanding a strong appeal by friends and the exercise of political influence, to approve a pardon for Samuel S. Cohen, East St. Louis automobile tire dealer, who is serving five years at Leavenworth for having in his possesison stolen hides, an investigation by a Post-Dispatch reporter has disclosed that traffic in stolen automobiles passed through Cohen's place on a scale bigger than has ever been encountered by Federal agents.

The investigation revealed that 30 or more automobiles stolen in St. Louis and traced through Cohen's place have been recovered by St. Louis detectives and agents of the Department of Justice and restored to their owners, while about 35 other cars are being sought through the same channel.

Paul Colestock of East St. Louis, automobile mechanic formerly employed by Cohen, who is a Federal prisoner in the St. Louis jail, charged with possession of an automobile in violation of the Dyer act, confessed to a Post-Dispatch reporter and Government agents that he, while in the employ of Cohen, changed numbers and destroyed identification marks on scores of automobiles in the last year, which Cohen afterwards sold. Cohen is charged in a Federal warrant issued in St. Louis with violation of the Dyer act in connection with interstate traffic in stolen automobiles.

Two Officials Got Cars at Cohen's.

Among those who bought or exchanged cars at Cohen's were an East St. Louis detective and a minor official of that city who now are told by James J. McLaughlin of the Department of Justice that the cars they are driving bear changed serial numbers.

Some of the automobiles, numbers on which were changed by Colestock, were recovered from dealers in St. Louis, who asserted they had been duped and did not know the cars had been stolen.

Three men with police records, two of whom are in custody, are said to have done most of the actual stealing. They were expert at starting automobiles without keys, particularly Ford cars, and took them to Cohen, where the numbers were changed and identification marks obliterated. The third man of this trio is being sought as the leader and key to the whole situation. Startling disclosures in wholesale automobile theft are promised when he is arrested.

Colestock said he had changed the engine numbers and obliterated identification marks on as many as 15 automobiles in one day for Cohen, and it was largely upon information supplied by him that the recovery of at least 20 of the cars that passed through Cohen's place was made possible. It will be remembered that it was in the Cohen case that a novel method of identifying stolen closed automobiles came to public attention last February, when Cohen was arrested by St. Louis detectives. In the window slots of several stolen Fords the detectives found identifying data, such as fragments of a receipted bill, prescription blanks and a tennis permit, carelessly dropped there by the owners.

How Cohen Tricked Thieves.

Colestock in his confession gave an example of the way he says Cohen worked to obtain stolen property from thieves without paying for it, and at the same time curry favor with the East St. Louis police.

"A few months ago," he related, "a negro came to Cohen's store with 20 tires he said he had stolen from a freight car. Cohen offered to buy the tires if the negro would get a second load. The negro agreed and Cohen sent his chauffeur with the negro, first advising him by what route to return. He put the 20 tires in the racks and then telephoned the police that a negro had offered to bring some stolen tires to his place, informing the officers that he had sent his chauffeur along and by what route they would return, so the detectives could pick up the negro and the second load of tires before reaching Cohen's place. This the detectives did, and Cohen kept the first load of tires, of which the negro did not tell.

"On another occasion a negro brought 10 tires that he said he had stolen from a garage. Cohen took them and sent him back for a second lot, remarking that 10 were not enough to take a chance with. When the negro had gone, Cohen telephoned the police to send two detectives to secret themselves near his place and rush in when they saw a card advertising a charity bazar removed from the show window.

"When the negro returned with the second lot of tires, Cohen began dickering with him for a price and while doing so casually remarked to me, 'Colestock, take that card out of the show window and don't let anyone else put advertising cards there.'

"A moment after I removed the card, Detectives Bishop and Schrader rushed in and made the pinch. Cohen affected more surprise than the negro. Cohen kept both lots of tires, which were good ones, and sent the police 13 odd sized tires that had been on hand for a long time."

Police Chief Says Cohen Duped Him.

William J. Mulconnery, Chief of Police of East St. Louis, who recently wrote a letter to the Department of Justice recommending clemency for Cohen and who issued a permit to Cohen to carry a revolver after his conviction in the stolen hide case, expressed amazement at the disclosures of Cohen's traffic in stolen automobiles. Chief Mulconnery freely discussed his impressions of Cohen, and declared he had always assumed that Cohen was a straightforward business man. The Chief volunteered the information that he had patronized Cohen's filling station and tire store, as Cohen had made him attractive prices.

"I always knew Cohen to be shrewd," said Chief Mulconnery, "but never suspected him of being crooked. You can imagine my amazement that he was a first-rate thief and putting it over us all the time.

"No one in my position would have suspected Sam Cohen of being wrong. He was in the station several times a day, and crooks don't usually hang around police stations. Why, he would run into my office with some merry remark or jest, and when I didn't see him in my office, I'd run into him out at the desk or over in the police garage. He just impressed me as being a big, happy, good-hearted fellow, always eager to favor somebody.

Chief "Sees His Racket Now."

"I see his racket now, but I was completely disarmed by many things he did, presumably to aid the police. One day, I recall, he came in and said he had seen an abandoned Ford chassis out on the Caseyville road. We thanked him for the tip and sent out there detectives, who had trouble locating the chassis, it being some distance off the road, in a field. I thought it odd at the time that Cohen would see that chasis by chance in passing along the road, when the detectives, who knew what they were looking for, had difficulty in locating it, but I did not accuse Cohen of anything. Later my suspicion was partially confirmed when I learned that the chassis had been identified as a coupe chassis, and subsequently, that one of Cohen's men had talked about having changed a coupe body to a touring car chassis for Cohen.

"I then called Sam in and said: 'Now, look here, Sam, are you trying to put anything over on me?' And he answered, with a solemn oath, that he was going straight. He was so earnest that I was convinced and took his word for it.

"I bought oil and gas at his filling station before he sold the station last November, and after he sold it he requested me to continue my patronage with his successor, explaining that he wanted the new owner to do well. Incidentally, he promised to give me a discount of a cent or two on a gallon of gas, explaining that he would have the new owner the station send the bills to him and he would collect from me. After that, Cohen would drop in about once a month with the bills for gas and I would say, 'Well, Sam, how much is it,' and when he told me, I would pay him cash. He never gave me any oil or gas free of charge, nor anything else, except, perhaps, on Thanksgiving or Christmas or other special occasion, good things to eat would come out to my house that I suspected Sam of sending.

"He was always accommodating. I once borrowed a Ford touring car for a day's hunting trip, and on another occasion borrowed a Hudson for a quick trip to Belleville. These instances account for Colestock's statement that I had ridden in Cohen's cars.

How Leber Got Free Gasoline.

"We have recovered stolen automobiles from time to time from Cohen's place, but always upon information from Cohen himself, so what could we do but believe in the man? I'll tell the world, he put one over on me."

Fred Leber, City Commissioner of Public Health and Safety, who is the elected commissioner in charge of the Police Department, was in the room while Chief Mulconnery was speaking, and he also said he had never suspected Cohen of violating the law.

"I saw him frequently," said Leber, "and he appeared always to be ready to turn up a crook. He had a tire business that was largely patronized, because of attractive prices. He advertised cut rate prices and said it was his motto never to fail to take a profit.

"I bought gas at his station and paid for it, but one night, I recall, I put in 10 gallons and the youth in charge refused the money and said he would charge it. A few days later I saw Cohen and told him I wanted to pay him for that gas, but he just waved me away and said: 'Call it a gift and forget it.' I believed in his honesty and sincerity to such an extent that I probably would have written a letter recommending clemency for him, as the Chief did, had he asked me to do so."

Leber said the East St. Louis police found an abandoned Hudson touring car on the streets about 15 months ago, and failing to locate the owner, he ordered it put in good condition to be used in emergencies. He said he drove the car occasionally during the last year and at one time paid Colestock $31 of his own money to make some repairs on it.

This car recently was discovered by St. Louis Detectives in the East St. Louis police garage, and, having been stolen from this city, was taken by the insurance company that paid the theft insurance to the owner. Chief of Detectives Nevill of East St. Louis said his department had never received a report of that car having been stolen.

Detective Bishop's Car.

City Detective Henry C. Bishop of East St. Louis drives a Ford sedan that he obtained in a trade of a Ford touring car to Cohen. Federal agents say this car has a changed number, but Bishop denies this and refused to tell a Post-Dispatch reporter how he came in possession of the car.

Chief of Detectives Nevill said Detective Bishop had been driving the touring car, which had been found abandoned on the streets of East St. Louis, and traded the touring car, after having it repaired at his own expense, for the sedan. Chief Nevill said Cohen owed Detective Bishop some money that Cohen had offered as a reward for stolen tires that Bishop recovered for him, and that this was probably the reason why Cohen accepted the touring car in trade for the sedan.

H. LeRoy Browning, corporation counsel of East St. Louis, drives a ford coupe and Federal agents have informed him that it bears a changed number. Browning said he bought the car from Cohen, and did not know the number had been changed.

Why Police Exacted Statement.

Chief of Police Mulconnery's explanation of why he exacted a signed statement from Colestock and LaBlance, a copy of which he voluntarily gave to the Post-Dispatch for publication and which appears in another column, follows:

"We had heard that Colestock and LaBlance had been taken across the river by the Federal authorities," said Chief Mulconnery, "and we informed the Department of Justice that we also wanted the men, but they did not turn them over to us. They just released them, and that night we had them picked up. We wanted to know what they told the Federal authorities about stolen automobiles and about us, because we heard rumors that they went over there and told a lot of stuff. We demanded that statement from them to protect ourselves; we were entitled to know what was going on.

"Colestock and LaBlance told us the Federal authorities made them tell a lot of stuff and kept asking them questions that were true, and they asked me if they had to go back across the river. I advised them of their legal rights and told them they didn't have to talk to anyone if they didn't care to do so, except in court. We used no force against them."

Prisoner's Version.

Colestock told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he and LaBlance, after making confessions to the Federal authorities, were arrested that same night in East St. Louis and threatened by Chief Mulconnery with a beating unless they made a statement, saying they did not know of any connection between the police department and Cohen's traffic in stolen automobiles.

A clerk wrote the statement, Colestock explained, and he and LaBlance signed it without reading it.

"Why should we take a trimming?" asked Colestock. "We would have signed anything under the circumstances. The Chief was pretty sore at us."

Cohen Employes' Statement to East St. Louis Police as to What He Had Told Federal Authorities

E. St. Louis, Ill., April 8, 1922

To Whom It May Concern:

We, Clayton La Blance and Paul Colestock, make the following statement jointly, on our own free will and without promise of reward, and know that same may be used against us in any court proceedings.

We were in St. Louis at the Dept. of Justice Federal Bldg. & while there the authorities questioned us about stolen automobiles in E. St. Louis Ills. & Vicinity.

They ask us if we drove any cars (stolen) from Missouri to Illinois & We told them we did not not, they then ask us who did steal any automobiles & we told them & gave the following names * * * * of St. Louis, Mo. and Tony the Whop & a man we know as Irish, also two men from Madison Ills. but we do not know their names.

Automobile bodies were changed from one car to another in Sam Cohen's place 10th & State St. E. St. Louis, Ills.

The Federal authorities in St. Louis Mo. ask us about the numbers of the E. St. Louis Police Dept. as to whether or not * * * * * knew that Cohen was stealing automobiles and we told them we did not know. * * *

They then ask us if Cohen gave the Chief of Police Wm. J. Mulconnery any presents and we told them "Yes" that we took some stuff which was vegetables from Cohen's place to Chief Mulconnery's house.

They also ask us if Chief Wm. J. Mulconnery, ever used any of Cohens automobiles and told them "Yes."

They ask us if Bishop and Schrader & the Chief ever got any gasoline oil & tires & we told them "Yes" and they then ask us if they paid for these articles & we told them we did not know—we told them that Cohen delivered tires to the City Comptroller's office and we received a receipted bill for them and on one occasion we received two checks from the City Comptroller's office for Cohen & signed for them.

They ask us if Bishop & Schrader got a car from Cohen & we told them they got a Ford Sedan, and they ask us if this was a stolen car and we told them we did not know. We told them that Bishop & Schrader left a Ford Touring Car & took the Sedan.

They ask us if Mr. Nevill had any dealings with Cohen, & we told them "No", that he would not even ride in a car with Cohen. * * *

They ask us what we knew about Leber's Hudson Car & we told them we had done some work on it, for which we were paid by Mr. Leber a personal check for $31.00.

Sam Cohen told us that it cost him $40.00 a week on gasoline & oil for the Police Dept. He told us that he & Chief Mulconnery were friends & if they got in any trouble to call on him. * * *

While we were in the employ of Cohen we sold two cars for him, which we were supposed to receive a commisson & have not received anything. We understood that these were not "hot" cars.

Sam Cohen came out to my house ("Clayton La Blance") one night the first part of last week and took me for a ride & told me that the only way for him Cohen to get out of this trouble with the Govt. was for me to stick with him & for he & I to place the blame on Colestock and Mease,—he told me if they ask me if Colestock ever changed any numbers on cars in the place for me to tell them "No" he further told me to say that Colestock came there & got cars & took them away & would keep them half hour or so & bring them back.

Cohen came to my house (La Blance on the 3rd day of March & pulled his gun out layed it on the table & told Colestock & I just what to say when we went over the river, he wanted us to tell a lot of lies to clear him & if we were arrested he would bail us out & if we told anything else besides what he told us to tell he would leave us there flat.

I—Colestock—went to St. Louis with him "Cohen" on Saturday March the 4th, & after arriving there I glanced at a statement where Cohen was trying to throw all the blame on me and I told them the whole truth, and Cohen left me there & never returned.

Sam Cohen—told me La Blance, to say, when I went over the river that a car I sold that I bought it from a man for $200 & that he Cohen loaned me the $200, but I later learned where Cohen was trying to get me in trouble for selling the car and I told St. Louis authorities the truth, & that I sold the car for Cohen & was supposed to get a commission on it—and Cohen had me to give a bill of sale with my name on it, which I did. * * *

SAME MEN IN TWO PAYROLL HOLDUPS; ONE IS FRUSTRATED

Three Robbers Grab $2700 From Girl in Auto, but Drop It When Routed by Shouts and Shots.

$2150 TAKEN FROM OFFICE ON GRAND AV.

Superintendent of Construction Company and Clerk, 76, Held Up—Same Stolen Auto Used in Each Crime.

Two payroll robberies, within 45 minutes yesterday, in which the same automobile was used, apparently by the same robbers, added to the long list of crimes of this character in St. Louis in the last few months. One was successful in netting the robers $2150. The other was frustrated by resistance, which caused them to drop $2700 and flee under fire, and one of them is believed to have been wounded.

The $2150 was obtained in a holdup at the office of the Eyermann Construction Co., 1210 South Grand avenue. The $2700 which was dropped had been snatched from Miss Emily Popp, 25 years old, of 4776 St. Louis avenue, bookkeeper of Robert Gaylord, Inc., in front of the Gaylord Corrugated Paper Box Factory at 1112 South Twelfth street.

Man, 76, Made to Lie Down.

William Eyermann, superintendent of the Eyermann company, and John Oltmanns, a clerk, were making up the payroll at 11:25 a. m. when two masked men entered, with revolvers in their hands, and ordered Eyermann and Oltmanns to lie down. Oltmanns, who is 76 years old, got down on his hands and knees, but had difficulty in prostrating himself. One of the robbers clubbed his revolver and told Oltmanns to roll over or be rolled over, and he rolled over.

The robbers scooped up about $2000 from a desk and took $150 from a safe which was open, but overlooked $200 on another desk. They jerked one telephone from the wall and cut the wire of a desk instrument and ordered Eyermann and Oltmanns into an inner office and locked the door. They ran across the street to a waiting automobile with a third man at the wheel and drove south.

Eyermann noted the direction of their departure and climbed out through a window and went in pursuit in his automobile, but did not overtake them.

Payroll Taken From Girl in Auto.

Miss Popp was carrying the payroll from the Gaylord main office at 1501 Locust street to the factory and was accompanied by George Durbin, a salesman.

As their automobile drew up in front of the factory at 12:10 p. m., another automobile cut in ahead at the curb and stopped. Three men, with handkerchiefs tied over their faces and revolvers in their hands, leaped out and ran back to the automobile in which Miss Popp sat with a wooden box wrapped in paper.

"Stick 'em up!" one of the robbers commanded, and as Miss Popp and Durbin complied, snatched the box from Miss Popp's lap.

An employe sitting at an open window on the second floor of the factory shouted when he saw that a robbery was in progress. The robber with the box dropped it and it rolled under the automobile. Other employes ran to the window and shouted and one of the robbers fired a shot in their direction.

R. W. Zimmerman, foreman, was in the rear of the factory. Taking up a revolver, he ran to the open window just as the last of the robbers was scrambling into their automobile. He fired six shots at the automobile as it sped away. The robbers fired once in return.

The automobile used by the robbers was found near 1811 Kennett place. The robbers had abandoned it.

Four Bullet Holes in Auto.

It was the Studebaker stolen March 24 from George W. Henderson of 1701 Wagoner place from in front of 511 South Second street. Four bullet holes were found in it, one in a front curtain and the others in the back part.

Persons who saw the men leave the automobile said that one was holding a handkerchief to his left jaw, but that he was able to walk without assistance.

A negro employe of the Eyermann company took the license number of the machine used by the robbers there. It was 151,740, the same number as on the Henderson machine.

YOUTH ADMITS DRIVING OFF SEVEN AUTOS SINCE MARCH 16

Joseph Phillips, 19, Arrested by "Night Riders" After He Had Taken His Girl Home in Stolen Car.

Joseph Phillips, 19 years old, [illegible] Ohio avenue, yesterday admitted that since March 16 he had driven off seven automobiles which did not belong to him. In each case, he abandoned the automobile after a "joy ride."

"Phillips was arrested yesterday at 12:30 a. m. when "night riders" of the Police Department recognized the license number of a car he was occupying as that of a car that had been reported stolen. He had just returned his "girl" to her home, he said.

Phillips was discharged three months ago from the navy, where he was a baker. His father is a baker.

ROME DeLuxe QUALITY

Every genuine De Luxe Bedspring bears the trade-mark on the side rail of the spring. Look for it—it is your guarantee

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Your Success or Failure in Life may depend on your bed—says Physician

"There" (in our beds) says the medical correspondent of the London Times, "as in a chrysalis future success or future failure is subtly wrought."

"It might be supposed," continues the writer, "that men knowing these things would devote special attention to the comfort of their beds. In fact," he goes on, "the carelessness of the average citizen as to his sleeping accommodation is very great."

As an example this medical authority points out that the average coil, woven wire or national spring is about as ill-suited for restful sleep as can be imagined. It is neither rigid nor very elastic. It gives sufficiently to make a great hollow for the human body to lie in, but is not flexible enough to mold itself to the shape of the body.

The base of the neck and the small of the back are strained because the shoulders and hips cause great depressions in the spring, leaving the neck and small of the back unsupported.

The only escape from this nerve-straining body-twisting torture is a spring that molds itself scientifically to the curves of the body. Such a spring is the Rome De Luxe. This spring cannot sag into hills and valleys, even though a child and grown-up lie side by side on the same bed. It literally flows around the natural contours of the body, accommodating the hips and shoulders and at the same time gently supporting the incurves such as the small of the back and the neck. Thus the spine remains straight, the body perfectly relaxed.

Examine the Rome De Luxe at your dealer's. There is a world of difference between beds and all that difference is in favor of the bed made luxuriously restful with a Rome De Luxe Bedspring. It is always finished in Rome Grey Enamel and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-mark which identifies all Rome products. The De Luxe is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds.

BROWNS BOMBARD FIVE SOX HURLERS FOR 21 SAFETIES

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, April 15.—After winning two games with the assistance of what Chicagoans were pleased to call a basket full of horseshoes, the Browns today unlimbered their heavy artillery, slammed five White Sox pitchers all over the South Side, gathered a barrel full of base hits, 21 in all, and scored a 14-0 triumph in the final contest of the season's inaugural series.

Powerful as was the hitting of the Browns, it failed to overshadow the brilliant work of Elam Vangilder, who held the Sox to three small hits and gave only one base on balls. His wide-breaking out curve, his fast ball inside and his change of pace all worked in baffling fashion and the Sox resembled raw amateurs at the plate.

Every member of the Browns nicked a hostile hurler for at least one safety, and everyone except Jacobson and Tobin banged out more than one. George Harold Sisler, as was proper, led the assault with four blows and Williams, McManus and Vangilder each bagged three wallops. The ferocity of the Browns' attack, after two rather hitless days, is shown by the number of extra-base wallops. Ellerbe and McManus each banged the leather into the left-field seats for a homer, and Sisler, Williams, Gerber and Vangilder each smacked one for a pair of hassocks.

Sisler Turns Star Play.

In addition, the Browns played excellently in the field. There was a boot charged against them, Tobin dropping a line drive off Hooper's bat. However, Sisler came through with one of those picture double plays and the error was forgotten.

There was little to the game outside of Vangilder's twirling, the Browns' vicious clubbing and the moaning of the fans who turned out 7500 strong in the hope that the warm day might bring the Sox a victory. The spanking administered by the Fohlies took away all memory of the fair showing made by the Sox in the previous games of the series and there was much wailing over the prospects of 151 more battles in which the Sox must compete. For certainly in contrast with the rampant Brownies, the Sox looked terrible.

Wilkinson started on the hill and for two innings had fair success. In the first, singles by Tobin and Williams, with a sacrifice in the middle, netted a St. Louis run. In the second Wilkinson blanked the Browns. Then came the atrocious third, a mighty outburst of bingles.

Two-base hits—Sisler, Williams, Gerber, Vangilder. Home runs—Ellerbe, McManus. Sacrifices—McClellan, Ellerbe, Jacobson, Vangilder, Tobin. Double plays—Sisler to Gerber to Sisler; Johnson to Collins to Sheely. Left on bases—Brown, 7; Chicago, 4. Base of balls—Off Wilkinson, 1; off Vangilder, 1; off Acosta, 1; off Davenport, 1. Struck out—By Vangilder, 5. Hits—Off Wilkinson, 8 in 2⅔ innings; off Russell, 1 in ⅔ inning; off Davenport, 2 in 3 innings; Hit by pitcher—By Vangilder, 1 (McClellan). Losing pitcher—Wilkinson. Umpires—Hildebrand and Moriarty. Time—1h. 44m.

Tobin started harmlessly enough by fouling to McClellan. Frank Ellerbe picked out a straight one and rammed it into the left field seats, a mighty wallop in the Sox park. That set off the fireworks. In quick succession Sisler doubled, Williams followed suit, Jacobson was hit by a pitched ball, Severeid singled, Gerber doubled, McManus grounded out and Vangilder singled, before Tobin lined to the pitcher for the final out. Wilkinson departed under fire, Severeid's clout being the signal for Russell, left-hander, to come to the rescue. The inning netted six runs.

In the fourth, Sisler singled and took third on Williams' one-baser, scoring on Jacobson's sacrifice fly. This was at the expense of Robertson, American Association star last year. He got his in the next frame. Gerber singled to right and McManus promptly plunked one to the same field. Hooper became excited or gripped a slippery shot on the ball and threw into deep left instead of to third and Gerber scored and McManus reached second. Vangilder sacrificed and Tobin's sacrifice fly scored McManus. Ellerbe soaked a single to center and took third when Sisler followed suit. [illegible], however, was caught in a run-up off first and Ellerbe was put out trying to score during the mixup.

Acosta tried to stem the walloping tide in the sixth and singles by Jacobson and Severeid set the stage for McManus' circuit clout to the left field bleachers.

The last pitcher was Davenport, a lanky southpaw who indicated that he had the makings of a great twirler. He held the Fohlmen hitless during the seventh and eighth, but Vangilder's double and Sisler's scratch single to Collins gave the Browns a run in the ninth.

McManus Robs Sox of Run.

The pitching of Vangilder was so effective that the Browns had few chances to pull senastional plays in the field. Ellerbe knocked down an apparent hit in the second and got his man at first and in the fifth McManus raced over toward first and prevented the Sox from scoring by nailing Ernie Johnson's strong bid for a safety. Gerber made several startling stops, but he's doing that so regularly that it has become a matter of course to expect it. His work at following a ball and taking it at the right hop, cleanly and confidently, is marvelous.

Hooper Stars in Field.

Harry Hooper did the only spectacular work afield for the Sox. In the seventh he went back to the fence for Sisler's fly, stumbled as he was about to catch it, but while on his knees he made the catch. On Williams, the next batter, Hooper raced in for a shoestring catch, which was as senastional.

Shocker to Face Indians.

Urban Shocker followed doctors' orders and rested all yesterday and last night and the cold he developed Thursday probably won't interfere with plans to send him against the Cleveland Indians tomorrow afternoon. The Indians had a swat fest of their own at the expense of the Tigers and the series at the Forest City ought to be a feast for lovers of heavy hitting.

Work of Pitchers Pleasing.

The three good exhibitions by St. Louis hurlers has been very encouraging. It's a trifle different from last year's situation. When [illegible] comes through, as he is expected to do in Cleveland, four of the big five will have delivered. And when the hot suns arrive to make it fit for Davis to hurl more good news is expected.

Vangilder's fine control was a pleasing feature. He gave only one walk and hit another batter. Only two men got as far as third base and they also were the only ones who reached second.

Marty McManus, a Chicago product, was given a big hand when he smacked his homer, But the Chicago fans apparently are resigned to the necessity of giving their applause to the visitors.

Umpires Have No Trouble.

Umpires Hildebrand and Moriarty escaped without any trouble in the series. Before the season started the Browns were hoping that any one other than Hildebrand might get the assignment. Hildebrand is famous as the only umpire whose jaw has been kissed by the good left fist of George Sisler. The Browns had no cause to complain in the four games which were handled excellently by the umpires.

Johnny Evers has been silenced—You seldom head a peep from the once flannel-mouthed trojan. The Browns' fusillade today buried Jawn in the Sox dugout. With all the Sox it was just a matter of playing out the day after that third inning.

Giants Tally 11 Runs in Opening Inning of Battle

NEW YORK, April 15.—New York made it three out of four from Brooklyn by winning today's game, 17 to 10. The Giants made 11 runs off three pitchers in the first inning on six singles, a triple and five bases on balls. It was the largest single inning since the Yankees made 14 runs in one frame against Washington in 1920. The Chicago Cubs hold the record with 18 runs in one round.

Twenty hits were made by the Giants today, including four by Groh, who made four yesterday.

Brooklyn scored six runs on three hits in the fifth when Causey issued four passes.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—Philadelphia hammered four Boston pitchers for a total of 19 hits and easily took its third victory of the series, 14 to 5. Although the Braves nicked Hubbell for 13 hits, the local twirler was effective in the pinches. Cy Williams and Henline led the Phillies attack with four hits each. Two of Williams' safeties were homers over the right field wall. The score:

HAINES PITCHES THREE-HIT GAME TO BEAT PIRATES

Cardinals Club Veteran Babe Adams for Thirteen Hits, but Have Difficult Time Winning Contest, 3—2.

By Joseph F. Holland,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

"Babe" Adams, who has staved off old Father Time rather succesfully for the past eight years, paralyzed the Cardinals for seven innings yesterday at Sportsmans' Park, but was the victim of a devastating barrage in the eighth and ninth that completely wiped out Pittsburgh's early 2-0 lead and gave St. Louis the third and final game of the series by a score of 3 to 2.

But for the "arrival" of the timely Cardinal punch, Jess Haines, with a burning fast ball and perfect control, would have lost a three-hit game. As it was it took Jack Smith's single in the ninth, with two out and Toporcer on third to defeat the Pirate pitcher and give the Cardinals undisputed title to first place with three victories and no defeats.

Adams' exhibition yesterday was a model of effectiveness, although he gave 13 hits as against Haines' three. For seven innings he shut out the hard-hitting Cardinal club, though the bases resembled heavy traffic lanes in almost every inning. The men had no trouble in getting on base; but they found the going slow, after they got there.

Two Cardinal errors in the first two innings entered the early cycle of deuces to give the Pirates two runs. This lead Adams held until the eighth when a Cardinal storm broke and St. Louis tied the score.

Smith Starts Rally.

Turning into the last half of the eighth inning, Jack Smith, the first Cardinal hitter, saw his club facing a 2—0 deficit. Jack took the first step toward victory with a line single to right. Jacques Fournier introduced his siege gun on Adams' third pitch when he crashed a double to the left field fence that permitted Smith to score with the first run.

The perfect functioning of the Cardinal machine became evident when Stock dropped a pretty sacrifice bunt to Adams, on which Fournier took third. Rogers Hornsby, whom Adams recently said was the best hitter in baseball today, tied the score with a long fly to Bigbee in deep center. Fournier swept across the plate with the run that deadlocked the issue before Bigbee's throw had reached the infield.

The ninth began like a funeral oration. McHenry faced the 40-year-old Pirate veteran, but that was the extent of his opposition. "Babe" worked upon him gently, but firmly and gracefully slipped over a third strike.

But then George Torporcer, who shared honors for the day with Smith, Fournier and Haines, beat out a slow roller to Grimm. Ainsmith promptly dispatched him to third base with a long single to center. There ensued a long discussion as to whether Haines should hit for himself and Rickey finally decided affirmatively. Jess bounded out to Traynor and Ainsmith took second while Torporcer held third.

Jack Smith, With Count Three and Two, Makes Hit That Clinches the Ball Game

Jack Smith proved the ultimate undoing of the Pirate star. Adams worked him to the last notch and with three balls and two strikes Jack caught the final pitch squarely and lined it out to the right-field fence for a single that scored Torporcer with the winning run. Had it been necessary, Ainsmith also could have scored and Smith's hit would have been at least a double. But Toporcer's run was the vital counter.

The Pirates looked like a better team yesterday than at any time during the series. They took advantage of the early game "breaks" and with Adams stopping the Cardinals in the pinches Jess Haines appeared due for another "hardluck" set-back.

In the first inning Stewart hoisted a high fly near the plate and Ainsmith dropped the ball. Carey immediately doubled to right and Stewart took third from which position he scored on Maranville's out at first, Hornsby to Fournier. Bigbee followed with a bounder to Stock and Carey was trapped at the plate. Traynor lined to Heathcote for the final out.

McHenry Muffs a Fly.

McHenry drops a fly ball about once in three years; but he performed that very feat on Rohwer's fly to open the second inning and the batter made second. Grimm sacrificed the brother Pirate to third and Rohwer scored the second and final run when Gooch hit to Fournier and was out at first on Jacques' toss to Hornsby, who covered the base.

Thereafter it became a test of endurance and Haines and Adams battled on even terms, in the matter of effectiveness, with men on bases. Truth to tell, Haines had very few Pirates associating with his infielders; but while many Cardinals clogged the bases, they were unable to embarrass "Babe" with an unseemly succession of timely blows.

In the opening inning with two out Stock and Hornsby singled, but Rohwer sped in from deep right to make a sensational catch of Heathcote's liner on the next play. With McHenry a strikeout victim in the second Toporcer singled to right but was out trying to stretch the hit on Rohwer's fine throw to Maranville. Ainsmith and Haines followed with hits, but Jack Smith could only pop a foul to Gooch.

Youth Is Served.

This failure to bunch hits continued until the eighth and ninth when "Babe" finally succumbed to the persistency of youth. He gave 13 hits for a total of 15 bases.

Haines pitched masterfully. After Carey doubled in the first, Jess did not allow another hit until Rohwer singled to counter in the seventh. "Pie" Traynor singled in the ninth with two out for the final hit.

Aside from the pitching, the work of George Toporcer, who scored the winning run was the outstanding feature. He had only four chances in the field, and, without dragging out an old bromide, it may truthfully be said that all were of a difficult nature. In addition to his defensive work, he made three hits and scored one run, the decisive factor of the game. There could have been no better shortstop than Toporcer was yesterday.

Grover Alexander and the Cubs will open a three-game series with the Cardinals this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. The perfect finale yesterday coupled with the fact that the Cardinals are today undisputed leaders of the National League will probably swell the attendance to huge proportions. At any rate the management is prepared to stretch more rope during the afternoon than Arkansas and Texas lynching parties have used in a decade.

It is extremely likely that Alexander will pitch for the Cubs. The Cardinals are fully equipped with pitchers and either of Bill Pertica, Bill Sherdel or Jeff Pfeffer are in condition to pitch the full nine innings. The choice lies between Pertica and Sherdel.

Jess Haines pitched a flawless game. He did not give an earned run and but for the two miscues of his mates would have had a shutout victory to inaugurate his season. Haines showed that he was in perfect physical condition. He used his best speed on virtually every ball pitched and only a rugged physique could have stood the demands made upon Jess by his vigorous game.

He used very few curves yesterday, but his speed was the finest shown by any pitcher in the series. He just burned them through and his final pitch to Rohwer in the ninth carried the same effort that did his inaugural effort to Stewart in the first. Haines' showing yesterday boosts Cardinal stock considerably in view of the excellent showing made by Sherdel opening day.

Fourteen Cardinals got on base, 13 of them on hits and the fourteenth on Stuffy Stewart's error. "Babe" Adams does not make it a practice to give passes. Jack Smith was the only man who worked "Babe" to a 3-2 call yesterday.

Riehl's Pitching Checks McKinley; Central Wins 5-3

LOSERS TAKE THE LEAD

Central Ties Score in the Third and Clinches Ball Game in the Fourth.

Central High School's baseball team defeated McKinley High yesterday, in a closely contested game, score 5—3. The Soldan-Cleveland game had been canceled by the coaches and, despite ideal weather, the postponement was enforced.

Coach Walker of Central nominated his recruit pitcher, Rolland Riehl, to do the hurling of the Red and Black and the selection was a fortunate one, the youngster twirling air-tight ball and keeping the McKinley hitters missing, when hits were needed badly. But two safeties were garnered off the slants of the Centralite. The first was of a scratchy variety, a smash between third and deep short which was momentarily juggled and the runner beat it to the initial station. The second and only clean hit was a double to right in the ninth by Condon, which scored the third McKinley run.

McKinley opened well scoring in the second inning on a hit batsman, a neat sacrifice by Condon which sent Selucky to third on great base running, and a passed ball by Fox. Another marker was hung up in the third inning during the Crimson half. Syberg walked and was caught in a runup on an attempted delayed steal. Riehl's throw passed Williamson and rolled to center, Syberg taking third, from where he counted on Heffern's scratch hit.

Central Ties the Score.

Central evened matters in their portion of the frame. A walk to Margulis, a force-out by Olsen, followed by a single by Bruere placed men on second and third, both of whom scored on Fred Fisher's hot punch to left for a single.

The ball game was clinched by the minions of Walker in the fourth. Fox beat out a play to short and stole second. Riehl hit between short and third. Williamson attempted to sacrifice, but Shillig, the McKinley catcher, picked up the bunt and hurled the ball 10 feet over the first sacker's head, Fox and Riehl scoring and Williamson going to third. An infield out scored Williamson with the last Central tally.

The next four innings developed into a urling duel between Heil and Riehl, with the latter having a shade th better of the argument. The Red and Black pitcher improved as the game wore on, and became more confident in himself. Heil was at his best, during these innings, and pitched himself out of several tight places.

A belated rally was attempted by the McKinleyites in the ninth frame, and Riehl regained his composure after a brief trip to the clouds and held the South Siders to a lone count.

Notes of the Game.

Seymour, the Central left gardener, had a busy afternoon. Five putouts was the total of "Irish's" field efforts and a ripping single to center and a walk was his offensive contribution.

Both pitchers used a side-arm delivery during the pinches with telling effect. Heil was working a big curve ball which occasionally placed him in the hole with the batter on top. Riehl worked a mixture and by a liberal use of brains succeeded in puzzling the South Siders.

The Central infield worked together in fine shape. Larry Fanning played superb ball on four difficult chances and Olsen and Williamson divided the work around the keystone nicely. Fred Fisher received 13 chances in faultless style.

Selucky and Condon at short and second for McKinley are playing a good game for Coach Shiek. These boys cover a big territory and try for everything. Selucky accepted 10 chances without a miscue, a play which evaded him while backing up third base being scored as a hit.

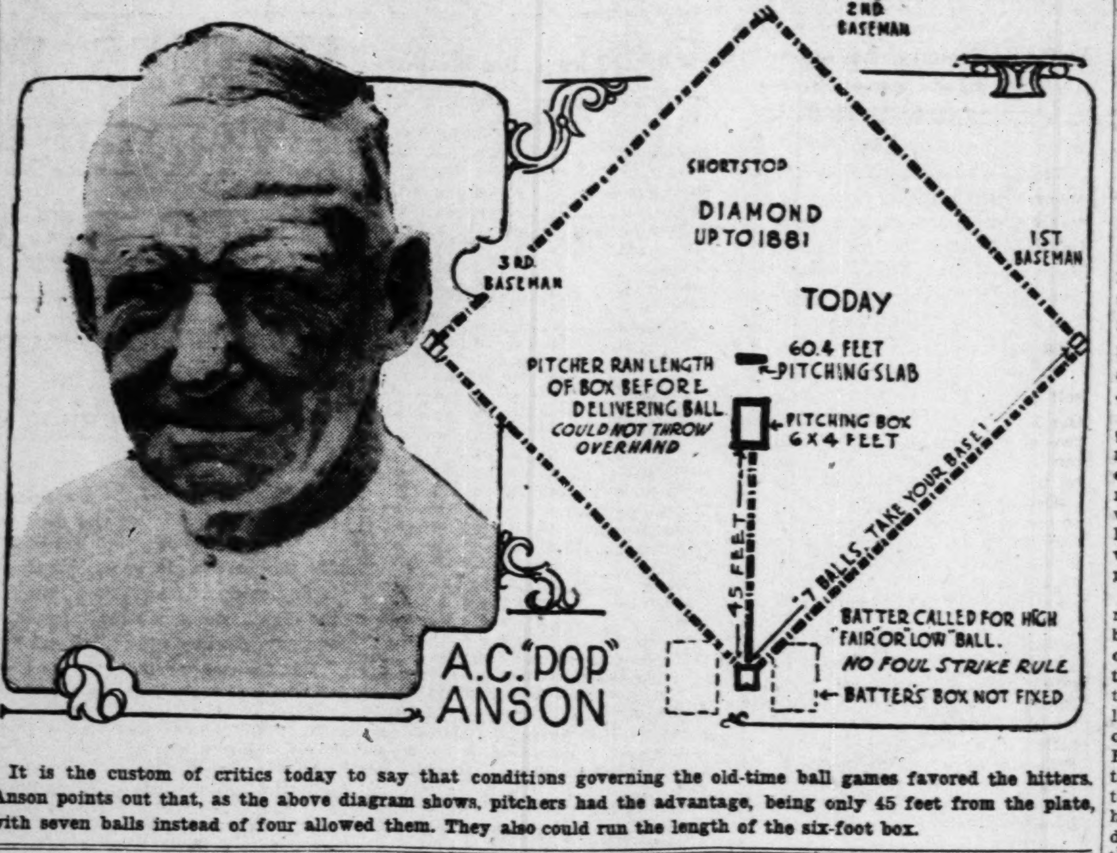
Nothing New in Baseball but Spitball and Commercialism, Pop Anson's Creed



It is the custom of critics today to say that conditions governing the old-time ball games favored the hitters. Anson points out that, as the above diagram shows, pitchers had the advantage, being only 45 feet from the plate, with seven balls instead of four allowed them. They also could run the length of the six-foot box.

Doughty Old Baseball Warrior, Winner of Five Pennants, Held Old-Time Players Were Better.

By John E. Wray.

Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

STILL stanch and true to the "good old days," Adrian Constantine Anson, "Pop" to the fans of old, died Friday in Chicago where he had built himself in 22 years of unequaled service a name that will not soon be forgotten in the baseball world. Unless he changed his mind, in the closing days of his life, he died as he had lived believing that the players of his day knew more inside baseball and fought with a less commercial animus than the fade-outs who today represent us on the ball field.

In 20 years I had occasion to interview Anson many times. But not once did he falter in his belief that the ballplayers of old were the peers if not the superiors of the men of today. He maintained that Hans Wagner and Larry Lajoie would have had trouble in "making" any one of the five pennant-winning clubs that he managed; and once he told me that he thought Billy Sunday, now the celebrated evangelist, could have run rings around Ty Cobb, in his prime.

Less than four years ago, in 1918, when the Captain, 66 years old, and financially down and out, was showing here with his two daughters in a vaudeville skit written by Ring Lardner, he picked an all-time, all-America baseball club for me. As a curiosity it is reprinted here as follows:

A. C. Anson, first base.
Fred Pfeffer, second base.
Ross Barnes, shortstop.
Ed Williamson, third base.
George Gore, center field.
Jimmy Ryan, right field.
Mike Kelly, catcher.
Buck Ewing, catcher.
John Clarkson, pitcher.
Jim McCormick, pitcher.
Amos Rusie, pitcher.

With two exceptions this was a list of former Chicago players, men whom Anson personally had directed in campaigns for the pennant—successful campaigns, too. The exceptions were Rusie and Ewing.

12 Players Enough, Anson Held.

OCCASIONALLY Anson would condescend to admit that Wagner, Lajoie and Cobb might be equal to some of the men he had named but he never conceded them an advantage. True to his oft-reiterated statement that 12 men were all any manager needed to win a pennant, there are only 12 players on Cap's all-time team.

While we all may be inclined to smile at the thought that baseball alone, of all things, has NOT progressed in 20 years, Anson's opinion is entited to respect. To begin with, he lasted right down to the late days of the last century and was still playing as late as 1897. Moreover, he was not playing badly, as his batting average of .303 for that year might indicate. He followed the game closely in the later years of his life.

And surely no knight of the Middle Ages of baseball, or any other period, for that matter, ever performed doughtier deeds than "Pop" His career may best be epitomized by recalling:

That he played first base for 22 consecutive years on a major league club with a grand batting average of .337. He played in all 27 big league seasons, but of his earliest performances, no record was kept.

That he had won five pennants and four world's championships.

Strong for the Old School.

INTERVIEWING Cap was like selling gold dollars for 50 cents—you couldn't fail. He was a mine of information and one had only to tap a theme—and off went Cap.

In one of his characteristic interviews he smashed the theory that the rules of olden days were what made the batting averages high in his time. Here's what Cap told me on one occasion when I taxed him with the charge.

"Of course, you hear that the old-time batters had such good averages because batting conditions in those days favored the hitter. You can salt some of that. For example, under the old conditions in 1877 I hit .2?1. Twenty years later, in 1897, after 26 years or more of major league service under both old and new conditions, I batted .303 against supposedly better pitching.

Then and Now.

"IT IS true the pitchers were handicapped, in those days. They had to throw the ball as called by the batter, high or low, and they were not allowed to deliver an overhand pitch. The foul strike rule, too, was unknown.

"But against these disadvantages may be mentioned the following points in favor of the pitcher:

"1. He was allowed seven to nine balls before a batter walked.

"2. He was, in 1876, only 45 feet from the plate, and later, only 50 feet.

"3. He pitched in a box 6 to 7 feet long, and not from a slab, and could take a run when delivering the ball.

"If you want any further evidence from my own career here's another point: In 1884 they removed practically all the restrictions from the pitcher. Yet, three years later, under conditions which would now be considered much more unfavorable to the batsman, I batted the highest average of my career, .421, and that was 16 years after I first joined a major league club."

Nothing New in Baseball.

"BUT, hasn't baseball, like everything else, greatly improved since you were in your prime, Captain?" Anson was asked. "Haven't they learned new tricks and better ways of doing things today?"

"Young man, in 20 years I have seen only two new things in baseball. They are commercialism and the spitball. And both have done more harm than good to the game.

"When I had my world's championship aggregation they did everything pulled in a modern contest. The squeeze play is as old as the bunt, and the delayed steal had been known and forgotten when revived a few years ago. They play the game in the same way except not so earnestly or resolutely.

"Furthermore, they did everything better then. That was because we had better material. There being only one or two leagues in existence, we could pick and choose at will. I have passed up more major league talent in some seasons than you'll find on the big league clubs of today. We had no place for them.

"In those days we needed only a few players to a club. A manager could get along with 12 players. If he used more than 14 he was a wastrel. Today they need anywhere from 25 to 40 and a bank roll big enough to keep a mint busy.

"We needed fewer men because the baseball star didn't join a club thinking the world owed him a living, served up to him in bed. He was able and willing to work every day, whether he was a pitcher or not. He played partly for the money and chiefly because he loved the game. He played to win all the time. There was team pride and spirit.

"When I was manager of the White Sox, in the 22 years I was with that club and the four years I played with the Athletics, I never knew a payroll to run as high as $50,000—at any stage of that period.

"In my time Clarkson drew $4500, which was top pay—and a whale of a salary at that time. Compare that with the fortunes paid certain modern players."

Here's Anson's Batting Average for 22 Seasons; Surpass It if You Can

THE late Pop Anson carried SOME punch. He played 27 major league seasons, but the hitting records of only 22 have survived him. His record is presented below. It will be a mark to shoot at for some time to come—grand average for 22 seasons, .337.

Said Spitball Was Known Years Ago, but Admitted It Was Developed in Recent Years.

Said Spitball Was Old.

I ONCE tried to get Anson to admit that the spitball was at least one novelty that the moderns had which the ancients had not. But he never weakened.

"It's not new at all," he told me. "I remember two pitchers that, in the light of events today, must have used the 'spitter.' One was Bobby Mathews and the other was Pete Conway, a Detroit hurler. The peculiar features about the delivery of both these men were:

"1. Both threw a heavy ball that broke up their catchers' fingers.

"2. Both left a little white spot on the ball, like the spitter today.

"However, I admit that the spitball was not DEVELOPED until the present time. And that's another argument in favor of the old-time game. The spitball is not legitimate."

How to Help the Game.

DESPITE his references to low salaries, Anson was the first magnate to pay $10,000 for a baseball player. He also sold Clarkson and Kelly for a lump sum of $20,000, when breaking up his team much after the fashion in which Connie Mack did the same thing 30 years late—and for the same reason. The city had had so much championship baseball that it no longer appreciated the team.

To the very end Anson always maintained that the game today could be greatly improved. The last time I saw him, over two years ago, he was still riding his hobby. Among the things he suggested then were the following:

"Limit clubs to 15 players at most.

"Make the pitcher who starts a game go through, unless hurt.

"Abolish the substitution of pinch hitters for regular batsmen.

The aftermath of Anson's great baseball experience was unhappy. He made money, during his career. Besides his salary of close to $5000 he had a "one-tenth-of-the-profits" clause in his contract, but declared all that was due him was not paid. Nevertheless at one time he owned one-eighth of the Chicago club's stock, had $5000 invested in the New York club and $1500 in Philadelphia.

When he retired he made some bad investments and lost everything, including money his wife had risked with him.

Municipal Tennis Body Adopts Four Changes in Rules

Players Must Use Park Courts Majority of Time to Enter Tournaments.

By Davison Obear.

The Municipal Tennis Association has adopted four very important rules of play for its members this year. Owing to the experience of the last several seasons the organization has found it necessary to make some changes, according to announcement made yesterday by John E. Mooney.

One new rule provides that a player must use the park courts a majority of the time if he desires to enter any event conducted by the municipal body. This would prevent the entry of any player who has heretofore used the park courts only when playing in a municipal tournament.

Probably the next most important rule is the one where a default will be given if the match is not played on the day scheduled, that is, unless the weather should prevent. During the coming season a certain time limit will be allotted for the playing of the different rounds in the event. Players will be given the privilege to play their matches anytime prior to the limit set. In the past there have been any numberof unnecessary delays and this rule will speed up the play.

The entry list in every municipal tournament will close five days previous to the opening day of play. All matches must be played on public park courts according to one of the new rules just adopted. Mooney also announced that 25 cents of every dollar paid for membership in any public park tennis club would go to the treasury of the Municipal Athletic Association. Tennis has contributed a very small sum to the parent body while other sports, especially baseball, have given good financial support.

Winners of the tennis tournaments will receive gold medals this year. No bronze or silver medals will be awarded. An admission charge will be made for several of the championship matches. The tournament schedule now being prepared will be sanctioned by the St. Louis District Tennis Association of which the Municipal Tennis Association is a member.

Courts to Open Next Week.

The local tennis season will open next Saturday afternoon provided there are no heavy rains during the week. Players who use the various private club and public park courts have been waiting for the opportunity to start practice for the early tournaments the last of May.

During the coming week workmen at the Triple A Club will prepare the center courts for play next Saturday. The two courts east of the clubhouse will receive several layers of roofing tomorrow and should also be ready for use. When completed these courts may be played upon during a greater part of the entire year. The surface is similar to that now on the handball courts.

Reports indicate that several of the country clubs will have courts ready this week. Some work has been done on the courts of the Kirkwood Country Club and at least two courts will be in condition for play. The Y. M. C. A. in East St. Louis has ordered clay for its three courts and expects that a layer will be put on next week so that the following week the courts will be ready.

A number of private clubs have announced that their courts will be in shape within a few days. Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce Tennis Club are assisting the groundkeeper in preparing the two courts, which are located at Vandeventer and McPherson. The Cabanne Tennis Club at King's highway and Cabanne avenues will open its court this week and expects to conduct some early matches about May 1.

FOREST PARK GOLFERS WILL OPEN DRIVE TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP

The Forest Park Golf Club will shortly institute a membership drive for the purpose of raising funds to be used in improving and maintaining the Municipal golf course and the club and locker rooms.

In a letter which the club proposes to send out, the advantages of membership are pointed out and the rapid advance of golf as a popular sport under the club's influence is cited. It is pointed out that the club has secured for its members representation in the U. S. Golf Association, the Western Golf Association and the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association.

A number of the City's leading players at this time are men who were developed on the Forest Park course.

(a) H. P. Whitney—Greentree Stable entry.

Exterminator (winner) closed with a rush and won going away. Billy Kelly had plenty of speed, but tired as if short. Dextrous ran a good race. Exodus quit.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 15.—Exterminator, America's famous cup horse, came to the races for the first time this season here this afternoon and won the Harford handicap on the opening of the spring meeting here.

Only once since he was a 2-year-old has the 7-year-old son of McGee-Fair Empress tried to step with the sprinters, but today he picked up 132 pounds and beat so redoubtable a speed marvel as Billy Kelly by a length in a mild drive. Dextrous, a castoff of the H. P. Whitney stable, was third by as much, and behind him came nine of the best horses that have faced the starter this season.

There was a note of regret in the cheers of the crowd, which numbered more than 10,000, as the horses came back to the scales, for Billy Kelly had won the fixture three times in succession, and it was fervently hoped by the majority that he could do it again today.

Billy carried level weights with Exterminator and gave up his best, as he always does, but it was not enough to withstand the closing rush of the cup horse in the stretch.

It was a remarkable beginning for Exterminator's fifth year on the turf. Last season he stood fifth on the list of the great money-winning horses of all time with $173,131 to his credit and he ranks as the greatest money-winning gelding in the history of the American turf. To date he has started 74 times, won 36 races and has been unplaced only nine times. The value of the race to the winner today was $3525.

Gene Wayland, trainer for Willis Sharpe Kilmer, has always been known for his ability to get horses ready for short races early in the season. However, it seemed hard to believe that he could make a horse whose best races always have been over a distance of ground sprint with the sprinters. It was an amazing demonstration of Exterminator's quality to do anything asked of him.

Caddock to Meet Kotsonaros in Mat Match at Odeon

Former Heavyweight Champion Will Tackle Geek Adonis Here Friday.

Earl Caddock, former heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, the man with a thousand holds, and George Kotsonaros, aspirant to the light heavyweight title, have been matched to meet as half of a double windup program at the Odeon Friday night, April 21.

The two have deposited with Promoter John Contos $500 to be forfeited if they do not make the weight requirements of 185 pounds and the winner of the contest will challenge Jim Londos, Greek champion, who also is claiming the light heavyweight championship.

Caddock, who won the world title from Joe Stecher in the early part of 1917, and Kotsonaros have met twice previously. On April 3, 1920, in Columbus, O., the two wrestled for two hours and 24 minutes before Caddock finally won.

Caddock held the championship until after the world war. He enlisted in the army and took part in many of the battles in France and was severely gassed in one of the great drives that preceded the armistice. After the signing of the armistice and his discharge Caddock again met Stecher, but went down to defeat, losing the championship.

Caddock's war experiences reduced his weight from 185 pounds to 160, but by exemplary life and extraordinary care he brought himself back to normal and even went to 190 pounds while ranching in Wyoming.

Kotsonaros is hailed in the wrestling world as the Greek Adonis. He measures 19½ inches around the neck, 46 around the chest and 32 around the waist. He is declared to be the fastest leg worker on the mat, utilizing hundreds of holds with his feet to overcome his opponents. In 1915 he was awarded a gold medal by the McFarland Physical School for being the most perfect specimen of physical manhood ever seen by the judges.

In the other half of the Odeon windup Londos will be one of the main contenders. His opponent has not been selected.

California Track Squad Is Winner Over Tiger Team

Bob Simpson's Athletes Defeated by 40 Points in Meet on Coast.

HAMILTON HIGH MAN

Missourian's Star Scores 13 Points—Columbia Team Gains Only Two Firsts.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., April 15.—The University of Missouri Tiger track team was defeated by the University of California Bears 85 to 45 in a dual meet here today.

None of the marks of the meet approached records. It was Missouri's first outdoor competition this year and although the visitors had 15 men to California's 14, they were unable to hold down the lead of the Bear team, which won the nationl intercollegiate championship last year at the meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America.

Captain Brutus Hamilton, of the visiting team, who holds the American decathlon record, was the high point winner of the day, with 13. Johnny Merchant, California's versatile star, made 11. Hamilton won the broad jump, placed second in the javelin and shot-put and third in the discus and pole vault. Merchant won the 100-yard run and the shot-put and took third in the javelin. He failed to qualify in the broad jump.

Two Firsts for Tigers.

Missouri took two first places. Burrell won the 220-yard run and Hamilton the broad jump. Waddell, Missouri, who has high-jumped 6 feet 1 inch, and who was expected to win this event today, was out of form and stood third to Muller and Treyer, California, who tied for first at 5 feet 11 inches.

The Missouri team leaves here tomorrow for Los Angeles, where it meet Occidental College in a dual meet Wednesday. It will leave for the East Thursday.

Alonzo of Spain Destined to Be World Tennis Star, Tilden Says

Young Davis Cup Player a Combination of Bill Johnston and Throckmorton, Champion Writes—Latin Athlete Made Fine Impression in Wimbledon Tourney.

By William Tilden II.

(Copyright, 1922.)

This article on the Spanish Davis Cup team is to be largely one of praise for one player, a man who is one of the most remarkable personalities in the sporting world, Manuel Alonzo.

Spain entered the tennis arena last year. Although defeated by England, the Spanish team disclosed a brand of tennis that won over the British critics. Spanish tennis is of the modern all-court type, more like the game of Johnston and Richards and that of the continental players. The leading exponent of the game in Spain is Manuel Alonzo. This brilliant young star is but 25 years old, slight of build, dark to the point of swarthiness, with striking, clean-cut features somewhat on the Rudolph Valentino style; lithe and incredibly fast of feet; a matinee idol type in looks, but the embodiment of all that is best and finest in sport. There is no more generous victor or gracious loser than this young Spaniard, who won the hearts of the British public at Wimbledown last year.

It is a marvelous, but as yet unformed and, in many ways, crude game which Alonzo plays. His service is a high, breaking American twist delivery of fair speed, but of none too great accuracy. His forehand drive is a magnificent shot. It is the nearest approach to Billy Johnston's that I have seen. Alonzo hits it with all the abandon of his Latin temperament. He dashes into the ball and swipes it a terrible clout. In fact, whatever Alonzo is doing, he does with a dash. Even in his soft volleying he rushes at the ball and then allows it to die away on his racket. This young Spaniard is a combination of Harold Throckmorton and Billy Johnston. Anyone who has ever seen the two Americans play will understand why Alonzo, combining the attractions of both, made such a furore at Wimbledon.

I do not believe that Alonzo will sweep al before him on his first American trip, except in the wave of personal popularity that I know will be his. Well does he deserve it. He still lacks that poise and experience that is vital to a great tournament player. He is prone to take too many lapses during the course of a long tournament to win over the field in an event like the American championship. He is much more likely to upset all the dope and defeat decisively some of the greatest players in the world during the short series for the Davis cup.

His teammates, his brother and Count de Gomar, are fine tennis players, and men of the same sportsmanlike standard. The Spanish team should not prove a serious contender for the cup this year, but their presence brings a new element into the competition which should prove a real factor in future years. One great star may not make the sky, but it is enough to build a tennis team around which a champion nation may develop. Brookes, single-handed, kept Australia in the race, while J. C. Parke brought home the cup itself by his marvelous play. Alonzo may yet prove himself the successor to the mighty Brookes, as that master is passing from the game.

(Tilden's next article will be "Some Davis Cup Statistics.")

Fitzsimmons to Box Young Denny

Middleweights Clash at Armory in Business Men's Assn. Main Events Monday.

Young Denny, the New Orleans middleweight, who has won three bouts locally by quick knockouts, will make his fourth appearance in St. Louis tomorrow night when he meets Young Fitzsimmons, a hard-hitting middleweight, of Oklahoma City, in the 10-round main event of the Business Men's Athletic Association show at the armory. The first bout starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Denny and Fitzsimmons have made good showings this year and are expected to put up a good bout. Denny, in his only local exhibitions has knocked out Sailor Jerabek twice and Navy Rostan once.

"Bud" McHale and "Grub" Whalen, welterweights, will meet in their third encounter in the eight-round semifinal. Each boy has won one of the previous fights and both are in excellent condition for the decisive event.

Paul Barata meets Bobby Weiss in the four-round preliminary. The weight will be 118 pounds. A battle royal will precede the evening's regular card. Harry Sharpe will referee.

ILLINI ATHLETES RUN OVER RICE INSTITUTE IN MEET AT HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Tex., April 15.—Rice Institute track team was defeated by the Illinois University team in the dual track meet today, 113½ to 17½. Rice men failed to capture a single first place.

Illinois went ahead in the first event, when two places were taken by the visiting athletes.

From then on the ultimate result of the meet was never in question. Before the first seven events had been run Illinois had won all places in four events.

To the disappointment of Rice fans, who witnessed the meet, Lindsey of Rice failed to take first place in the 100-yard dash. Ayres beat the Rice star in this event. Lindsey had set a record of 9 4-5 seconds prior to this year, but he failed to live up to the mark today. The time was slightly over his low mark, 10 seconds flat.

Murchison Does 9 4-5 for 100

Loren Murchison, world's 60-yard dash champion, clipped off the 100-yard dash yesterday afternoon at Francis Field in 9 4-5 s. This is just one-fifth of a second slower than the record for the century dash.

Murchison made the fast time in a practice race with Downey of the Illinois Athletic Club, of which Murchison is also a member. Three watches, held by Dr. Lund of Washington University, Kodowe Abeken of the Park Department, and Coach Castleman of McKinley High School, coincided on the time.

Murchison had the advantage of a slight breeze at his back which would, in a meet, prevent official recognition of record-breaking time, but the slow condition of the track due to recent rains practically nullified this advantage.

Murchison recently challenged Charles Paddock, the Olympic star, to race him in a series from 50 yards up to 300.

BANKER JOHNNY KERN MEETS DAN TAYLOR IN SCOTT FIELD CONTEST

"Banker" Johnny Kern, local welterweight, will participate in a benefit boxing show at Scott Field, Belleville, next Thursday evening and will meet Dan Taylor, of Belleville, in the main event. Taylor met Mann Dugan in a recent bout and fought his opponent to a draw.

The proceeds of the bout will be devoted to a fund to be used for increasing the recreational activities of the men.

"Battling" Muse, a soldier at the Field, will meet Johnny Lucas in the semi-windup and Jimmy Parker and Dolly Marks, bantams, will meet in the preliminary.

SIMMONS' HIT DEFEATS SUMNER HIGH SCHOOL TEAM IN NINTH, 8 TO 7

The St. Louis Tigers won a close contest from the Sumner High School team by a score of 8 to 7 yesterday at the school campus. Miller, Spotser, Larkin and Stone were the batting leaders of the game with two hits each. Miller's two doubles accounted for three of Sumner's runs.

Simmons, the Tiger pitcher, broke a tie score in the ninth inning, when he singled to center and drove the winning run across the plate. The hit broke up a pitching duel which Simmons had for several innings with Bull, the Sumner twirler.

Five-Day Golf Club.

HAVE you ever looked out on a beautiful sunshiny day over a finely kept golf course which was empty, or nearly so, of players? Of course you have. We all have. Did it ever occur to you what a pity it is that this superb institution should lie there idle and unenjoyed while so many long for the pleasures it could afford? Yet a very large number of private golf courses lie practically unused the greater part of the week—the first five days of it, and this thought suggests the idea of the Five-Day Golf Club Membership.

The average business man gets his golf on week ends. On Saturdays and Sundays the courses are crowded. This is especially true of Sunday mornings, but when Sunday is passed and the demands of a work-a-day world put in its Monday morning claims, all courses are practically deserted by members except for an occasional lady player, and that condition continues throughout the week.

Countless men and women could arrange their affairs to use this idle time. There are a few private courses sufficiently accessible to permit of late afternoon golf, but they are in the minority. Such courses could adopt a modification of this idea and install a morning membership plan, limiting the playing time of such members to the first five mornings of the week.

It is surely a matter for great regret that a golf course, costing many, many thousands of dollars to build, is, under the present system, merely a part-time plant.

And apart from the community good fostered by this five-day membership plan, or even its modification—the morning membership plan—the cost and upkeep of the golf courses, which is, in these days, working a hardship on many members of golf clubs, would be reduced.

Of course, the fee for the five-day golf club membership, or even the morning membership, would be much less than a full membership, but the aggregate would be a tremendous financial factor in the club maintenance, in addition to giving a greater number of people the joy of the game.

There are those who will say that the course will suffer from such heavy daily used. This, I think, is an unnecessary fear. Naturally, judgment will have to be used in deciding the number of such memberships a club is justified in selling.

BILLIKEN TRACK MEN TO GO TO LITTLE ROCK

Coach Steve O'Rourke of St. Louis University will depart with 10 of the Billiken track men, Wednesday evening to take part in the annual Western A. U. invitation meet to be held at Little Rock, Ark., April 20, 21.

The Billiken coach does not hope for great laurels, but will be content if the men assimilate the proper track atmosphere. O'Rourke has been attempting to revive track as a major sport at the Grand avenue school.

Woodward Victor In Roller Race

Reiff Has Lead of 25 When He Falls and Is Put Out of the Running.

Jack Woodward of Atlantic City was the winner in the two-mile roller skating final held at the Palladium roller rink last night in 6 minutes 21 seconds. In this race, "Midge" Reiff of Reading, Pa., had a lead of 25 feet with only one more lap to go when he fell and was put out of the running. Eddie Krahn of Cincinnati was second and Albert Cookson, St. Louis, third.

The first one-mile heat was won by Eddie Krahn in 3 minutes 3 seconds, with Jack Woodward, second; Cookson, third, and Austin Lafland, St. Louis, fourth. In the second mile heat, Reiff was the victor in 3:07, with Ray O'Neill, St. Louis, second, and Louis Schmitt of Granite City, third.

Pikers Win Both Games of Double Bill From Ames

DeBolt's Effectiveness in Pinches Wins First Contest, Score 2 to 1.

The Washington University Pikers successfully initiated their 1922 Conference season at Francis Field yesterday afternoon by winning a double-header from the Iowa State (Ames) Cyclones, the scores being 2-1 and 12-0. Both were seven-inning contests.

The first game early resolved itself into a pitching duel. Smith, for the Iowans, allowed only three hits, two of which were infield scratches; but his effectiveness was impaired by five free tickets to first.

Debolt, although nicked for seven sound safeties, struck out ten batters and brilliantly hurled himself out of many tight places. In the fifth inning he fanned Whittaker, Smith and Thayer with runners on second and third.

Ames scored a run in the first inning on two singles, a pass, a wild pitch and an infield out, and the Pikers knotted the count in the third when Magualo scored on a single, an infield out and a wild pitch. The Pikers won out in the seventh when Magualo's infield hit scored Thompson who had walked and advanced by two infield outs.

Fries Allows One Hit.

Fries, a southpaw, came through in splendid style for the Pikers in the second game, shutting out the Iowans with only one hit, a clean single by Currie. His two triples materially aided in the scoring.

The Pikers, aided by errors, started off with a rush and converted three hits into five runs before George, Ames hurler, was replaced by Grier. He fared little better than his teammate, however, for the Pikers nicked him for the six hits and three passes which were manufactured into seven runs.

The Pikers will play the Milliken University team a two-game series tomorrow and Tuesday afternoons, at 4 o'clock.

EVANS MAY NOT PLAY IN WESTERN TOURNEY

KANSAS CITY, April 15.—When the entrants in the Western Amateur golf tournament meet in competition at the Holl Crest Golf Cluc, June 26 to July 1, "Chick" Evans, champion, may not be here to defend his title. Evans is now in Europe, where he will participate in several matches. He may remain abroad until late summer for some of the big English events.

Interest in the tournament is running high. Preparations are being made for conducting the meeting successfully.

The course at Hillcrest has been put in perfect condition and every effort will be made to keep it groomed for the tournament. A record list of entries will be on hand for the opening round and all the players who were prominent in the tournament of last year will be here in addition to many from the Southwest and Northwest who will come because of the central location of Kansas City.

Westwood Opening Postponed.

The opening of the Westwood Country Club golf course, set for yesterday, has been postponed until next Saturday. The water soaked fairways and greens are not in condition to be cared for and will be closed until the course is sufficiently fried.

BASKETBALL RULE ON FOUL THROW CHANGED AFTER LONG DISCUSSION

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Alteration of the foul rule of basketball including the extension of the foul line across the playing court and allowing two tries for a basket to victims of personal fouls in a designated foul zone, was adopted today by the National Board of Approved Basketball Officials.

It was the first radical change of the rule to be made by a governing basketball organization in 20 years, and was decided on after a two-day discussion, during which certain officials recommended abandonment of the basket from foul, and other drastic alterations.

The board ruled that personal fouls should be declared in event of deliberate pulling, pushing, charging or tripping, delaying the game, coaching from side lines and unsportsmanlike conduct.

For minor offenses, such as violations of the running with ball, hand behind back and dribbling rules, the ball will be given to the opposing team out of bounds. When the ball is held within the foul area, it will be tossed up on the foul line.

In connection with dribbling the board ruled that a player may take one step and must get rid of the ball before the back foot leaves the floor.

Principia Meets Pikers.

The Principia Academy swimmers will oppose the Washington University team in the latter's pool on Tuesday night. On comparative scores the Pikers should have no difficulty in winning. This will be the first meeting of the two teams this season.

Pikeway Athletes Win First Track Meet From Rolla

The Piker track team captured a dual meet from the Missouri School of Mines team of Rolla yesterday afternoon at Francis Field by the decisive margin of 84 to 51. Of the 16 events scheduled, the Pikers won first place in 10 and were tied for first place in the high jump. The track had been carefully rolled before the meet and in spite of recent heavy rains was in good shape.

Thumser and Andewert were the outstanding performers for the Red and Green. Thumser accounted for 15 of the Pikers' points, landing first in the 120-yard high hurdles and the broad jump and placing in three other events. Andewert captured the 100 and 220 yard dashes in impressive style and also ran in the winning quartet which captured the mile and half-mile relay races.

Pikers Nose Out in Relay.

The most keenly contested race of the day was the half-mile relay, won by the Pikers. The runners were neck and neck almost the entire route before Andewert just managed to nose out Hoover by less than a step. The high jump was also hotly mooted, Cantwell of Washington tying with Scruby of Rolla for the first place at 66 inches.

120-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Thumser (W.), first; Scurby (R.), second; Hoover (R.), third. Time—16 4-5s.

880-YARD RUN—Everly (W), first; Capps (W), second; Runge (R), third. Time, 2:11 4-5.

ONE-MILE RUN—Capps (W.), first; Chomeau (R.), second; Schulz (W.), third. Time, 4:46 3-5.

The Case for the Ship Subsidy as Stated by Chairman Lasker of the Federal Shipping Board

He Believes Opposition Would Fall Away if Public Understood Situation—Pleads for Legislation Along Lines of President's Proposal So That America May Build Up a Merchant Marine Powerful in Peace and in War.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.
WASHINGTON, April 15.

RECENT expressions by President Harding, both in public addresses and private talks, indicate that the project nearest his heart is the upbuilding of an American merchant marine. He would regard the attainment of this end as a monumental achievement of his administration. In his opinion, which is that also of the bipartisan Shipping Board, there are but two courses open if the great war-built merchant fleet of the Government is not to fall into disuse and decay; one is Government operation and the other is a subsidy to encourage operation by private interests. The President and his advisers are opposed to continued Government operation. A ship subsidy, they maintain, is therefore the only solution of one of the most baffling problems arising from the war.

With full realization that the word "subsidy" is repugnant to the American people, the President had proposed subsidy legislation, which is now pending in both Houses of Congress. He believes that opposition would fall away if the American people were fully possessed of the facts.

What, then, is the case of the subsidy?

The case has been stated in great detail, and with rare persuasiveness, by Albert D. Lasker, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, in testimony before the joint congressional committee which is considering the President's proposals. His views are those of the President.

The issue, according to Lasker, is not merely subsidy or no subsidy, but involves also what shall become of the Government-owned fleet; what shall be done to end the large losses now being sustained through governmental operation; what steps shall be taken to insure the overseas carriage of America's surplus products in times of peace, and, finally, "whether America, through the possession of an adequate merchant marine, shall be self-sustaining and self-sufficient on the seas in times of war."

"The question of subsidy to American ships," said Lasker, "has hardly ever been treated as a partisan one, in spite of the fact that we hear favorable consideration has been a Republican policy and opposition a Democratic one. The fact is that for practically half a century neither party has given life to a policy of direct aid to American ships. The Republican Central West has ever joined with the Democratic South in distaste and revulsion to subsidizing our shipping.

All-American Feeling.

"Times change; conditions change with changing times; and just as in a nonpartisan way subsidies have hitherto been denied, it is the feeling of the seven members of the Shipping Board that the question of Government aid to American ships, including subsidies, is an all-American one, and should consciously be treated no more politically, than should the needs of the army, the navy or the Postoffice Department.

"Prior to the world war America was content to have its cargoes carried in foreign bottoms. We were then a debtor nation and we could feel sure that those whom we owed, being the great maritime nations of the world, would furnish us the bottoms with which to carry the goods to liquidate our debts.

"The World War has changed practically every phase of human life. America emerges from that war holding first economic place in the world. She finds herself a creditor nation; and whether we will it or no, we are now cast for continuing first place on the stage of world commerce. No nation ever held that proud position unless she was strong in her own rights on the seas. It is for us here and now to determine whether America shall attempt to refuse the place which destiny has carved out for her."

The Government finds itself today, Lasker said, owning 1442 steel ships of 7,000,000 gross tons, of which 1021 are tied up and 421 are being operated at an estimated cost to the Treasury for the coming year of $50,000,000. Private operations as well are being conducted at "startling losses," due to depressed world conditions and to the inability of private owners to meet the Government competition.

"The purpose of Government operation," continued Lasker, "as defined by law, was to build up trade routes in order that the Government ships might thus be sold with established goodwill to private owners. The very method chosen has worked to defeat its own purpose, for in the upbuilding of these routes the Government has operated ships and in the operation of ships has driven its potential customers largely off the seas. Thus we come to conclusion from which there can be no escape—that since continued Government operation means finally the possible and likely elimination of private operation of American ships, a method must be devised whereby the Government shall end its operation and at the same time insure carriage of American goods under the American flag through private ownership as contemplated by the Jones act."

U. S. Must Rely on Self.

The transition of the United States from a debtor to a creditor nation has made it imperative, Lasker argued, that this country rely upon itself for carriage of its overseas trade.

"Europe owes us, governmentally and privately," he said, "some fifteen billion dollars. To pay in gold is impossible; there is not that much gold in the world. The only way that Europe can pay (to such an extent as she may pay) will be in goods, either raw materials, or manufactured or partly manufactured wares. In turn, we must find new markets, not only to absorb the surplus products which Europe formerly took from us, but to provide for the sale of many of the products which Europe shall send to us in settlement of her debt. These products, if in raw or partly manufactured state, will be brought to completed processes by American labor, but if permitted to flood our own market, and if we do not find a foreign sale for them, will so depress the price of wares at home as to threaten the prosperity of all our workers.

"These newer markets lie across the ocean; to the south in the Western hemisphere; to the east, in China and Siberia. It is the very need of trade in these markets that is the inspiration of the policy of the open door in the Far East, which means nothing more or less than free opportunity, based on merit, for exchange of wares.

"It is for these very markets that the nations of Europe which owe us vast sums of money will contend with us. And who can be so blind as not to see that Europe will, very properly in her own interest, find the ways and means to refuse us ships when we need them most, if that refusal spells her control of markets in which we would compete with her for mastery? It is well enough to say that she will not refuse us the ships if we can pay higher freights; but who supposes that foreign Governments will not be sufficiently ingenious to work out plans to control their own ships to benefit their national trade and to our disadvantage, even if by so doing they bring into their national treasuries possibly less freights than we would pay?"

Welfare of Farmer.

Further arguments by Lasker were designed to show that the welfare of the farmer is bound up with the welfare of the merchant marine, "because it is in the sale of his surpluses abroad that his entire prosperity is involved." Moreover, he said, the dream of the St. Lawrence waterway, which he predicted would become a reality, could have no assured life without an American merchant marine. "That merchant marine should be well established before the canal becomes a reality," he said, "that companies of sufficient strength may be alive to take advantage of its opening."

The United States could not hope to maintain naval equality with Great Britain, Lasker said, unless it could supply and bunker its own ships in time of war, "should that unhappily come again."

"When President Roosevelt sent our navy around the world," he said, "it had to be supplied and bunkered by foreign-flag ships. Our naval giant showed the nations of the world its feet of clay. In 1914, when the world war began, be it said to the shame of America, she possessed 15 passenger ships of such type as to be of use for naval auxiliary, while Great Britain possessed over 200 such ships. Today we possess 50 to Great Britain's 250. But when age and speed, which are the determining factors in the use of such ships for naval purposes, are considered, Great Britain's margin over us is further increased.

"It is idle to say that the 5-5-3 agreement brings us proportionate

Bipartisan Administration, as Nearly as Possible, to Be Urged for Missouri

NEW CONSTITUTION SUGGESTIONS DRAFTED

New Constitution Association Would Bring This About in Organization of Executive Department Without Doing Away With Election of State Officials Entirely and Removing Incentive to Build Up Political Machines.

Recommendations for This Branch of the State Government, Written by John M. Atkinson, Provide for Budget System in Finances, Civil Service for State Employes and the Making of All Elective Officials Ineligible to Re-election.

Proposal to Remove Incentive to Build Up Political Machines

PROTECTION of the public from the building up of personal political machines by officeholders is sought by the New Constitution Association in the recommendation of a section in Missouri's proposed new Constitution to remove the incentive. Its recommendation prohibiting officeholders from again seeking office is:

"No one of said officers shall be eligible to re-election as his own successor, or shall he, during his term of office, become a candidate for any other office, elective or appointive, or shall he be eligible to election or appointment to any other office under this Constitution or of the United States."

THE New Constitution Association of Missouri, organized several years ago to obtain the adoption of an amendment to the State Constitution providing for the calling of a convention to redraft that instrument, has chosen six major subjects on which it is preparing recommendations for changes in the Constitution to submit to the convention which convenes in Jefferson City May 15.

These are Executive Department, Taxation and Revenue, Judiciary, Education, Elections and Municipalities. Of these the proposed new article 5, to govern the Executive Department, has been completed, and is explained in detail in this article. Its preparation is largely the work of John M. Atkinson of St. Louis, former Assistant Attorney-General, former secretary to the Governor, former Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives and former chairman of the Public Service Commission, and is said to be based upon the views of a large majority of the members of the association, the membership of which includes individuals and organizations representing nearly all the business and professional groups in the State.

Since the election authorizing the State constitutional convention the opinion has been expressed rather widely that if the convention submitted to the voters of the State a radical Constitution, a Constitution differing materially in general principles with the old order in which things always had been done officially in Missouri, it would not meet with public favor and would be defeated at the polls. This has largely been the opinion of the spoilsmen in politics and official life, the ultra-conservative lawyers and the representatives of special interests who fear the adoption of a Constitution which endangers the advantages held by their interests under the present Constitution.

Objections Apparently Ignored.

The New Constitution Association, as is evidenced by its proposed article governing the Executive Department of the State government, has ignored these objections, and has prepared an article which, while it could by no means be considered radical in the sense that radicalism is the overturning of established form of government and the substitution of untried theories, contains provisions for sweeping changes in the administration of public affairs.

Considered as a whole the article provides for a State Executive Department, with the Governor as the actual responsible head of the State, and with virtually all the State administrative activities grouped directly under the Governor and directly under his control through his power of appointment and through his control of State expenditures under a budget system.

The apparent purpose of the proposed article is to bring about as nearly as possible a bipartisan administration of affairs in Missouri without doing away with the election of State officials in the usual manner.

Plan for Civil Service.

An attempt is made to provide for all positions in the State government to be under civil service, and also to extend that service to all county and city employes, though it is not clear in the draft of the article whether county and city employes would be under the State Civil Service Commission or whether local civil service authorities should be created for each county or city.

The article in general follows the lines of Gov. Hyde's ideas for a centralized State government by consolidating in a few departments all the administrative functions of the State. At the present time there are about 100 heads of departments, commissions and boards appointed by the Governor. In many instances there is an overlapping of work, which is admittedly wasteful.

Gov. Hyde obtained the passage of a number of measures by the last Legislature consolidating these departments into a few groups, but the Democratic State Committee circulated referendum petitions, under which virtually all of the Hyde consolidation bills were suspended and will be inoperative unless they are approved by a majority vote at the November election.

Apparently the reason the petitions were signed very generally was that the bills were so prepared that they legislated out of office many Democratic officeholders, instead of permitting them to serve out their terms, and the impression went out that they were intended more for Republican advantage than for State good.

While the article proposes on its face to double the salaries of all State officials, it in fact proposes an increase of about 50 per cent in salaries, all fees and extra compensation which State officials now receive being abolished.

The proposed new article is here taken up section by section, with an explanation of the points of difference from the provisions of the present Constitution, that there may be a clear public understanding of one of the most important proposals for changes in governmental system which will come before the constitutional convention.

The executive power of the State is vested by section 1 in the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor, and "such other executive and administrative commissions, boards and officers as may be provided for in this Constitution or by law," differing from the present provision in that it removes the State Superintendent of Schools from the elective State offices.

All State officials are made ineligible for re-election, election to any other office in the State, or election or appointment to any office of the United States, in section 2, it being so written in an effort to overcome the faults of the present system, under which State officials almost invariably become candidates for re-election or election to some other office and under which much of the time which should be devoted to public affairs is devoted to the building up of political machines of inefficient officeholders, whose principal duty is to promote the political ambitions of their chiefs.

Some Provisions Changed.

The present Constitution makes the Governor and Treasurer ineligible for re-election, but there is nothing which prevents them from being candidates for other offices. The provisions for four-year terms and requiring the residence in Jefferson City of all elective officers except the Lieutenant-Governor, during their terms of office, are retained.

Section 3 is a re-enactment of the provisions of the present Constitution that returns of election of State officers shall be canvassed by the two houses of the Legislature in joint session, and, in case of tie, election shall be by the Legislature.

The general duties of the Governor, outlined in section 4, seemingly differ little from those in the present Constitution, the supreme executive power being vested in him, the requirement being that he shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed and the affairs of the State efficiently and economically administered, that he shall be the conservator of the peace throughout the State, and that he shall transact all necessary business with the officers of the State government, civil and military, and of the State with other states and the United States.

These provisions constitute an enlargement upon those of the present Constitution, though to what extent probably would not be clear until there had been a Supreme Court interpretation of the language of the section. There is now no provision that the Governor shall see that the affairs of the State are economically administered, nor is there the provision that he shall transact all necessary business of the State with its officers and with other states.

Qualifications of Governor.

In section 5, fixing the qualifications of the Governor, virtually the only change is that the requirement that he be a male citizen is removed, and the only requirements are that he shall be at least 35 years old, shall have been a citizen of the United States at least 10 years and a resident of Missouri at least seven years.

The Governor is made Commander in Chief of the militia in section 6, as in the old Constitution, and is given power to call the militia into service to execute the laws, preserve order, suppress insurrection and repel invasion. The main change in this section is that under the proposed section the Governor is also given power to call "the other peace officers of the State" into service, a power which is not given him under the present Constitution. The old Constitution also does not authorize the use of the militia to "preserve order."

Restrictions are placed about the pardoning power of the Governor in section 7, the provision being that while he may grant pardons, commutations or paroles as under the present Constitution, he can do so only upon the recommendation in writing of the State Board of Control, or other agency created by law, made after a public hearing and after the recommendation has been on public file in the office of the Governor for at least 10 days.

This provision would prevent the Governor from issuing "sympathetic" pardons or secretly issuing pardons for political purposes. At the present time the State Prison Board makes recommendations in cases of pardons, but the Governor is under no legal obligation to consult the board. The Board of Control, which, under the proposed section, would pass on pardon cases, would be appointed by the Governor and would be under his influence, so that the publicity requirement apparently would be the only advantage over the present system.

Sessions of Legislature.

Some changes are proposed in section 8, governing the calling of special sessions of the Legislature. The Governor is given power to call the Legislature, or the Senate only, into special session for specific purposes, which must be mentioned in his call, and for a definite period, not longer than 30 days. At present the Governor cannot limit the length of a special session, nor can he call the Senate alone into session. Seemingly the only purpose of a session of the Senate without the House would be to confirm appointments. The provision is made that in special session the Legislature cannot consider any matter not submitted to it by the Governor, which is in the present Constitution.

A new provision in section 9 is that if the two houses of the Legislature disagree regarding date of adjournment, the Governor may adjourn both houses to any time not beyond the next regular session.

Sections 10 and 11 are to all purposes the same as the present Constitution, providing for the Governor at each session of the Legislature and at the close of his term to send messages to the Legislature giving information regarding State affairs and recommendations for legislation, and authorizing the Governor to fill by appointment all vacancies in office, unless other legal provision is made.

Additional power is given the Governor in section 12 in considering bills passed by the Legislature. As under the present Constitution he is given 10 days to approve or veto a bill if the Legislature is in session, and 30 days if the Legislature adjourns within 10 days after passing a bill, but he also is authorized to send a bill back with recommendations for amendment. If the bill is re-enacted in any form, it must be returned to the Governor for his approval, but he cannot a second time make recommendation for amendment, his province then being only to sign or veto it.

The old provision requiring that all bills and joint resolutions, except questions of adjournment, of going into joint session and of submitting amendments to the Constitution, must be submitted to the Governor for his approval, are retained in section 13.

Budget System Provided For.

The budget system, unkown in Missouri affairs, is provided for in section 14.

This provides that the fiscal year shall commence on the first day of July each year, instead of the first day of January, and that appropriations of the Legislature shall be for a period of two years and six months, instead of two years. The value of this provision is that it changes the present system under which the fiscal year ends at the time when money derived from taxation is beginning to come into the treasury, and bills incurred before the close of the two-year biennial period cannot be paid after the end of that period, thus becoming deficits, the Legislature not passing a new appropriation bill until about three months after the end of the biennal period. Under the proposed system there would be no lapse of time between the lapse of one appropriation and the beginning of the next.

In making up the budget, the Governor is directed not later than Nov. 15 before each regular session of the Legislature to obtain from the head of each department and institution itemized

CLEVELAND, O., April 15.

CAN you imagine an American city seriously trying to find out what's the matter with it? I don't mean starting an investigation—it's a poor city in America that can't have a new investigation every season—but asking for a general diagnosis. Can you imagine New York or Chicago going to the proper authorities and saying: "We're feeling bad. We've been acting queer for some time past. We've got a pain in our police force, our courts haven't been acting at all right, we haven't any appetite for justice, our innards all seem to be coated over with politics, and we make such a bad appearance in public that we're very much ashamed of ourselves. Look us over, won't you?—and tell us the whole bitter truth. If the disease is fatal, say so; but if there's any help for us, let us know what it is."

That is about what the City of Cleveland has been doing, and the report of the diagnosticians has just been published. No, Cleveland isn't any worse, perhaps, than the average city of 800,000 population. But it felt worse. The particular scandal which blemished its reputation was not of the sort that could be brazened out. If the Mayor had gone wrong or the Police Commissioner had been convicted of graft, Cleveland boosters might have continued their propaganda and advertised the inevitable cleanup as a sign of the city's progress. But the scandal was in the courts. No less a person than the Chief Justice of the Municipal Court had been put on trial for no less a crime than murder.

McGannon Case a Factor.

Judge William H. McGannon was not convicted of murder. But his two trials were of the most shockingly sensational character and disclosed his association with elements of city life which did not tend to increase respect for the judiciary. Subsequently he was tried and convicted of perjury. It was this ultra-sensational episode which made the unique survey of the criminal administration of Cleveland possible.

Dean Roscoe Pound and Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School were invited to conduct the survey. They accepted. They conducted such a survey as no American city has ever had before. They selected specialists from all over the country to cover the various aspects of the situation. None of these was from Cleveland; only one was from Ohio. An advisory board of Cleveland citizens assisted the investigators in gathering information; but so jealous were they that there should be no Cleveland influence in the actual findings that they refused to correct a typographical error which they discovered in the proofs. The result is a thoroughly ruthless document, exposing not only the weaknesses of the police, judicial and penal machinery in Cleveland, but the frailties and shortcomings of Cleveland officials as well. The truth at any cost was Cleveland's grim intent.

Shocking Murder Record.

Much of the truth was hard to swallow. Cleveland, with 800,000 population, discovered that she had six times as many murders per year as London, with 8,000,000. She had more robberies and assaults with intent to rob than all England, Scotland and Wales. Her murder rate, to be sure, was not quite as high as that of one or two cities of her class, and considerably lower than that of most of the larger cities of the South. It was, however, 50 per cent higher than the average rate in 31 large American cities, and twice as high as the murder rate in Boston, Philadelphia and New York.

Burglary insurance rates in Cleveland, it was found, were the highest in the country, being equaled in only eight other counties in the United States. Automobile theft rates were the highest in the State and six times as high as in some Ohio cities. Raymond B. Fosdick, who surveyed the police administration, did not emphasize these figures. In many ways, he pointed out, Cleveland compared favorably with other American cities; it is only when compared with European cities that its crime rate seems scandalous.

In the matter of detection and prosecution of crime, Clevelanders discovered that they had nothing to be proud of. The army intelligence test, when applied to the members of the police force, disclosed that only 17 out of 100 men had more than average intelligence, 63 out of 100 maintained the average and 20 out of 100 were mentally immature. The detective force, it was discovered, made the poorest showing of any of the police divisions. Not one of the 63 men in this division showed notably superior intelligence, while almost one-fourth of them were shown to have the mentality of children from 9 to 13 years of age. Mr. Fosdick's report not only recommended a different method of selecting men, but a complete reorganization of the system, in which authority and responsibility should be properly coupled.

How Survey Was Made.

The survey of the courts was conducted by two Boston lawyers, Reginald B. Smith and Herbert B. Ehrmann. This is probably the first time that the work of an American court has been revealed by detailed statistical appraisal. There are two criminal courts in Cleveland, the Court of Common Pleas, which deals with felonies, and the Municipal Court, which deals with lesser offenses. Both courts are elective for six-year terms, and getting themselves elected and re-elected, it would seem, consumes much of the time and energies of the Court.

Said one Judge: "In order properly to play the game it is necessary for a Judge to attend weddings, funerals, christenings, banquets, barbecues, dances, clambakes, holiday celebrations, dedications of buildings, opening nights, first showings of films, prize fights, bowling matches, lodge entertainments, church festivals and every conceivable function, national, social or religious." The surveyors did not accuse any Judges of accepting money bribes, but ruthlessly criticised a system which left the bench largely "without dignity and utterly lacking independence."

As to the personnel of the judiciary, the surveyors appealed to a large number of reputable Cleveland lawyers and then summed up their conclusion that there were just four of the 10 Municipal Court Judges holding office in 1921 who "might be said to measure up to the requirements of the office." Two of the others are credited with fair ability, three are set down as mediocre, while one "has apparently no qualification worth mentioning." On the whole, says the report, the personnel of the municipal bench is "inferior in quality and ineffectual in character."

Confessing Her Sins.

Once again, can you imagine an American city confessing its sins in this wholesale fashion? And what do you think would happen to it? Isn't it absolutely necessary, in order to preserve a semblance of order, that such general condemnation should be prohibited? Punish somebody, of course. Find a goat and sacrifice it; but don't let the rabble get on to the fact that the police are inefficient, the detectives a lot of boneheads and the courts inadequate to the needs of city life. Doesn't any

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

The Kansas City Election.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN OFFERING their respective explanations or congratulations, neither party takes account of the strong trend to independent thinking and action; for neither party appears to mention two factors that undoubtedly played a prominent part in the Kansas City decision.

1. Unmistakable signs of popular protest against official lawlessness in defiance of fundamental rights.

2. Respect and approval for the intellectual power and moral courage of Senator Reed.

There is a persistent demand for a return to the Constitution. During the war we suspended it to save it. Now we want it revived to save ourselves. The vast majority of the people want the law enforced; they admit its protection is not adequate; but they prefer to bear the ills of passing unlawful conditions to a surrender of those treasured principles, upon which depends their ultimate escape from oppression and absolutism. When the holder of a little brief authority now tells them how to conduct themselves they demand to see the warrant.

Even Federalists begin to suspect that Jefferson had a good nose for danger. They bless him for having forced upon our Constitution the fundamental guarantees of liberty that admit of neither doubt nor misinterpretation. They know that these guarantees can be preserved only by a stand-up fight, regardless of incidental issues, however grave those issues may otherwise be. Without doubt this sentiment had great weight in the election; and it is safe to say that to this extent the decision is fairly indicative of the public mind of this country.

Senator Reed seemed a trifle inconsistent when he justified his participation in the campaign by his residence in Kansas City and criticised Gov. Hyde's appearance as a nonresident. The election did not turn solely on local issues. One urged principles equally important throughout the country. The other defended his official conduct when and where it was attacked. The result is accepted as Reed's triumph, not because he went to his party's rescue in a local dilemma, but because with consistent and unalterable determination he spoke the truth as he sees it upon great public questions. He won largely because the people love a brave man. Undoubtedly his strength is also his weakness. The cleavage between the old and the new school of representative government is becoming more and more marked. His fate rests with his party's ability to discriminate between respect for public will and subserviency to popular whim. His hope is that his party may dismiss all differences upon minor issues, and confirm as its candidates its one statesman who in the hour of stress and confusion makes the good fight for the independence of our country and for the salvation of our institutions.

No doubt the next contest will be had between the same old parties—at least in name. But even a Republican may wonder whether the Democratic party of Missouri will repeat the tragedy of Benton's finish, and commit political suicide by the repudiation of her most distinguished national figure. Republicans may well reflect what in either contingency will be their party's responsibility with respect to its nomination.

After all, how much satisfaction or benefit do we derive from representation by men who seem to be pursued by harassing suspicion that they might be trapped into a political conviction, or into a statement sufficiently clear to embarrass them in the inevitable effort to evade its consequences.

Would Tax Coal Operator.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I NOTE from an editorial in the Post-Dispatch that you are not particularly averse to Government ownership as applied to the mines, railroads, etc. I take it that you do not desire to see either operated by the present owners, through the Government.

Actual Government ownership would prove, no doubt, far better than what we have at present. It is the last resort, however, and I am not sure we have exhausted every means of avoiding it. Why not tax the coal from the mines. Suppose the operators were, at present, properly taxed; taxed to the point that production would be absolutely necessary! Could they afford to trifle with the people's interests as they are at this time? After all, their right to hold and operate is merely a grant by the people. Their franchise is very valuable and they should pay for it to insure service to the people. I am confident the taxation method will produce the goods. The tax must be placed on the franchise to operate, not on the coal produced. Strike or no strike, the tax should operate just the same, day and night. Then if they decide they can not operate them they can let go and the Government can take the job.

DEMOCRACY'S OPPORTUNITY.

Elections to be held next November will determine whether or not Congress is to remain under the control of the Republicans for another two years. The Democrats must hold their own and win more than 85 districts now Republican to become the majority in the lower house.

That the voters of the country are sullen and wrathful against the incompetence and cowardice of Congress as it is constituted is revealed by a multitude of signs. The failure of Congress to make any substantial reduction in our crushing tax burdens, its waste of public moneys, causing a deficit this year approaching $600,000,000, its constant augmentation of the army of Federal agents and inspectors, through the creation of new bureaus, sent out into the states to regulate even the personal and private affairs of the citizens, its supine submission to every lobby that seeks to get its hands into the public treasury, these things have aroused the voters of this country as very real grievances.

The Democratic party is gleeful; it is relying upon this known widespread feeling of indignation to sweep its candidates into office, and, perhaps to give it control of Congress. But is it certain that the outraged voter is going to cast a mere ballot of protest? What constructive remedy has the Democratic party to offer him that gives him any hope beyond a mere substitution of evils? He must have something more substantial than a Democratic platform denunciation of extravagance and oppression. He has heard that before from both parties. He knows how little it is worth.

The independent voters of this country, those who hold the balance of power, have, in fact, come to look upon both parties as mere selfish seekers after power and plunder. They trust neither out of their sight. And their growing number and prevalence of distrust is the result largely of the fact that neither party has any longer a creed; the one object of the leaders of each appears to be to catch and capitalize the sentiment of the hour, regardless of what the ultimate consequences may be.

Attachment to party is no longer a matter of conviction; it cannot be, since there are no longer any fundamental principles to which either party is committed. The only bonds, therefore, are personal attachment to leaders and the hope of personal reward. The common good, the preservation of liberty, the contentment and happiness of the whole people through a firm adherence to tried and tested principles of government, these objects have been wholly abandoned.

Jefferson organized the Democratic party as the guardian of liberty under constitutional government in this country and dedicated it to the primary task of preserving freedom through a steadfast attachment to certain necessary fundamental principles. These principles were particularly that, in the maintenance of our dual system, the Federal Government must forever remain strictly limited as the collective representative of the states in their national and external concerns, and that the states must always retain the exclusive power to control their domestic affairs. Such were the safeguards embodied in the Constitution. A single, unified government seated at Washington, he declared time and again, meant the end of liberty for us and failure for our great experiment in attempting to govern ourselves without a master.

During the last 20 years of his life Jefferson repeatedly sounded an alarm against the tendencies even then operating to magnify the Federal power at the expense of self-government in the states. And he stamped the Federalist party, then abetting that process, the "Centralizers," thus distinguishing his own Democratic party by its opposition as a strictly constitutional party. Madison, Monroe, Jackson, all of his successors in leadership, remained faithful to the great principles of the party's founder.

But where are these principles today? Can they be found in any Democratic platform of the last 20 years? They cannot. The Democratic party has not only abandoned them; it has actually incriminated itself in the centralizing process. It was the votes of Democrats in Congress in 1913 that made possible the proposal to the states that they surrender to the Federal Government unlimited power to levy direct taxes upon their citizens. It was the conferring of this power that has enabled and encouraged Congress since further to invade the reserved rights of the states and draw all authority to Washington.

Again, it was Democratic votes in Congress and in the State Legislatures that made possible that other vicious assault upon Jeffersonian principles, the prohibition amendment, which has substituted the Federal spy for the local peace officer in every community in the land and has injected tyranny into the Constitution.

If the Democratic party wishes to win the approaching congressional elections, if it wishes to endure as a party deserving a following interested beyond the mere hope of office, it must rededicate itself to the principles of the great leader whose name it now so unworthily bears. It must arouse—as it can arouse—the people of this country to the destruction of civil liberty now rapidly going on through the transfer of all power to an oppressive bureaucracy in Washington. It must not only emphasize this danger; it must pledge itself to a definite remedy, a return to a limited Federal Government, with the states again placed in control of their local concerns.

As the Post-Dispatch has previously pointed out in its editorial appeal to the Governors, it is the unlimited power to levy direct taxes conferred on Congress that is working oppression and corruption through our whole system and tempting the Federal Government into the role of universal intermeddler and regulator of all our concerns. The money thus wrung from the states historically belongs to them, to be collected in their own income taxes and expended by them for their own improvements.

There never was a period in our history more fateful than the present nor one in which the great party of Jefferson can play so noble and profound a part. It is, in fact, the very crisis the party was created to avert. Will it keep the faith?

If the Democratic party fails it is not impossible that the Republican party will undertake the task. From the Governors of New England and other Northern states the Post-Dispatch has received reassuring answers to its appeal against the march of Federal empire. And unofficial but influential Republicans like Elihu Root have already recognized the danger of centralization and earnestly admonished Washington against this course.

For the Democratic party to perform this task would be a traditional duty, or, as has been said, a keeping of the faith, but the service will be welcomed from any party that has the vision to see.

"PORK!" WHEN THERE IS NO PORK.

Certain of our brethren of the press, mostly in the East, have become considerably exercised because the House inserted $15,000,000 for river and harbor improvement in the budget bill. The press critics pronounce this act a fracture of the budget principle and join in the howl of "pork barrel."

The zeal of the editors for honest appropriations is gratifying but their knowledge of the matters on which they comment in this instance seems nonexistent. The $15,000,000 for river and harbor improvement was inserted to save money already invested, to complete unfinished—and, until finished, useless—operations on the Mississippi.

Even were the appropriation added for new construction any knowledge of waterway progress on the Mississippi ought to prevent writers from classifying Mississippi projects with the familiar type of pork-barrel favors which in the past have been lavished on obscure and impossible creeks. As the Philadelphia Bulletin well says: "Discriminating furtherance of public works in a systematic manner is one thing and wholesale grabbing of 'pork' is quite another."

We fully agree. The Mississippi appropriation is the "one thing" and not the "quite another," as a dispassionate examination of the facts will reveal.

RELATIVITY IN THE POLICE COURT.

An English periodical contains the statement that a London coal heaver, charged with biting his wife, was sentenced to read Einstein's Theory of Relativity. While it may appear at first blush that the punishment was drastic out of all proportion to the crime, calmer judgment will approve the Magistrate's decision as extraordinarily sagacious. It served the double end of satisfying the law and promoting the cause of higher education.

How many men would read the doctrine except under penal sentence? And how many would bite their wives in the face of such a prospect? In either event, the plan is a marked success.

In the face of urgent and repeated admonitions that society has outgrown the law, this incident is a hopeful sign. It portends a more enlightened and forward-looking jurisprudence. It may be suggested that such a procedure would tend to make the criminal element the most cultured, but it can be replied that it is the element which needs the most culture.

THE OMINOUS SHADOW.
(From Memphis Commercial Appeal.)

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

JUST as life is ever changing, so it is changing in American cities. City people are going to the country. Good roads and the automobile have ended their exile, and they are going home. Not all of them are back, but the number increases all the time.

It is not difficult to foresee the effect of this movement. The city will become a different place. The city, which has been called the cradle of civilization, will become little more than a vast multitude of people. All cultural and spiritual influences in the city begin to feel this change coming. When the movement to modern residence districts began, these influences followed them in many of the cities. In St. Louis, for instance, the churches followed to the West End. Nor were they alone in trying to keep in touch with their communities.

But it was not possible for the churches and other fruits of long and close dwelling in the city to follow their communities beyond the edge of town. In St. Louis they can only look off into St. Louis County; they cannot follow into the country itself. They cannot be things upon wheels to go chasing about from the River des Peres to Wild Horse Creek. But the communities sustaining them will go beyond Wild Horse Creek. What is more, those communities will never come back.

This is a problem for the city. It is a problem for the American people, but we shall not realize this latter until we have all read "Main Street." The problem of the city is more immediate and easier realized. No doubt it is worrying the churches; it certainly worries those secular influences which have helped to make the city what it is. It is the sort of people most active in these influences which goes to the country. The city needs those people—needs them terribly. That is no sign they will ever come back. They never will.

Most of us see from day to day the change in those who go to the country. They are more like the people we knew when we lived in the country. They are interested in the weather. They read the almanac. The zodiac interests them. They like quiet and that serenity of spirit which the city cannot give us. Why did Virgil, a favorite of Augustus, like to live in the country? Because he derived from the soil. He was not like Horace, who derived from the city. Horace liked to sit at the right hand of Caesar. He liked wine, women and song. Virgil was a quiet spirit and apart. So do all country dwellers become. The babble of city folk is soon hushed by Nature. They can hold out against her when a throng of them goes to the country for a day, but Nature has only to catch them alone and they are hers!

The "village virus," as Sinclair Lewis calls it, is fast laying its hold upon us, to the peril of what we have counted the chief achievements of our civilization. We can still have the symphony orchestra and the sermons of our modern Henry Ward Beechers by the radio broadcaster—but who is to keep the orchestras and the churches up in the city? Meanwhile, the exodus goes on like a flowing stream. Beyond the purlieu of the city every height is the potential home of some harried one who would look out on pastoral peace, and every vale invites us in screaming billboards to the solace of Nature. Yet to go, we know quite well, means to forsake in the city most of the things that have made cities worth while. It is in some ways a one-sided trade—the city for the village; but we are closer to flowers and birds, to clouds and frogs, to the pure morning and the thrushed gloaming, than most of us think. So we are going—leaving the city to do the best it can, making the village theme for a best-seller.

EASTER.

SINCE that Easter day of old,
When Mary Magdalene first told
Of the tomb of mystery,
Near the shores of Galilee,
Saw our Lord that day appear,
Heard His message first of cheer,
We have had the hope to dare
Bow our heads in Easter prayer.
Let the loud hosannas ring!
Christ today is Lord and King!
While Easter lilies, gleaming pale
Through the purple, incense veil,
And chanting music doth declare
Christ is risen—gone is care.
Hark, the solemn, glad refrain;
Halleluiah once again!

WHY FARMERS NO LONGER PRAY FOR RAIN.

(Jack Blanton in Monroe County, Mo., Appeal.)

"I don't hear anybody praying for rain," said a farmer friend as he punched the mud out of his wagon wheels last Friday. "Just about the same number you heard when crops were perishing from the drouth last August," the Horse Editor replied. This raises the question, why do Christian people no longer supplicate a throne of grace for favorable weather for cropping operations? One reason is their fear of being laughed at by sinners who sit in the seat of the scornful. Another is that they would rather do without temporal blessings than go to the trouble of asking for them. Another is the daily weather report. If more rain is predicted when folks sigh for sunshine, or if a fair and warmer sign is displayed when the earth is as dry as a bootleggerless town, it takes a lot more faith than was once required to pray for a change in program. All of which recalls an episode in a pray-for-rain meeting in Monroe County back in pioneer days. Uncle Jimps Dysart, a famous old preacher, was present. When called on to lead the supplications for rain he prefaced his prayer by remarking: "All right, brethren, I'm willing to pray, but it won't get us anywhere as long as the wind is in the west." That's how the average brother feels about asking for settled weather when he already has a Weather Bureau tip to the effect that more rain is on the way. The philosopher who observed that too much knowledge is a dangerous thing doubtless had a situation of this sort in mind.

A pro-German owner of some 15 or 20 yellow journals, who did all he could to hinder America during the war, almost succumbed when this country and Great Britain entered into a treaty. WHEN WINGS UNFOLD.

LET me not mourn too much when those I love
Unfold their wings and fly away from me;
Let me forget my loneliness and tears,
Rejoicing, spite of grief, that they are free.

Let me catch glimpses of their happiness
Thro' all the troubled darkness here below;
I must not spend my precious hours in tears,
Waiting for the time to come for me to go.

But let my life with service be so filled
That grief can find no lodging place to stay;
So, when the "one clear call" rings out for me,
The waiting years will seem but yesterday!

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

AUSTRIA, OLD AND NEW.

George E. Roberts in Our World.

THE old Austrian empire was composed of many inharmonious racial elements, but the various sections were fairly complementary in resources; they needed each other and supplied one another's wants so obviously that years ago a distinguished leader among the Czechs declared that if there was no such organization as the Austro-Hungarian political state it would be necessary to organize something that would function socially in its place. It united the people economically to their advantage, as they quickly found when divided according to the terms of the peace treaty. Naturally, the first impulse of each group was to assure its own economic independence, but it did not take long to show the impracticability and folly of that idea, and to bring them into negotiations for friendly trade relations. A loan of 500,000,000 crowns recently voted by the Parliament of Czecho-Slovakia to the Austrian Government, to help tide that Government over the present emergency and give social stability to the country, is one of the most striking evidences of the new relations that are developing. Czecho-Slovakia, which so recently considered itself in bondage to Austria, is co-operating in this action with Great Britain, France and Italy, all of whom were lately in arms against Austria and are now lending her money to stabilize her currency and restore her industries.

THE PIONEERS OF THE WEST.

From the Kansas City Star.

WHAT a tide of life it was that broke past the Mississippi barrier just before the middle of the last century and poured over the great plains! A tide that overflowed the whole country only to break into spray, as someone has said, on the hundredth meridian, where scanty rainfall turned it back. Stalwart men and women they were, the bulk of them God-fearing, sober folk; but mixed with them irresponsible adventurers, driven by the desire for change. They streamed along the trails in endless processions of covered wagons, drawn by horses or oxen. Diverging here and there, they took up the land, put up rude shacks, broke the sod, and began to bring the empire of the vast Western valley under the plow. This was the history of Missouri and Kansas, and Iowa and Nebraska, and Minnesota and the Dakotas. The sons and daughters of the West are too little mindful of the hardship and toil, the ceaseless striving and self-denial, that entered into the goodly heritage which is now theirs. The achievements of the first settlers of the continent are recognized in every school book. The men and women who drove back the frontier were worthy descendants of the builders of Virginia and Massachusetts.

TARIFF ON BOOKS.

From the New Republic.

THERE is one feature of the Fordney tariff bill which we think our readers will agree with us in pronouncing wholly indefensible. That is the new plan of taxing books. Publishers and booksellers have never desired artificial "protection" for their business; the majority, indeed, have generally rightly recognized that the importation of books might be freed from all tariff restrictions whatever. Those who will really be punished fall chiefly into three classes. These are, first, wealthy collectors of books who in the last 40 years have brought many thousands of rare and intrinsically valuable books to America, a large part of which eventually find their way into public libraries. And most of these collectors, whether or not they have been able finally to give their books outright to the public, have placed them freely at the disposal of scholars and students. In the second place, public libraries throughout the country will be punished; but those which will suffer most will be the great libraries of our larger cities and the libraries of all colleges and universities. And in the third place, scientists, scholars and students in all branches of learning will be grievously punished both directly and indirectly, through the crippling of libraries.

Events in the Social World

End of Lent Ushers in "Little Social Season," Bringing Many Events, Including Half a Dozen Weddings of Interest, With Pre-Nuptial Parties.

LENT ended officially at noon yesterday, and the "Little Social Season" has begun, to terminate in June, when the summer heat compels St. Louisans to migrate northward to their respective cottages, or to Europe, where the Passion Play, to be presented at Oberammergau for the first time in twelve years, is attracting many.

During the coming fortnight, the Easter brides will hold forth, and there are a half dozen weddings of unusual interest with their prenuptial parties and rehearsals, on the social calendar, to say nothing of the much-talked of Junior League Follies, in preparation for which the debutantes and young matrons are rehearsing daily, almost hourly, in order to excel the already high standard set for Junior League shows.

Tuesday Miss Charlotte Nelson Lawnin will become the bride of James E. Crawford at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, and on the same day Miss Margaret Garvey will become the bride of Gustave Charles Taussig.

On the following day the brilliant wedding of Miss Elizabeth Shapleigh Kennard and Harold Taylor Jolley will take place at the St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church.

Miss Henrietta Adele Butler will become the bride of Earle Jerome Bernheimer of Kansas City at the Columbian Club April 24, while on the next day there will be two interesting weddings. Miss Florence Funsten will be married to Alfred W. Brown and Miss Alvera Piatt will become the bride of Richard C. Alt. Both will be home ceremonies.

The marriage of Miss Janet Gregg and Asa Brookings Wallace will take place April 29, at Christ Church Cathedral and on the same day Miss Elleanore Williams will be married to Lieut. Edward Palmer Earle at the home of her aunt, Mrs. James D. Streett.

Second in interest to the Junior League Follies are the supper dances which will follow the Follies on two evenings. Monday evening, April 24, following the opening performance at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, will find most of the audience in the Statler Hotel ballroom. Many reservations have been made also for a similar affair on Wednesday evening, April 26, at the Jefferson Hotel. Mrs. Marion C. Blossom is chairman of the Dance Committee, other members of which are Mrs. Lears Lehmann, Mrs. Tom K. Smith and Mrs. Roy Kercheval.

Some of the prettiest society chorus girls of the Follies will take part in the cabaret entertainment at the supper dances, and all of the principals and chorus members will attend. Many large parties will be the rule, prominent women reserving several tables for their guests. Reservations for either night may be made by phoning Mrs. Blossom, Forest 8770.

Among those reserving tables are: Mmes. Sears Lehmann, Roy Kercheval, L. D. Breckinridge, Guy Oliver, B. F. Bush, Orion Willis, Oliver Richards, Charles Morrill, Sam Kennard, Robert A. Holland Jr., Donaldson Lambert, Herbert A. Parker, A. A. Busch, Webster Tilton, Charles Lucas, Tom White, Allen Wyman, Lewis Rumsey, Joe Lewis, Eugene Tittmann, B. J. McMann, Theron Catlin, J. Lionberger Davis, Henry Garneau, William Claggett; Misses Alice Giraldin, Julia Tyler, Dorothy Stewart, Vesta Reed and Juliette Reyburn, and Messrs. Earl Cotton, Dr. O. J. Wilhelmi, Roland Gaupel, Ira Fischer, Edward Grant, John McKinney, Dr. Marsh Pitzman and William Robertson.

Among the solo numbers for the Follies, which will be presented with a bigger cast, more lavish stage settings and costumes than ever before, will be the opening solo of Mrs. Dan W. Jones, in the "Wow" number of the first act; the "Can't You Understand" song with Miss Roberta Lewis and Dick Upshaw; Miss Annie Laurie Warmack, soloist with the "Old Black Joe" chorus; Miss Gloria Geisinger and Nolan Hussey in "The Irish Nora" song; Lansden McCandless in "Don Juan," a Spanish fantasy, and Miss Florence Leland and Clarence Maloy in a dance number.

Formal announcement was made Friday of the engagement of Miss Katherine Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oreon E. Scott of 5211 Westminster place, and Theodore Mitchell Wall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Wall Sr. of Maryland terrace. The announcement was made by means of notes written by the prospective bride to her intimate friends.

The bride is a graduate of Lindenwood College and the Moody Institute in Chicago, and has attended Washington University. Prior to her marriage she was engaged in missionary work in Arua.

Capt. Mather was educated abroad. He served five years with the Royal Canadian Artillery, and was decorated several times for bravery under fire during the late war.

Dr. George Norton of St. Michael and All Angel's Church, will be followed by a large reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gregg.

Both the bride and her fiance are popular, and because of the social prominence of the families, the wedding will be one of the most brilliant of the spring season. The prospective bride has chosen a large bridal party to attend her. Mrs. Clarence King, formerly Miss Marion Gregg, will be her sister's matron of honor, and Miss Eleanor Simmons, Queen of Love and Beauty at the last Veiled Prophet ball, Miss Mary McKeen, Miss Grace and Janet Wallace, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Mary Etta Randolph and Miss Elizabeth Taylor of Little Rock, have been asked to attend Miss Gregg as bridesmaids. Washington Ready for a Busy Easter Social Season

Notable Program of Events Planned for D. A. R. Visitors Who Are Arriving in Capital for Convention.

20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Washington tomorrow will begin its little season that will run a brief six weeks with many informal Easter parties. Another feature of the Easter festival will be the annual parade on Connecticut avenue that rivals in effectiveness the famous parades of Fifth avenue and the board walk at Atlantic City.

Washington's Easter parade is rendered doubly notably because of the notables that take part in it. The paraders include diplomats from many lands, sedate Justices of the Supreme Court and a Cabinet Minister here and there.

The brightness is especially welcome inasmuch as the past week has been one of almost total social eclipse due to the fact that it was Holy Week. Few entertainments had been held and these were of the most informal character.

Card Party at Russian Embassy.

One of the delightful functions of Easter week that will also serve a worthy cause is the card party and tea to be given at the Russian Embassy on April 19 for the Russian relief, of which Princess Cantacuzene is chairman. Princess Bertha Cantacuzene has organized a group of popular debs and subdebs to act as waitresses. These include Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt, Miss Laughlin, Miss Cecilia McCallum, Miss Anne Hamlin and Miss Lindsay Wood.

Many Missourians are numbered on the list of patronesses and members of the various committees of the Dixie ball which will be held at the Willard Hotel on Monday night. This will be the only set function of Easter Monday, and it is expected that the ball will be a success.

A novel idea was promulgated here in the debutante ball of which Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Coolidge and other notable women will be patronesses. Among the Missouri names on the list are Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, Mrs. Joseph Folk, Mrs. James A. Reed and Mrs. Selden P. Spencer. The affair will be given for worthy charities of the city.

The silver jubilee of the Pen Woman's League, which will be held at Wardman Park Inn for three days beginning April 25, will attract many out-of-town literary workers to the Capital. Various delegations from the several states will be welcomed at the state booths and in the Missouri booth the hostesses will be Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, Mrs. Cleveland Newton and Mrs. I. V. McPherson.

Cantilever Shoes Benefit Weak Arches

We claim that if everyone would start wearing Cantilever Shoes at sixteen years of age, there would be few, if any, men and women with weak feet, fallen arches, etc. However, if we didn't say this early enough to help you keep your arches strong, we can help you now—unless you ought first to consult a foot specialist. In that event, we can help him to help you.

The number of people in this country who have weak feet, or a kindred foot trouble, is so many million that we hesitate to publish it. Practically all of these cases could have been avoided.

A notable program of events has been planned in their honor. Among the distinguished speakers who will address them during their stay are the Princess Cantacuzene, the French Ambassador, the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes; John Temple Graves, Hon. Charles W. Burke, Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Capt. Guy Empey, Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, president-general of the D. A. R., and greetings from Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, founder of the same organization.

Two pilgrimages will be made by the delegates. The first will be to Arlington Cemetery to lay wreaths on the grave of the Unknown Soldier, and the other will be to Mount Vernon to pay their annual tribute at the tomb of George and Martha Washington.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, who is chaplain-general of the D. A. R., will give a tea for the Missouri delegation on Tuesday. Mrs. Joseph Folk also will be a hostess in their honor on the same date.

Congressional Club Tea.

The Congressional Club will give a tea on April 20 in honor of the wives of the Missouri delegation in Congress. Mrs. Edgar Ellis is in charge of the arrangements.

So far as the White House was concerned, it was very dull socially. The President stepped aside from official duties, however, to attend the joint birthday party of Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of War Weeks and Representative Winslow, all of whom were born on April 11, in different years, Secretary Hughes being 60 years old, Secretary Weeks 62 and Representative Winslow 61. The dinner was given by Representative and Mrs. Winslow and the President seemed to greatly enjoy the good-natured humor that prevailed and the birthday party of two of his "Cabinet kids."

Interesting visitors in Washington during the past week has been the former Premier of Greece and Madame Venizelos. This world character has been lavishly entertained, and proved quite the lion of the hour. With his wife he is making an extended tour of America and St. Louis will be included in his itinerary.

A tremendous social success has been achieved in Washington by Mrs. Stanley Rinehart, who in the literary world is Mary Roberts Rinehart, the novelist. Mrs. Rinehart, who is spending the winter with her husband, who is stationed at the Veterans' Bureau, has a crammed calendar. She is a delightfully gay little woman and has many friends aside from those won by her writings.

Woman Seeks Missing Husband.

Mrs. Allie Bowlin of Van Buren, Ark., has asked that the Post-Dispatch help find her husband, William Arthur Bowlin, from whom she has not heard since his disappearance, Sept. 26, 1921. Bowlin is 28 years old, 5 feet 6 inches in height, weighed 133 pounds, and is of dark complexion.

Two of the Most Important Purchases of Rare and Valuable

In the History of St. Louis

Two distinct collections are included in these impressive purchases. The famous collector of Persian Rugs, Parsegh of Ispahan, Persia, had shipped these beautiful specimens to A. M. Apcar & Company, Yokohama, Japan, who in turn shipped them to New York. Learning of this, we expended every effort and were able to catch this shipment before it was offered for sale in New York. These singularly beautiful Rugs are now in our Oriental Rug Department, unpacked and on display.

By like promptness we secured another exclusive collection of Persian Rugs from the largest importer in the world and these unusually fine specimens are also now on display.

It is safe to say that with the addition of these two remarkable collections our own collection of Oriental Rugs exceeds in scope and magnitude any in the West and is equal to the finest collection in New York, London or Paris.

Unusual circumstances conspired to enable us to make these purchases at substantial concessions. Our prices in turn are consistently low and early selections are advised, in view of the higher prices anticipated this Fall on all Persian Rugs. The following are a few of the items.

Mossuls

The best quality. Heavy pile. Soft and silky. Beautiful colorings in various and rare Persian designs. Sizes about 3 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft.

$50.00 to $57.50

Dozars in Lillihans, Irans and Teherans

There are 120 of these magnificent Dozars. Closely woven and heavy pile. Excellent quality of wool. A variety of wonderful Persian designs. Sizes 4 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft.

$87.50 to $125.00

Araks in Room Sizes

These extremely beautiful rugs are shown in dark blue and mulberry shades, in all-over and some of the older and rarer Persian designs. This lot of Araks is the very best we have ever received. The sizes are 8 ft. by 10 ft. to 14 ft. by 24 ft. The prices are remarkably moderate.

Kurdistans

200 Fine Sarouks

The Sarouks in this lot are the very best weaves from Sultanibad, Persia. Extra heavy pile. Most beautiful colors, especially the light and dark blue, old rose and mulberry. Sizes 4 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft. 6 in.

$175.00 to $300.00

Royal Sarouk Carpets

This lot consists of the very finest weaves. The designs are traditionally Persian. The colorings are blue, old gold and mulberry shades. The sizes are from 8 ft. by 10 ft. to 13 ft. by 23 ft. Prices will be found quite low for rugs of this character.

Chinese Rugs

How to Make Grape Jelly From Bottled Grape Juice

Inexpensive and Takes Only Ten Minutes

By Ann Proctor

You can make the finest grape jelly you ever tasted, in ten minutes, from bottled grape juice at a cost of only 7 or 8 cents for a big six-ounce glass. This jelly is much better flavored than that made by old methods requiring unripe grapes, because grape juice is pressed from ripe, full-flavored grapes. This is the way to make it: Measure out 4 cups (1-qt bottle) of grape juice and 7½ level cups (3¼ lbs.) of sugar in large saucepan, stir and bring to boil. Add at once 1 bottle (scant cup) of CERTO, stirring constantly and bring to hard boil for one minute. Remove from fire, skim and pour into glasses at once.

This makes 15 six-ounce glasses of the very finest grape jelly for only 7 or 8 cents a glass, and it's so easy even a child can do it. CERTO is pure concentrated fruit pectin (Mother Nature's Jell Maker), the use of which is so highly endorsed by government authorities and cooking experts and is obtainable from most any grocer or druggist. Accompanying each bottle of CERTO is a book giving nearly a hundred recipes for making all kinds of jams, jellies and marmalades by famous CERTO Process, which takes only 1 minute's boiling and never fails. For extra free copies of the CERTO Book of Recipes write Pectin Sales Company, Inc., Dept. 182, Rochester, N. Y.

IMPORTANT: Be sure to make your Strawberry, Raspberry, Blackberry and Cherry Jam and Currant Jelly this year with CERTO. Costs less, looks and tastes better, and never fails.

Keeping a Child's Hair Beautiful

What a Mother Can Do To Keep Her Child's Hair Healthy—Fine, Soft and Silky—Bright, Fresh-Looking and Luxuriant

THE beauty of your child's hair depends upon the care you give it. Shampooing it properly is always the most important thing.

When your child's hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because the hair has not been shampooed properly.

When the hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating mothers, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and it does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your child's hair look, just follow this simple method:

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water. Then wet the hair and scalp with clear warm water. Pour the Mulsified evenly over the hair and rub it thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly—always using clear, fresh, warm water.

Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before.

You can easily tell when the hair is perfectly clean, for it will be soft and silky in the water.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing, the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want your child to always be remembered for its beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage—and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

A Timely Event of Importance—

Stylish-Stout
Sveltline System

at Radically Reduced Prices

One Week—
April 17th to 22d, Inclusive

THOUSANDS of fully developed women have found there is a wonderful satisfaction and comfort in wearing "Stylish-Stout" underwear. Experience has proven that so-called "extra-size" underwear is very uncomfortable, as the garments are not proportioned correctly. Some manufacturers think if they make "extra sizes" a little larger all over they have stout underwear. The results are the garments pinch at one point and pull at another. The materials bunch and gather and do not wear satisfactorily.

Stylish-Stout Undergarments are made over the "Sveltline System." The patterns are the results obtained by experts after years of specializing in designing stout sizes exclusively. Special attention is given to comfort as well as practical service. There are more yards of materials to assure ample room around shoulders, upper arms, waist and hips. The special patented features provide reinforcements of extra materials and tape where wear is the greatest.

Wilson's Health Better Than at Any Time Since Breakdown in 1919

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Former President Woodrow Wilson is in better health today than at any time since his breakdown in September, 1919. He is able to walk around his home, for instance, without the assistance of a cane or the support of a companion. His voice is clear. He does more work every day.

This constant improvement has surprised as well as pleased physicians. Not long ago Dr. Charles Mayo of Rochester, Minn., visited Mr. Wilson and pronounced his condition as remarkable. He attributed the restoration almost entirely to Mr. Wilson's indomitable will.

Mr. Wilson has obeyed his physician's instructions implicitly and has not attempted to engage in public controversy or debate. The temptation to do so has been overwhelming. He hasn't written any books for publication as yet, nor has he accepted any of the numerous opportunities offered him to write for newspapers on current events. He conceives the duty of an ex-President is to keep silent. He has steadfastly refused to do anything that might embarrass the incumbent President. In this course Mr. Wilson is said to feel a certain sense of self-satisfaction, for he believes his example is in contrast to the activity of ex-Presidents during his own term as President.

Mr. Wilson lives a quiet life and only occasionally is visible to Washington people. He rides in his automobile around the parks almost daily. He has been attending vaudeville Saturday nights and lately has been taking in the matinees. He received a remarkable ovation last Wednesday when he attended a matinee of Ziegfeld Follies.

BRITONS GLOOMY; GOSSIP DENIES CUT IN INCOME TAX

Budget to Be Presented May 1 Said to Continue Rate of Six Shillings on the Pound

PUBLIC DISTURBED BY AIRPLANE CRASH

By the Associated Press

LONDON, April 15.—In few things is the average Britisher more interested than in the size of his income tax and it is sad news he is hearing these days that there is small probability of a reduction for some time in his present tax rate of 6 shillings the pound, or 30 per cent. (This is comparable for the man of $5000 or less income with the 4 per cent normal income tax imposed in the United States.)

Some time ago the British Treasury sent forward word that there was a possibility of an early reduction in the tax by at least a shilling, but it is declared now the budget to be presented May 1 makes no provision for any reduction. The intended economies through which it was hoped the tax might be clipped cannot be effected in time, it is said, while income from such sources as the sale of left-over war stocks cannot be counted upon to make up any of the deficit which would result from a lowering of the tax.

In addition, it is pointed out, the excess of profits duty has been discontinued, and the Treasury has to provide for meeting the interest on the American debt.

The English public, particularly that growing portion of it which occasionally travels by air, experienced a disagreeable thrill when news came the other day of the fatal collision between the London and Paris air expresses and much interest has been aroused in efforts now announced by the air ministry to seek means of avoiding such accidents in the future. This was one form of accident from which it was believed air travel was reasonably secure, as an expert mathematician has figured that the chances of such a collision are less than one in a million. None the less, now that the possibility has been shown, even with illimitable space above, on both sides and several hundred feet clearway beneath the traveling planes, preventive measures are being considered. It is believed a system of signal lamps, augmented by wireless for use in fogs, ultimately will be evolved by the ministry in co-operation with the British and French operating companies.

Another Arthur Balfour, who is as prominent in business as the new Earl of Balfour of Washington conference fame is in the political world, is on his way to Washington to participate in America's ancient and honorable pastime of revising the tariff. As deputy president of the British Chamber of Commerce, Balfour will endeavor to convince the American Government and people of the disastrous effect of the pending tariff on international economics, and particularly on the Sheffield high-speed steel industry. As American manufacturers supply 89 per cent of American domestic requirements in steel. Balfour hopes concessions for the Sheffield product can be obtained.

The British have not forgotten their war veterans. Sixty-three thousand disabled soldiers have been trained as skilled laborers since the war, under the Government's industrial training plants, Minister of Labor Thomas MacNamara has informed the House of Commons.

Twenty-three thousand are now in training, and there is a waiting list of 29,000. Money grants totaling £3,500,000 have been given to 112,000 ex-service men. Appointments have been found for 65,000 officers, with 14,000 still on the waiting list.

The number of British firms on King George's roll of honor—those who have pledged to give ex-service men preference in employment—exceeds 30,000, and they are employing 354,000 disabled men. Mr. MacNamara said his own staff consisted of 21 per cent of disabled soldiers and that Government contracts would go only to the firms on the King's honor roll.

From golfing headquarters at St. Andrews has gone forth an appeal for funds to finance Great Britain's team which will go to America in August to compete in the American championship tournament. In every golf club throughout the land the question of who is to constitute the team is receiving much attention.

Most critics agree that Cyril Tolley, who has lately improved, is already in good form, and will be assured of a trip to the United States, while Roger Wethered, Bernard Darwin, William Hunter, William and Tony Torrance, Harry Brased, Ernest Holderness, Ernest Carter, Charles Hazelet and "Chubby" Hooman are reckoned among the prominent candidates. One golfer advises: "Winning this match will be no child's play, for our American friends are

Unemployment continues to share, with immense Government spending, a place of honor aong British domestic topics. This week there were on the registers of the labor exchanges 1,638,490 unemployed.

If the opponents of Government relief, which they call "Doles"—a word which the Laborites strongly object to—are to be believed, a considerable portion of these are people who find jobs, but who prefer living on the Government to working. This accusation is resented and denied by the labor commoners and the labor press.

The progressive decline in British industry since the war is illustrated by the fact that the registered unemployed in September, 1920, numbered only 320,000. Apparently the official view of prospects for the immediate future is not cheerful, since Minister of Labor MacNamara told the House of Commons this week that £60,000,000 would be available under the new insurance act between now and the end of June, 1923, for relief of unemployment, if necessary, and he spoke as though that necessity was not at all impossible. Only a fraction of this burden would fall upon the public purse, since £40,000,000 would be contributed by workers and employers under the terms of the act.

Once again the Board of Trade has given permission to captains of ships to sail from British ports without wireless operators if they are unable to procure certified operators. This decision was necessitated by the refusal of many members of the wireless trade union to sign new articles prior to joining crews.

A deputation from the Trade Union Committee, which interviewed the authorties on the decision, was told that the board did not feel justified under existing conditions in permitting shipping to be held up solely because certified operators were not available, and in the event of a captain going without an operator no liability would attach to him for failing to carry out the wireless regulations.

Bi-Partisan Rule Proposed for New State Constitution

estimates of appropriations needed to meet the needs for the next two years. The Governor is directed to conduct public hearings, and then is authorized to revise the estimates submitted to him, making up a budget, which he is required to submit in detailed form to the Legislature not later than the following Feb. 1 for enactment into law.

In addition to showing the requirements of the departments, the Governor is required to submit a statement showing the estimated revenues for the period to be covered by the budget, the estimated surplus or deficit at the end of the period, and measures of taxation which he may propose to increase the revenues.

Public Hearings Required.

The presiding officer of each house of the Legislature is required to immediately submit the budget to the Joint Appropriation Committee, which is required to hold public hearings, at which the Governor and other State officers may appear.

The Legislature may strike out or reduce any appropriation recommended by the Governor in the budget, but it cannot increase any item. It may originate other appropriation bills, each for a single object.

It proposes that no appropriation shall be made to pay any claim unless presented within six years.

Authority is given the Governor in section 15 to disapprove or reduce any item in any bill appropriating money.

These two sections are a complete change in the State system of appropriating funds. Under the present Constitution there is no limitation upon the amount the Legislature may appropriate, and it receives no accurate information as to the amount of revenues which may be expected. As a result it invariably overappropriates the revenues, causing large deficits. At the beginning of 1917, there was a deficit of about $4,000,000 in the State treasury, due to overappropriations and extravagant administration. Under the present Constitution the Governor has no power to reduce or change an item in an appropriation bill. He must either approve the item or veto it outright.

Line of Succession to Governorship.

The next three sections are virtually the same as the present Constitution, making the qualifications for Lieutenant-Governor the same as those for Governor, and providing that in case of vacancy in the office of Governor, or the Governor's disability the Lieutenant-Governor should serve as Governor. Next in succession are the President pro tem. of the Senate and the Speaker of the House.

To the Supreme Court is given in section 19 the sole power to determine the question of the disability of the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor or other person on whom the powers and duties of the office would devolve. This is a new section.

Qualifications of Secretary of State, Attorney General, Auditor and Treasurer are fixed at 25 years of age, that he be a citizen of the United States, and that he shall have resided in the State five years.

Beginning with section 21, the proposed new article creates these 17 civil departments of the State Government, and with exception of the first four to be headed by a person or commission appointed by the Governor:

1. State Department, headed by the Secretary of State, who shall be custodian of the State Seal, and keeper of the records of all official acts of the Governor.

2. Law Department, headed by the Attorney-General.

3. Finance Department, headed by the State Auditor.

4. Treasury Department, of which the State Treasurer shall be the head.

5. Department of Accounts, of which a Commissioner of Accounts, to be appointed by the Governor, shall be the head. Section 26 seeks to give him power to examine the accounts of all financial transactions of the State, its departments and officers and employes, and to give him power to audit and to compel the maintenance of systems of accounting not only in all State offices and departments, but also in all cities and counties. Under this section it would be possible for the Legislature to transfer from the State Auditor to the Commissioner of Accounts, appointed by the Governor, all the duties now imposed on the State Auditor.

Makeup of Taxation Department.

6. Department of Taxation, of which the State Tax Commission of three members, appointed by the Governor for six-year year terms, no more than two of whom shall belong to the same political party, shall be the head. It is specified that one Commissioner shall go out of office at the end of each two years.

7. Department of State Highways. Highway Commission of four members, appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, not more than two Commissioners to be of the same political party, to be so classified that one or more shall go out of office at the end of each two years. The commission, it is specified, shall have the construction, care, supervision and maintenance of the State's public highway, bridges and public works.

8. Department of Public Health. State Board of Health to consist of six members, appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, to be bipartisan, to serve without salary except per diem and expenses. The Commissioner of Health, to be appointed by the board and removable at its pleasure, is made chief executive officer of the board.

9. Department of Agriculture. Board of Agriculture of six members to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, to be bipartisan, and to serve without salary except per diem and expenses. Commissioner of Agriculture to be chief executive officer of the department.

10. Department of Public Welfare to be under the management of the State Board of Control of four members, to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, to be bipartisan, and which shall have the management and control of all charitable, penal and correctional institutions of the State.

11. Department of Banking, of which the head will be the Commissioner of Banking to be appointed by the Governor for a four-year term.

12. Department of Insurance, of which the head will be the Commissioners of Insurance, to be appointed by the Governor for a four-year term.

Department of Labor and Industry.

13. Department of Labor and Industry, of which the State Industrial Commission of three members will be the head, the Commissioners to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms.

There is authorization in the proposed article for workmen's compensation legislation, and the State Industrial Commission is made the administrative body for the compensation law. While workmen's compensation bills have been passed in Missouri, though none has ever become effective, there has been a legal question as to whether the Legislature had the right to enact such a law under the present Constitution. The proposed article would remove such a doubt.

(14) Department of Education to be headed by a State Board of Education of six members to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, to be bipartisan, and to serve without salary, the board to appoint a Commissioner of Education, who would take the place of the present State Superintendent of Schools. The board would have control of all State educational institutions, and of the public school system of the State. Apparently it would take over the control of the State University, for which special provision for a Board of Curators is provided in the present Constitution.

(15) Department of Public Utilities, of which the Public Service Commission of five members, to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, would be the head.

(16) Department of Conservation, of which the head would be the Commissioner of Conservation to be appointed by the Governor for a term of four years. There is specific direction for the enactment of laws to encourage forestry, and specific authorization for the exemption from taxation of land devoted exclusively to forestry. Provision is made for this department to maintain forest reserves, State parks for the development and regulation of water power, for the prevention of pollution of waters, and for the protection and propagation of fish, birds and game.

Civil Service Provision Described.

(17) Department of Civil Service, of which the head shall be a Civil Service Commission of four members, to be appointed by the Governor for six-year terms, not more than two to be members of the same political party, and to be so classified that one or more shall go out of office at the end of every two years. The language describing the civil service provisions, which would be an innovation in the Missouri Capitol, is:

"Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the State, and of all civil divisions thereof; including cities, shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, so far as practicable, by examination, which, so far as practicable, shall be competitive; but honorably discharged soldiers and sailors from the army and navy of the United States in the World War, who are citizens and residents of this State, shall be entitled to preference in appointments and promotion, without regard to their standing on any list from which such appointments or promotions may be made."

It will have been noted from the organization of these departments that they are formed to provide constitutionally for the more important departments of the State Government which are now authorized only by legislative act, and which could be abolished at any time by the Legislature. It also will be noted that except in the case of a few boards, which would be in session only a few days a month, there is no salary provision, that being left to the Legislature.

The Legislature is directed in section 39 of the proposed article to enact laws at the first session following the adoption of the article, to distribute the administrative functions of all State employes and departments under the 17 heads, the only department excluded being the office of Governor.

Can't Create New Departments.

The Legislature is specifically prohibited from creating any additional departments, but is authorized to add to the duties of the 17 departments and to create new offices, boards and commissions under them.

There is a provision that elective State officers in office at the time of adoption of the proposed article shall continue in office until the end of the terms for which they were elected, and that commissions of appointive officers shall continue in effect until their expiration, such officers to serve in the departments to which their duties shall be assigned by the Legislature.

A system by which the Governor may remove any appointive officer is provided, and there also is a provision that the Legislature may remove any appointive official by a two-thirds vote of the members of both houses. The Consttiution provides the Governor may remove an official for the same cause after service on the official of a written statement of the alleged cause, and the official given a public hearing at which he may be heard in person or by counsel.

The Senate is required to have open sessions when acting upon confirmations, and the Governor is prohibited from reappointing until the next session of the Legislature any person whose appointment has been rejected by the Senate.

An Unusual Provision.

An unusual provision, which unquestionably will encounter serious opposition in the Constitution Convention, is in section 41, which confers upon all boards, commissions and officers charged in the Constitution with "public visitations, supervisions, regulations or control of any person, corporation or company," the power of courts of record to administer oath, compel attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, and to punish for contempt any person guilty of disrespectful or disorderly conduct in the presence of any commission, board or officer while in session or holding a hearing.

Section 42 is an old section, directing that the Governor shall sign all commissions.

The Governor is given power to require reports under oath from any State officer on any matter touching on the management or expense of his department, and a false statement in such a report is made to consttiute the crime of perjury. This applies equally to other elective State officers and appointive heads of departments.

Restrictions on Legislators.

Section 44 prohibits members of the Legislature and officers and employes of the State from being interested in any contract with the State, or furnishing materials and supplies to the State.

Authorization is found in section

Genius

Until Marshall B. Lloyd turned his master mind upon the problem of wicker weaving, this slow, laborious hand process had come down unchanged from antiquity. His remarkable genius revolutionized the whole industry, through his inventions of the method and loom which produce Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than hand weaving.

These inventions cut labor costs, enabling us to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, add the latest refinements and still sell our wicker products at very moderate prices.

Lloyd Carriages can always be recognized by the exclusive "shell" design of the bodies—a graceful bowl shape, woven of endless wicker, with a continuous sweeping curve from side to front, unbroken by corners or by concealed short ends of wicker.

Your dealer will explain the Fifth Wheel Reversible Gear; Oil Tempered Springs; Continuous Steel Pusher; Patented Double Spoked and Double Rimmed Wheels; Patented Automatic Hood Adjustment—features that add materially to the beauty, convenience, comfort and stability of the carriage.

Chairman Lasker States Case for Ship Subsidy

naval equality with the other two nations involved, unless we do that which is necessary to build up a merchant marine of proportionate size and balance to theirs; for all naval authority in the world affirms that the supplemental merchant marine required by a navy is as essential to its operation as capital ships themselves.

"When we use Great Britain as an example, we do so in a spirit of the greatest friendship, for, happily, no one can ever have a thought of war between the two greatest English-speaking nations; but, rather, we use her as an example because Britain, in her attitude in the late conference, showed that she was as desirous as we that America should have naval equality with her, and she knows, better than we, that there can be no naval equality without the proper merchant marine."

No More Government Construction.

Discussing the future of the fleet now operated by the Government at an annual loss of $50,000,000, Lasker said:

"One of the most formidable objections to continued Government operation today—an objection that is insurmountable—is that the ships owned by the Government would in due course wear out, even with proper repairs. No one in Congress suggests, nor have I ever heard it suggested from any source, that the Government should build ships to replace those that are worn out, or that the Government should build new-type ships. If there is one unanimous opinion in the country regarding our merchant marine it is that Government construction of merchant ships should cease. Thus the continued operation by the Government of its present fleet would be making no progress toward a permanent policy on the seas or a renewed and enduring merchant marine. This one phase alone calls for legislation along the lines proposed to insure the Government's retirement from ownership and operation.

"Continued Government operation is a solution only from one standpoint. It solves the problem in one way, to wit, that the fleet shall be operated by the Government until it is worn out and thus assure the elimination of the American flag from world commerce.

"I do not desire by compromise for one moment to escape the responsibility of making the assertion that there is no future for the American merchant marine, private and Government, save bankruptcy, unless private ownership is fostered and expanded and the Government retire. No philosophy of sophistry, no economic theories can change the proved facts of experience of the Shipping Board.

"While the seeming loss of Government operation at this time is $4,000,000 a month, let us remember that the fleet is growing no younger. Each day adds age to it and if these operations be not quickly ended the ships, through the lack of responsibility felt regarding them on the part of the operators and crew alike, will depreciate largely in worth.

Living in Fool's Paradise.

"With the day the ships are handled under the present lack of responsibility, regardless of how world conditions improve and freights increase, the loss of the Shipping Board will be constant and possibly accelerated, through the vast repairs to the ships that will be necessary as time goes on. We are living in a fool's paradise if we think the loss is merely that which we can measure in the monthly balance sheet; and even this loss of $50,000,000 per annum fails to take proper account of interest, depreciation or full insurance.

"How can private enterprise live in such competition? To continue it spells the death of private enterprise and in turn Government operation will wither. We can no longer procrastinate in choosing our course. Congress must now decide whether there shall be opportunity given to turn this thing into a great asset of peace and an essential of war—as we believe it can be turned—or whether the festering sore, through inaction and self-deception shall be continued and grow worse.

"At present there is, by and large, no market for our vast tonnage. Much of this tonnage cost over $200 per ton to build. About 1,300,000 deadweight tons were sold at prices averaging $177 per ton since the end of the war; 170,000 tons have been paid for; on 390,000 tons the purchase has not been completed and the ships are again in the possession of the board. In the case of 740,000 tons, we either must give vast relief on the amounts owing, or take the ships back. So that, compared to the total tonnage built by the Government, practically no tonnage has been been disposed of."

GOLD STARS FOR GRAVES

Floral wreaths with gold stars like those on the trees in King's highway Memorial Park will be placed on the graves of soldiers at Jefferson Barracks with ceremonies on Decoration day by the World War Registrars, Mrs. Frank DeGarmo, president, announced yesterday.

Further plans will be announced later. Mrs. DeGarmo said that St. Louis was the first city to dedicate trees with gold stars as memorials to its war dead, and quoted from a letter from a patriotic society at Trenton, Mo., to the effect that the idea would be adopted there good community booster know that such a course would simply be a signal to the criminal element that crime is safe? And just think of what a crime wave there would be?

HOW CLEVELAND' REDUCED RECORD OF CRIMES OF VIOLENCE

Well, what actually did happen is that crime decreased. It fell off so noticeably that coincidence can hardly account for it. The survey occurred in 1921. The findings of the surveyors began to be published in the latter part of the year, and the newspapers have been giving generous space to them. But in the first two months of 1922 there were only half as many cases of murder and manslaughter in Cleveland as there were in the corresponding months of 1920. Robbery decreased 40 per cent and assault with intent to rob 60 per cent. Automobile stealing did not diminish, but all the usual crimes of violence did. The surveyors do not claim that these decreases are necessarily attributable to the survey, but they utterly disprove the theory that the publishing of such distasteful facts about a city will lead to such a disrespect for the administration of criminal justice as to encourage crime.

Civic Bodies Are Organized.

One concrete result of the survey is the organization of the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice. The leading civic organizations of the city are represented in this, the Bar Association, the Automobile Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Academy of Medicine, the League of Women Voters and many others. Its object is to assist, as far as possible, in the inauguration of the reforms recommended by the surveyors and to promote the administration of criminal justice generally. It has opened headquarters with a paid director and has already achieved some notable results. It has induced the two criminal courts, for instance, to unite on a program by which felony cases will be brought directly from the Police Department to the County Prosecutor, instead of passing, as formerly, through preliminary hearings, which consumed much of the time of the overworked Municipal Court.

Getting the courts out of politics is one of the immediate objectives. Judges may still be elected under the proposed system, but they will probably be elected for progressively increasing terms; and when up for re-election will probably run against no other candidate, but simply against their own records while on the bench. If defeated under these conditions, successors will be chosen at a subsequent election.

How Survey Was Announced.

This radical departure in community surveys was not the work of radicals. It can be traced, in fact, to one of Cleveland's most conservative citizens, F. H. Goff, president of the Cleveland Trust Co., which is said to carry more money on deposit than any other bank in the United States. It was Mr. Goff who organized the Cleveland Foundation, and it was the Cleveland Foundation which sponsored the survey. The object of the Cleveland Foundation which has since been imitated in many American cities, was to insure the permanent and efficient administration of the funds bequeathed for the public welfare and incidentally do away with the "Dead Hand" in charity. The foundation was organized in 1914. In 1915 it carried on a survey of education in Cleveland, and followed in 1917 with a survey of the recreation, discontinued during the war and completed in 1919. In the latter year a survey of delinquency in Cleveland was proposed, but it was judiciously postponed. Such a survey, to be effective, could not be initiated by any welfare organization. The community would have to ask for it; and nothing but a miracle, it seemed, could induce an American city to apply for an examination as to just how bad it is.

Then came the McGannon episode. If McGannon had been convicted the community anger might have been propitiated and Clevelanders would have caught their breath and then gone on as usual. But he was acquitted. There was no goat. Cleveland decided to face the facts instead. The Mayor, the Chamber of Commerce, the Bar Association and other organizations then appealed to the Cleveland Foundation to undertake this survey. It had behind it the moral force of the whole community. It had no legal authority to compel evidence or to punish any one. But Cleveland today knows more about herself than any other large American city. Perhaps this gives it an advantage which no amount of old-time boosting could bring.

45 for a State-owned printing plant or for the contracting of the State's printing, for the production by the State of furnishings and fuel for the Capitol and other State buildings, or for the State to contract for them. In case contracts are let, they are to go to the lowest responsible bidder, subject to the approval of the five elective officers.

Power of Removal.

The Legislature is given the power to fix the salaries of State officers, but section 46 provides that until they are fixed by the Legislature, the Governor shall receive $10,000 a year and use of the executive mansion, and the Attorney-General, Secretary of State, Auditor and Treasurer shall receive $6000 a year each, and there is a prohibition against them receiving any fees or perquisites of office or any other compensation. These salaries are exactly double those fixed under the present Constitution, but the Legislature has from time to time added other duties for each official for which it has allowed compensation, so that in reality the salary of the Governor, with his extras, is about $7000 a year, and that of each of the other officials about $4500.

The Governor is given power in section 47 to suspend from office any State Treasurer, County Treasurer or County Collector who may be alleged to be a defaulter, and may make temporary appointments to fill the offices pending investigation of the alleged defalcation.

The fee system of paying county officials is abolished by section 48, which requires that all fees shall be paid into the public treasury and officers shall be paid definite salaries to be fixed by law.

The concluding section, 49, provides for election contests for the office of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, to be decided by joint vote of the Senate and House, and for the Legislature to enact laws to determine the method of contest in elections for other State officers.

EXPENDITURE HERE FOR MUSIC IN YEAR ABOUT $20,000,000

NEARLY 100 MEETINGS PLANNED FOR WEEK

One of Most Important Gatherings Will Be at Odeon, Where About 200 Voices Will Sing Two Numbers.

In preparation for "Music week," which is to be celebrated here April 24-29, the Civic Music Association has assembled statistics purporting to show that music, considered as a business, involves an annual expenditure approximating $20,000,000 in St. Louis.

"This total," according to the association's publicity department, "exceeds the value of the city's output of millinery, furniture and bakery products, and also the combined output of railway supplies and confectionery." The detailed figures, obtained by a canvass of musicians, merchants, union officials and theater managers, follow:

Music study, teachers' fees, etc., $2,100,000; purchase of instruments, records, etc., $10,500,000; Symphony Orchestra, earnings and guarantee, $250,000; recitals, $60,000; opera, $20,000; choral clubs, $30,000; paid organists and choir singers, $199,688; Municipal Theater, $163,862; salaries of members of Musicians' Union, $1,500,000; Board of Education, for music in the schools, $77,165; musical shows in the theaters, $250,000; park concerts, $8000; advertising, $683,274; concert hall rentals, $2200, and music department of the Public Library, $1000.

Other Items Not Listed.

This makes a total of $15,845,189, and the association is of the opinion that it would be substantially increased by figures, of which no records are available, relating to fees spent with unlisted music teachers, the purchase of records and instruments by mail, salaries of persons engaged locally in the manufacture of instruments, the printing of music and several other items.

During "Music week" there are planned nearly 100 meetings, all free to the public and all offering some form of musical entertainment. These will be held by various organizations, under the auspices of the Civic Music Association.

One of the most important of the gatherings is expected to be that scheduled for the Odeon on the evening of April 29. All of the students at Municipal Chorus Training School, comprising about 200 voices, are to sing two numbers, under the direction of William A. Parson. There will be numbers by other choral and orchestral organizations, and addresses on music.

Meetings in Public Schools.

Similar meetings will be held in the auditoriums of the public schools, with the school bands, orchestras and singing societies participating. Special observances are planned by the Woman's Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club, the Advertising Club, the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Optimists' Club, the City and Town Club and most of the musical organizations.

In anticipation of "Music week," the Art Alliance of St. Louis will feature music in its program for "Art School night," which will be observed next Friday evening at the City Art Museum. Tonal numbers, including a duet from "Cavalleria Rusticana," will be rendered by Mme. Blanche Skrainka, soprano; George E. Muskens, tenor; Miss Ethel Knobeloch, violinist, and Mrs. Frank Henniger, pianist. Five-minute talks will be made by Edmund Wuerpel, Dr. R. A. Holland, Charles F. Hatfield, Frederick Lehmann, F. W. A. Vesper and Paul F. Berdanier.

One of the purposes of "Music week" is to foster public interest in a proposed city auditorium—like those of Cleveland and Denver, or the Music Center which seems likely to be erected in New York as a war memorial.

Dentists to Demonstrate New Painless Method on Volunteer Patients

THE conductive anesthesia class of the St. Louis Study Club will hold its last clinic of the season at the St. Louis University Dental School, Grand avenue and Caroline street, at 8 o'clock this evening.

Twenty graduate dentists will demonstrate conductive anesthesia, the latest method of extracting teeth without pain. The method has been studied throughout the Winter by the operatives who will give the demonstration. The extractions will be made for volunteer patients without charge.—From the Globe-Democrat, March 29, 1922.

As practiced by many modern dentists today, I believe, after 3 years' trial, to be the greatest means of eliminating pain during what was once considered a painful ordeal in a dentist chair, such as grinding, extracting, filling and crowning sensitive teeth, and many other heretofore considered painful operations.

'Boulevard' of Paris Taking on 'Main St.' Appearance

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 15.—Prosaic commerce, to the discomfiture of the patrons of gaiety is making inroads upon that part of gay Paree between the Madeleine and the Rue Drouot, known simply as "The Boulevard."

"The Boulevard is dying, the boulevard is dead," is the melancholy comment of old habitues upon hearing of the disappearance of the Cafe American and the Cafe Neopolitan. Banks will replace these world famous "wet goods" shops, which for years have been the meeting places of famous men in the world of art and literature.

Thirty years ago financial and business houses were the exception on the boulevard. Gay life commenced at sundown. There was not a dark house and rarely was anyone abroad in a business suit; evening clothes were de riqueur. Now sombre facades of banks and stores throw their shadows over the few remaining brightly illuminated cafes, and gentlemen in yellow shoes, soft collars and peaked caps greatly outnumber those in formal garb.

The Cafe Toroni, where Rochefort and De Maupassant and their friends were wont to congregate, was the first to disappear. The Cafe des Angelais, Oscar Wilde's favorite haunt, went next. Then the Cafe Riche was transformed into a bank. A tailor occupies the building that once was the Cafe Vernon, and now the Zarahoff interests have bought the Cafe Neopolitan. Quite fittingly, an American bank will replace the Cafe American. The Cafe de la Paix is the only one left of the famous old taverns on the boulevard and it is being frowned upon by many old-time Parisians.

"There are too many foreigners," they aver.

Paris fashion is busying herself with handkerchiefs. The latest designs have in the corners embroidered figures representing the user's favorite sport, such as golf, tennis, racing and fencing. The men are being offered oblong handkerchiefs with colored borders.

The milliners who have generally adopted flower trimmings, are reproducing seasonable flowers of changing varieties as to spring advances. They are now using hyacinths, wistaria, cowslips and buttercups, heretofore rarely seen on Paris hats.

Black and red, blue and gray and yellow and white are the prevailing color schemes for gowns, with hat, shoes, stockings, handbags and even headdress to match.

The temper of the French Parliament is to adopt some reservation to the Washington conference treaties as a matter of principle, simply to indicate that France has independent action, equal to that of the United States.

Premier Poincare has determined not to make the treaties a question of confidence in his Cabinet, but to leave Parliament free to accept, reject or adopt the treaties with reservations. His purpose appears to be set forth earnestly the reasons for ratification of the treaties. The attitude of the administration will be expressed somewhat like this:

"Here are the treaties. They are admirable and we recommend them; but it is for you, gentlemen of the Senate and Chamber, to decide."

M. Poincare had nothing to do personally with making the treaties. He accepted them as a legacy of former Premier Briand's policy on this subject, and he supports Minister of the Colonies Sauraut, whom he retained from Briand's Cabinet.

Maurice Donnay, the poet, who was booked to sail on the steamship Paris today to represent the Academie Francaise at the American celebration of the tercentenary of Moliere, began his career at the Chat Noir, the first one of the Montmartre cabarets where young poets recited their verses. He is being accompanied to America by Andre Chevrillon, also a member of the French Academy.

Donnay, in reciting his verses, invariably satirized prominent Parisians. This caused him to be rebuked and dismissed by an unfeeling building contractor for whom Donnay was an apprentice.

The poet was rated as an indifferent pupil at college, where he was educated for the engineering profession. Donnay's latest play, "La belle Angevine," which was produced for the first time last week, is scoring a hit.

Chevrillon has a thorough knowledge of the English language and literature.

Then Criqui went in and knocked Callicott cold after seven minutes of fighting. The Englishman outweighed him by 10 pounds.

Upon entering the ring, Callicott knew his father was on his deathbed and he learned afterwards that he died while the fight was in progress.

LOSS TO STORES FROM SHOPLIFTERS $600,000 A YEAR

The annual loss of the downtown retail stores by the chief forms of dishonesty encountered in them—losses due to shoplifters, dishonest employes, charge account swindlers and passers of bad checks—has amounted to $600,000 to $1,000,000 a year. The organization of a special protective service several months ago has done much to reduce such losses in the seven large department and women's wear stores it serves.

An annual loss of $30,000 to $40,000 in one of these stores has been stopped by this protective service, which broke up a ring of dishonest employes conniving with outside criminals. Backed by the Associated Retailers, to which the seven stores belong, the organization has set out actively to combat these depredations. It is called the Stores' Mutual Protective Association, Inc. K. F. Niemoeller, manager of the Associated Retailers, is president, and W. H. Jenkins, who was for 31 years a Pinkerton detective, is vice president and general manager.

Only About 25 Persons.

Strangely enough, only about 25 persons are responsible for the heaviest losses. These comprise several groups of professional shoplifters. How shoplifters and others who prey on the stores are foiled or caught cannot be told in full detail, "for that would be telling," as Jenkins would say. Let that veteran of crime detection relate the story of the protective association's beginning and operations:

"I worked last year," he said, "for one of the department stores, in charge of their protection. The field wasn't large enough to keep a man busy, but there was a field to serve a number of stores, so this association was formed. Our seven stores all have house detectives, chiefly women. Men are only good to help the girls if a suspected person gets rough, and for some other purposes.

Recovered $8000 Worth of Goods.

"Besides breaking up that heavy loss in one store, this association has recovered about $8000 in stolen merchandise and has broken up a series of thefts in a shoe store that cost $3000 in two years; these are instances."

The conversation was interrupted by the appearance of a young man who handed Jenkins $25, spoke a word or two, smiling, and left.

"That man," said Jenkins, "was married a short time ago and found out that his bride had swindled department stores out of $500 worth of goods on charge accounts. He volunteered to pay up her debts and she agreed to go straight. He is only making about $40 a week.

"It is the shoplifters who keep us busy. The little group of professionals are hard to get 'with the goods.' Eeternal vigilance must be exercised. We are going after that group now, and if perseverence and active prosecutions mean anything, we will get a lot of them.

There are about 175 thieves in the city who are drug addicts. They steal just enough merchandise every day to buy their drugs. A half-dozen silk shirts only get them a couple of dollars worth of cocaine or other drug.

Many First Offenders Caught.

"Our people catch a very large number of first offenders shoplifting, young girls, men and women of good character. I'll tell a story which is typical of one explanation given by these first offenders:

"Last Christmas a young woman seized a silver dorine and a silver cigarette case from the counter of a department store. She was caught, and was brought to my office, crying. She said her mother had been ill. She herself was a telephone operator and could not afford to give her girl friends the kind of presents she wanted to. She thought the cigarette case was a vanity box, and she was going to give the two articles away. I sent her home.

"Women steal pretty waists, silk teddies and other things, because they cannot afford to buy them, but want 'to keep up with the Joneses.' All these first offenders are allowed to sign statements as to their identity and how they came to steal, and then they are released. Their names are kept in a private record. This association has the names of 2500 persons, first offenders and hardened thieves, in its files, but these are kept strictly confidential. Seventy-five per cent of the names are of women.

No Kleptomaniacs, He Says.

"I caught a man stealing two 10-cent pairs of baby stockings at a department store. He promptly said, 'I'm Dr. So-and-So, and I'm a kleptomaniac.' I replied 'You're Dr. Thus-and-So, and you're a thief.' He was released. Kleptomaniacs? There ain't no such thing?"

"The professionals have a crook language of their own. The drug addict thieves are called 'junkers' for some unknown reason. Stealing merchandise is called 'making a clout.' Concealing the stolen goods is 'shading the bulge.'

"I cannot afford to tell about the methods used by bad check operators, charge account swindlers and dishonest employes. That might put bad ideas into the heads of innocent persons. Neither would it be wise to discuss our methods of combating these people."

FOUR INJURED IN ACCIDENT LAID TO HEAVY FOG YESTERDAY

Four men were injured in a collision due to a heavy fog, at 7 a. m. yesterday, between a westbound Cass avenue car and the trailer of another westbound Cass car that had stopped on St. Louis avenue near Cora avenue to let a fire apparatus pass.

The injured were George Cockrun, 4036 Kennerly avenue, motorman of the rear car, compound fracture of the righ arm and injuries to the head and right leg; Edward R. Taylor, conductor of the rear car, injuries to the back; J. B. Stanley, 4128 Juniata street, and Ray Schumacher, 4432 Kossuth street, passengers on the rear car were bruised.

Cockrun said that due to the fog and the slippery condition of the rails on the down grade he was unable to stop quickly enough to avoid crashing into the rear of the stopped trailer. The front end of the second car was demolished.

The fire to which the apparatus was responding destroyed a garage and an automobile truck in the rear of 2830 Marcus avenue, causing damage of about $1800.

Voice of the Union Labor and the Radical Press

THE Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorials or articles in organs of labor unions and of the Socialist and Communist parties, showing the trend of thought on public topics among those bodies of citizens and causes of social unrest.

THE ALL-DEVOURER.

(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor Organ.)

You would would be horrified to know that there was now living a huge and insatiable monster large and powerful enough to swallow the world, wouldn't you? But if you were told that this monster not only existed, but that actually he was performing the remarkable task of swallowing the earth and the people who inhabit it, what would you say? Well, the Oklahoma Leader declares that that very fact is now taking place and that, unless something radical is done, he will finish the job.

Here is what we mean—the international bankers have a mortgage on the world. The mortgage is growing with every tick of the clock. It will continue to grow until labor and industry will not be able to pay the interest charges. Then the international bankers will foreclose. Then the job will be done.

This year the interest charges on the American branch of their international business amounted to a sum greater than the combined value of the corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco and livestock raised in this country. * * *

Twenty-five years ago a Californian borrowed $100 from a neighbor, agreeing to pay 10 per cent interest per month. Not long ago the debtor came into quite an amount of property, and the lender sued for his debt and interest. * * * Judgment was rendered against the debtor and when the interest accumulated had been calculated it was found to amount to $304,840,332,912,685.16, a sum much larger than all the war debts of the world.

Therefore we solemnly declare that the international bankers are now engaged in the work of swallowing the world, and they will accomplish their purpose if the people do not awake to the danger which confronts them.

TO END WAR.

(From St. Louis Labor.)

We must put an end to capitalist imperialism and the struggle of the exploiters of nations for foreign markets if we wish to prevent future wars. We, the common people, must take our destinies in our own hands and deprive our present rules of the power to run governments as they please, and engage in politics that produce problems which must be solved by the sword. It is your lives that are at stake. Defend them, safeguard them. You have the means to do so—the ballot.

PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

(From Milwaukee Leader, Socialist.)

Half a million coal miners on strike! Will that make the lethargic American think? Will it make him think about something besides Jack Dempsey and "Fatty" Arbuckle and the latest rich youth who has hooched himself into a scrape? Frankly, it is doubtful if more than a small number will do so. * * *

If all could see the meaning of this strike they would see that the private ownership of the coal mines is anti-social. Anything that is against the true interests of society is anti-social. Private ownership merely makes for the financial enrichment of a handful of men.

For the great mass it means high prices and intermittently recurring dislocation of the industry due to the starvation wages paid to the mine workers. It might mean cold and hunger as well, for buildings cannot be heated without coal; food cannot be hauled on the railroads without coal and the other industries cannot be operated without coal.

Therefore if all could see the true meaning of this strike, they would make such a loud and insistent call for collective ownership and operation of the mines that the powers at Washington would have to heed their imperative demand.

"HELL CAN'T BE WORSE."

(From the Oklahoma Leader, Farmer-Labor.)

The game boy who was hanged in Washington could not understand why his judicial executioners wanted God to forgive him and yet would not forgive him themselves. Upon reading the Bible for a week he said:

"A fat chance I've got of going to heaven. Why didn't God give me a chance to make good here? They never gave me a chance here and I'm going to hell. Well, let them send me to hell. I'll go there smiling. Maybe they know how to treat kids better in hell than they do here. It can't be any worse than it is here."

Aren't we a fine lot of savages to hang a boy like that? What he says of himself is equally true of most of the other criminals. They never had a chance to make good here. And the blame lies not on God—but upon capitalism. Capitalism is the brute that deprives youth of a chance to make good and to be decent. Capitalism is the beast that lays snares in the path of the young and leads them into lives of vice and crime. Capitalism is the despot that bumps them off when its own temptations drive them to take human life.

Hell can't be any worse than it is here, said the boy. And he knew. He remembered how his environment in childhood, boyhood and youth had led him unerringly into crime. So without bitterness but in a matter of fact comment, he says that he never had a chance and that hell cannot be worse. How do you like that, you managers of society? How do you like it, you members of the Chamber of Commerce? Don't you think it is about time for you to abdicate your rotten system, your

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE RADICAL AND UNION LABOR PRESS

A NEW SONG NEEDED.

(From the Reading Labor Advocate)

There used to be a song entitled "All Going Out and Nothing Coming In," in which the singer was supposed to represent the image of real hard luck * * * At the present time, however, America is suffering from a different disease. Instead of everything going out and nothing coming in, the song which we are beginning to sing is "Too much coming in and not enough going out." And so unemployment continues to hold its own.

If we would stop to think—a thing which too few of us ever do —we would suspect that there is something radically wrong with a system which results in suffering for a people of a nation whenever there are too many of the good things of life in that nation. It is a topsy-turvy sort of arrangement which makes prosperity dependent upon the amount of wealth which we are able to send out of our country. Yet that is the condition which we have to deal with at the present time. * * *

People suffer from unemployment when exports wane because they have been producing for the profit of the master class rather than for themselves. * * * It's time the workers of America woke to the fact that they were not born simply to be cogs in the capitalists' profit machines. It is time they shed that woeful expression and sang a happier son. But they'll not be able to change either their worried looks or their doleful tune until they usher in the new social order under which the worker will receive the full social value of his toil. And supporting the poltical parties of the class which robs them is a mighty poor way to start the band playing the new song.

INSANITY OF CIVILIZATION.

(From the New York Call, Socialist)

If anything demonstrates the insanity of modern "civilization" it is the panic displayed by the victorious Powers when it is suggested that they accept payment from Germany in goods. These goods would relieve much distress if received and distributed among a suffering population. There is no dispute about this. But the Governments want gold and of course Germany has none. The masses in the prostrate countries could not eat the gold. They could consume the goods. The governments cannot consume the goods, but they can use the gold.

There is a fundamental antagonism between the governments and the masses. Why is this? Precisely because the governments represent, not the masses who want goods, but the capitalist and financial classes who want gold. If the Government received gold it would find its way into circulation and stimulate the production of goods at home. This production would be profitable to the owners of industry. The profit interests of the industrial masters keep out the goods.

If the governing institutions represented the masses the industries would not be in private hands. They would be publicly owned and mastered by the toilers of the country. Goods would then be produced for the welfare of all. Intervention by private interests would be abolished. The profit motive would be gone.

SEES THE WORLD IN GLOOM.

(From the Worker, Communist Organ.)

Things are getting darker all around. Our unemployed are more numerous and worse off than ever. The high cost of living is going higher and the slightest attempt of the workers to resist the furious capitalist onslaught is met with hot lead and cold steel, as seen in the murder of textile strikers in New England.

This is not a condition limited to America, it is world wide. The ruin and chaos brought on by the war grip the whole world and the situation does not offer the slightest hope for improvement. The future is pitch black. * * *The whole machinery if capitalist production and exchange is shot to pieces. In a frantic effort to bolster up the system of wage robbery the capitalists, aided by their labor lieutenants, have launched a furious offense againts the workers of the world. For the workers of every country there can be but one way out of this blind alley of oppression and misery. We must answer the attacks of the capitalists in kind, that is, in the only language they understand. We must have unity of action by the toiling masses.

PSYCHOLOGY.

(From the British Colubia Fererationist, Communist.)

The mental phenomena of the workers are hanged by changing economic conditions. Their misery and suffering make them think differently fo what they did five years ago. In fact they have ideas of putting the capitalists to work and taking over the means of wealth production themselevs. They even imagine that they could make a better job of controling the wealth producing machinery, including their life forces, than their masters ever did.

While the workers may not be sceintists they may reach that stage where they imagine that no man should eat unless he works and performs some useful service to society. When they reach that stage they, too, may study psychology and place their one-time masters at what they are most fitted for, but they certainly will have a job on their hands to find what the can do best, for they never performed any useful service in their lives.

Birth Control Campaign in Yucatan.

MERIDA, Yucatan, April 15.—A vigorous campaign in favor of birth control is being carried on in Yucatan. Mrs. Margaret Sanger's pamphlets have been translated into Spanish and have been so widely circulated that the first edition has been exhausted. The agitation is being carried on even in the Indian villages, where, certainly, birth control is needed. The Catholic priests denounce it and the conservative newspapers inveigh against it.

"Listen In" on the AIR'S WONDERS—Install a FREE "Jewel" in Your Home

Radio is truly "The Newest Marvel of This Marvelous Age." You can sit at home and listen to informative, instructive and entertaining programs broadcast through the air. You can receive bulletins, vocal and instrumental concerts, weather forecasts, market reports, time signals, etc.

Description of the Free "Jewel" Radiophone Receiving Set

No taps, continuous wave length variation. Equipped with tuning coil of latest and most scientific design. Good substantial cabinet, bakelite panel, bevel and graduated dial, sensitive and permanent crystal adjustment. No batteries required and no maintenance cost. Everything complete.

The head set consists of two receiving phones, 2400 ohm resistance, navy type.

Quite as important as the tuning coil are the phones. Those with the "Jewel" are exceptionally sensitive, being the same make as those in use in the Post-Dispatch station K S D for receiving.

The "Jewel" is rated as a 50-mile instrument, and under favorable atmospheric conditions will receive radio signals from that distance. It is only recommended, however, at this time of the year, for St. Louis and suburbs. Tests have shown that the "Jewel" picks up Post-Dispatch radio programs clearly and distinctly.

Complete instructions for installation and operation with each set. Briefly, it is the finest and most sensitive and compact Radiophone of its type.

The outfit, as we will deliver it to you, will include tuning coil in handsome, polished cabinet, head set, consisting of two receiving phones and instructions. It will not include wire or insulation for antenna or "ground"—which may be obtained at nominal cost.

"PUTTING NEW LIFE IN ME"

Mr. W. H. Pennington, Wharton, Ark., writes: "I am taking Cadomene tablets and they are putting new life in me. I had a bad case of the grip last winter, and my physician's prescription did me no good. I saw that Cadomene was recommended for a case like mine and I sent twenty miles to get them. Now, after using only one week, I am gaining strength, eating with a relish, and sleeping like a baby, etc."

Cadomene should be taken by any one who has symptoms of impoverished blood and deranged nerves, like the following: Nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, nervous indigestion, headache, backache, cold extremities, a general run-down condition of the system.

Cadomene supplies iron and phosphorous with other tonics that build up blood and nerves. Take them and see how quickly they bring astonishing benefit to your poor "deranged" nervous system. All good druggists sell them. Ask for Cad-o-mene tablets.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling nearly a half-million cases of eczema and devoting 12 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what all you have used nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. If you write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

WENNERSTEN'S BOHEMIAN BLEND "M-H"

Wennersten's "M-H" is the new name for Malt-Hop, the Home Food Beverage. We found it necessary to call our product by our own name—WENNERSTEN'S—because people, as a rule, confused the coined name MALT-HOP with the Malt and Hops of some one else's manufacture. The new name assures you of receiving the genuine, which has been on the market for more than twenty-five years.

Now sold at pre-war prices: 6-gallon size, per can 65c, 6 cans $3.50, $6.00 per dozen; 15-gallon size, per can $1.00, 6 cans $5.50, $10 per dozen —light or dark. Berg's Best No-Boil, per can $1.25, 6 cans $7.00, $13.00 per dozen.

CONSTITUTIONAL ACT TO ANNEX COUNTY PROPOSED

Former Judge Rosenfeld Prepares Several Plans to Be Presented to Constitutional Convention When It Meets

Proposed changes in the Missouri Constitution by which St. Louis may extend its limits to include all or a portion of St. Louis County, have been prepared by former Circuit Judge Samuel Rosenfeld for submission to the constitutional convention in Jefferson City May 15.

Rosenfeld has been the leader in the annexation movement in St. Louis for 10 years, and has attempted through three Legislatures to obtain an enabling act to permit extension of St. Louis' limits, but has failed each time because of the opposition of St. Louis County politicians.

He will submit the proposal in a variety of ways, several of which will provide for elections in St. Louis and St. Louis County, and others will provide for a consolidation in the new Constitution without other election than the general State election at which the new Constitution will be voted on.

Rosenfeld in a communication to the convention sets out that St. Louis' limits can be extended only in one of two ways, annexation of the whole of St. Louis County by the city, or the re-entry of the city into the county.

He first proposes a provision of the Constitution by which either of these plans could be accomplished by vote of the residents of the city and of the county, the exact scheme to be laid out by a Board of Freeholders of 13 members, and then voted on.

In the communication Rosenfeld points out that annexation of the county by the city would result in a single government, which could work out the problems in an economical and efficient manner, while the return of the city into the county would mean dual government, though it would permit the city to extend its limits under existing laws.

The second scheme suggested by Rosenfeld in the nature of a constitutional provision is one permitting the city to annex the county. Another provides that the city shall re-enter the county. Both of these require elections.

Rosenfeld says, however, that no elections are necessary, and that the convention can adopt a provision declaring that henceforth the city shall be within the county, or that the county shall be a part of the city, for both of which he submits forms of constitutional provisions.

Rosenfeld said he expected to send copies of his communication to all members of the convention before it convened.

FORMER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW DROPS SUIT AGAINST BOECKELER

Defendant Had Brought Witnesses From East for Trial, Which Had Been Set for Tomorrow.

Attorneys for Mrs. Anna R. Boeckler of New Haven, Conn., yesterday dismissed her $50,000 damage suit in Circuit Judge Taylor's court against her former father-in-law, William L. Boeckeler, president of the Boeckeler Lumber Co. Mrs. Boeckeler charged that the defendant attempted to attack her 296 times while she lived in St. Louis, and also that he had caused detectives to follow her to Buffalo, N. Y., where she was living, to get important letters she had.

Boeckeler denied the charges and brought several witnesses from the East to testify for him at the trial, which was set for tomorrow. The plaintiff's lawyers did not state the reason for dropping the case. Seneca N. Taylor, attorney for Boeckeler, said there had been no payment of money. Mrs. Boeckeler obtained a divorce from the defendant's son, Pope Boeckeler, several years ago.

MONEY MARKET IS CHIEF INTEREST AS RATES EASE

Industrial and Trade Conditions Continue to Display Much Irregularity, Says Review—Developments at Genoa Awaited.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Official recognition of the growing cheapness of money is the feature of the past week in the financial markets. It has, of course, been evident for some time that the gradual easing in rates was continuing. Even the spring quickening of trade was not sufficient to interrupt this tendency. But a 3½ per cent rate on Treasury certificates was unexpected. Four per cent was as low as most observers had in mind. The new rate does, however, find steady justification in the ruling price of bankers' acceptances and, for that matter, of the outstanding certificates of indebtedness. Taken with the reduction in the Bank of England rediscount rate, the Treasury's action assuredly does establish the fact that money is now distinctly cheaper.

"While the trend thus is continued, there are reasons for questioning whether the general movement is as rapid as is suggested by the rate on the new Treasury paper. It is possible that the market for this kind of paper is subject, just at present, to somewhat abnormal influences. A large volume of foreign loans recently has been placed in the American market. As a result, large balances are temporarily available. The natural utilization of such balances, pending ultimate disposition, is the purchase of just such paper as acceptances and Treasury certificates.

"Thus the condition, while fortunate so far as Treasury financing is concerned, may anticipate what might be regarded as the more natural course of events. Such considerations obviously would explain the Federal reserve authorities' hesitancy with regard to a reduction in the rediscount rate. These authorities have to consider, in addition, the possible effect of such action on speculative activities, as well as the possible implications of the soldiers' bonus bill. Fear of further stimulating the recent active British speculation in securities has been a factor in delaying a reduction at London, where the official rate has been decidedly more out of line with the market than is the case on this side of the water. It is significant, in fact, that the British reduction was timed to appear unexpectedly and just before a four-day holiday.

Trade Conditions Irregular.

"Industrial and trade conditions meanwhile continue to display much irregularity. The demand for steel is still good, railway buying is promising, and the building construction movement appears to be sustained. Retail trade, on the other hand, is disappointing in many sections of the country, and the textile situation in New England is still unsatisfactory. The coal strike has caused more inconvenience than had been anticipated because of the heavy loss in production in nonunion mines; but miners are proverbially idle before Easter, and the trade agrees that the week will offer a better test as to eventualities.

"Events at Genoa, while still at too early a stage to permit of final conclusions, so far justify those who have taken a conservative view of the possibilities of this conference. It has become fairly well established that the discussions, which are supposed to attack economic problems, cannot go into such economic fundamentals as reparations, disarmament and the interallied debts. It is also clear that the Russians cannot be made into good credit risks overnight on the basis of whatever they may profess at the present moment. European recovery is likely to continue, as before, on gradual, natural lines. No sudden miracle is likely to be worked at Genoa.

"One may be encouraged, however, by the recommendations of the allied experts who have been considering European economic problems. They state quite clearly that the first step towards recovery must be a balancing of national budgets and leave one to infer that this process cannot be instantaneous. With budgets balanced the several states are recommended then to restore the gold standard, a matter which may take several years. They may then consider whether they wish to revalue existing units or cancel a part of outstanding circulation. The commission is reasonably tolerant of the scheme for an international corporation, but obviously is not enthusiastic. It realizes the exchanges are an outward sign of inward grace and that when countries and individuals adopt a sound basis credits are forthcoming. Of this fact the success of the recent Czecho-Slovakian loan bears eloquent testimony."

Oils Lead Saturday.

"Those who expected today's short session of the stock market, sandwiched between two holidays, to be a dull affair were sadly amiss. The two hours of trading were characterized by a tremendous volume of business, the turnover exceeding the ordinary full day's business of a month or so ago. Oil shares which were bid up briskly on Thursday continued the feature today, substantial advances being the rule in this group. Many of the specialties and speculative favorites reached new highs, American woolen being conspicuous with an advance of 2 points. The rails resumed the activity which began Thursday afternoon and New York Central broke through 90 for a new high price. Among the cheap rails, Seaboard Air-Line issues, both common and preferred, were the star performers, both selling 2 points or more above Thursday's tame quotation. The bond market maintained the high level of the week's activity with prices still exhibiting strength, particularly in the lower priced issues.

"The Clearing House statement shows an increase of $13,715,840 in surplus and an increase in loans of $[illegible]. Cash in Federal Reserve member banks, meanwhile, decreased $[illegible]. Demand deposits rose $51,516,000 and time deposits $16,218,000. Aggregate reserve amounted to $530,320,000 and there was an increase in excess reserve of $1,946,410.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Holiday quietness marked the foreign exchange market. Only a small amount of business was transacted and rates for the most part showed little if any change. Sterling held close to yesterday's quotation, while French francs were a trifle easier. German marks, on the other hand, were slightly firmer.

BANK OF ENGLAND DISCOUNT RATE BACK TO BASIS OF JULY, 1914

REPARATION PLAN CHANGES SHOULD BE MADE OPENLY

Financial London's View on Question of Modifying Germany's Payments — Suspicions Should Be Avoided, Says Writer

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 15.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"The financial district skepticism regarding Genoa is unabated. Russia's burst of repentance being too sudden and well-timed to be convincing.

"Opinion here is by no means averse to modifying German reparation payments on lines absolutely insuring Germany's ability to pay, and especially is ready to countenance a spreading of payments over a prolonged period. We are firmly convinced, however, that such objects only will be attained if diplomacy is no longer secret. All details should be openly disclosed, thereby avoiding suspicion.

Bond Issue Proposed.

"The suggestion by the chairman of Barclays Bank, to the effect that a settlement might be effected through Germany giving France reparations bonds, which France could endorse and give to us, in settlement of her debts to Britain, we in turn endorsing and giving the bonds to you in settlement of our debt, is disapproved in responsible quarters, where it is considered that we had far better face our liability now than assume a contingent liability, which might be awkward at some future date and give Germany an opportunity, through default, of seriously embarrassing Britain and France.

"It is considered that the easy money will last for a considerable period, because international trade must revive gradually. If as a consequence of Genoa and grandiose schemes for international credits there should be a rapid trade revival, it will be on an unsound basis. The financial district has a veritable dread of these proposed new international trading corporations under Government basis.

"Your situation meanwhile is viewed with some anxiety, owing to the soldiers' bonus bill. It is considered that the war brought you two great influences, one wholly favorable, namely, an enormous trade balance; the other and more dangerous factor being a great credit expansion and colossal gold accumulations. Therefore, it is believed that continued slack trade might produce more unsound conditions in America than anywhere.

Trade Figures Satisfactory.

"Our domestic politics will be largely determined by Ireland and Genoa. If developments in those directions are favorable, a general election is possible before June. Otherwise the Government will hang on till later. I have good reason to assert that if Grenfell is formally selected as city candidate, Sir Reginald McKenna will not become an opposition candidate, as from his position as chairman of the biggest bank, he probably would not agree to contest any seat, only accepting one if unopposed.

"Trade figures are satisfactory. The value of imports is £94,000,000 against £69,000,000 for February, and exports are valued at £75,500,000 against £68,000,000 in February. March imports are greater than either January or February and are within 6 per cent of the value of imports in March, 1921, despite the fall in the average level of prices during the past year."

MAJORITY OF LIBERTY ISSUES CROSSED PAR DURING PAST WEEK

NEW YORK, April 15.—The outstanding feature of an almost unparalleled week of activity and strength in the bond market was the crossing of par by a majority of the Liberty series.

The incentive for this movement was furnished by the announcement that the Treasury Department contemplated an issue of certificates of indebtedness on a 3½ per cent basis, the lowest interest rate for this offering in almost five years.

Many of the foreign issues floated here during and since the war also rose to best prices for one to four years, with United Kingdoms, Canadian, French, Swiss and Belgian offerings as notable examples.

Chinese, Japanese, Dutch East Indians and numerous Latin-American bonds shared in the rise, Mexican Government 4s and 5s making material additions to the previous week's upward movement. Easy money also was a marked influence in the steady rise of domestic railway bonds, especially the many convertible, refunding and other underlying issues.

Today's bond market followed the strong and general demand for stocks. In the international division a 2-point gain for French municipals was the central feature. Coalers were foremost among the domestic group, especially Erie, Baltimore & Ohio and Chesapeake & Ohio. Total sales (par value) aggregated $9,948,000.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Not in two years, since the culmination of the last stage of the post-war boom in April, 1920, has a speculative movement reached the pitch of enthusiasm that was seen today. It seems unreasonable that an advance of a cent a gallon in the price of gasoline should have started such a violent speculation as has been seen during the past week in the oils. The street reckons, of course, that this is merely the beginning of a general raising of oil quotations, which with the unusually heavy reserve on hand, it figures it will mean large profits and higher dividends for the oil producing and refining companies. But even on this theory the pace set in this quarter of the market has been exceedingly swift.

The market was in no mood today, however, for much sober reflection. What had happened on Thursday in the oils had made a powerful appeal over the holiday. A rush of buying orders lifted these stocks a point to 3 points before the Stock Exchange session was a quarter of an hour old. The wild trading in the oils overshadowed the entire market. Undoubtedly it furnished the cover for very heavy realizing sales in other directions, but it did not interfere with vigorous buying operations in some of the other industrials and in a number of the rails. New York Central made a new high and the entire set of Southern stocks were carried along by the jump in Seaboard Air Line bonds and stocks which accompanied the report that the company had arranged a large loan with the Government.

It was another big day also and a day of generally rising prices, in the bond list. Wheat options went higher on word of flood damage, but the foreign exchanges did nothing to speak of. The weekly statement of the Bank of Germany disclosed no check as yet upon the output of paper money. The circulation item increased another 1,200,000,000 marks to a new high record. Announcement that the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond had reduced its discount rate from 5 to 4½ per cent fitted in with the detailed figures of reserve ratios, showing an increase in that district from 57.1 to 60.1 per cent during the week, and a comparison with 41.8 at this time last year.

The Bond Market.

The demand for foreign Government external loans and domestic railway mortgages kept trading in the bond market today at maximum volume and sent many issues to new high prices. Liberty bonds were active and little changed from Thursday's close. Among the foreign loans to better their previous tops were the Japanese 4s, Mexican 5s, Argentine 7s, Czecho-Slovakia 8s, Soa Paulo 8s and Department of the Seine 7s. French municipals rose fractionally and the rest of the group slightly or held firm.

In the railway section numerous advances to new highs included the Seaboard Air Line adjustment 6s to around 30, in sympathy with the display of strength was due to the lisplay of strength was due to the report that the financial position of the Seaboard company had been greatly helped by a Grande reloan. Denver & Rio Grande refunding 5s, the M. K. & T. adjustments and Frisco incomes all worked into new high ground. Industrial bonds were strong.

The flotation of the $15,000,000 30-year 5 per cent Province of Ontario bonds this week was an influence in the New York market for Canadian provincial bonds.

Eventful Week.

The past week will go down as the most important of the season so far in the financial markets. The outstanding incident was the rise in most United States war loans to par for the first time that any of them have sold since they were brought out. This was the logical consequences of the Treasury's announcement that the rate on its new issue of six months certificates was to be 3½ per cent, the lowest since September, 1917. Immediately following and probably influenced by the action of the Treasury Department, the Bank of England dropped its discount from 4½ to 4 per cent. It was the second reduction in two months and brought the rate back to where it stood in July, 1914, the month before the world war.

White Motor.

White Motor business continues to improve. The company reports March orders were approximately 20 per cent higher than any month since May, 1920, and that deliveries exceeded any month since September, 1920. The first quarter's business, in both orders and deliveries, shows considerable increase over the corresponding quarter last year. Loans have been reduced since Jan. 1 to $3,300,000, with over $2,500,000 cash on hand, in addition to the dividend payment of $500,000 on March 31.

Financial Notes.

The New Cornelia Copper Co. today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable May 22 to stock of record May 5.

The General Tire and Rubber Co. declared the regular 2 per cent dividend on the common stock payable May 1.

The Otis Elevator Co. for the first three months of this year earned after depreciation, $905,806. After deducting $100,000 for Federal tax requirements and $25,000 for the pension fund, the total net was $780,806.

The board of directors of the Power Truck and Tractor Co. have declared a first quarterly dividend of one-half of 1 per cent, amounting to 50 cents per share, payable to the stock holders of record of Jan. 31, 1922.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The market for European exchange was generally strong all through the past week, its chief feature being the advance in French and Italian exchanges to new high levels for the year. The greatest strength and activity were displayed in the first two days of the week, when an incentive for buying was furnished in the satisfaction prevailing in banking circles here and abroad over the progress recorded at the Genoa conference.

"Dealings in sterling were on a large scale on Monday and Tuesday, demand sterling then advancing to $4.42¼, but trading fell off later in the week when the market was influenced by the observance of religious holidays in England and on the Continent. The approach of the Easter holidays also caused almost an entire cessation of business in London after the first few days of the week. French exchange was directly influenced on the assumption that the entrance of Russia at the Genoa conference was evidence of a possibility of the soviet government accepting the principle of recognition of obligations of preceding administrations.

"Exchange on Greece was interrupted by the commencement of the terms of the forced loan and the quotation of drachmas in this city were nominal and based wholly on the rates cabled from London. An interesting feature of the market was the demonstration of strength in exchange on Czecho-Slovakia, which rose to 2.05, a new high for the year, although it had been a matter of general understanding that plans for rearrangement of the currency of that country made 2 cents to the crown a reasonable maximum. German was strong for a short period, but the continued output of currency depressed the rates for marks again towards the end of the week.

"Holiday quietness marked the foreign exchange market. Only a small amount of business was transacted and rate for the most part showed little if any change. Sterling held close to yesterday's quotation, while French francs were a trifle easier. German marks, on the other hand, were slightly firmer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Oil shares were the outstanding feature of the Curb Exchange today. There was urgent buying of Standard Oil of Indiana from the beginning of business and that stock reached a new high record. Mexican Seaboard also acted well. At the opening profit-taking caused a drop of about a point, but renewed buying developed and a sharp recovery followed. Floor traders have bene selling the oils recently because they did not share in the adavnce which took place in other departments, and covering was responsible for part of the advance which took place today. Special attention was given to issues which are likely to be benefited by the higher tendency in gasoline prices, and this was the chief topic of discussion among the buyers of Standard Oil of Indiana.

In the miscellaneous group there was considerable irregularity. Traders apparently abandoned many of the stocks temporarily and gave their attention to the oils and some of the mining issues, which were in good demand and made a sharp advance. Canada Copper was one of the leaders in the latter group, moving up sharply.

Some of the leading commission houses were large buyers of bonds. The market was firm and advances were quite general.

New York Metals.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The copper market showed firmness but was less active. Today's quotations for electrolytic were 12½ cents for spot and 12¾ to 13 cents for later deliveries. Iron was firm and higher.

HOG MARKET UNSETTLED AND PRICES RANGE OFF

Beef Steers Slow of Sale and Closed Week 25 Cents Lower—Sheep Down.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago
Cattle & Calves	17,023	12,350	12,885
Hogs	68,017	57,178	73,023
Sheep	7,533	4,112	5,757
Totals	92,573	73,640	91,665

Material declines in virtually all departments featured the week's trade in livestock at the St. Louis National Stock Yards. Cattle and hogs were in fair supply, but the sheep and lamb run again totaled light. Cattle supply at approximately 17,000 head was larger than previous weeks and proved more than ample for trade requirements. Beef steers were slow of sale and closed generally 25c lower. Stocker types showed strength early in the period, but closed no better than steady. Quality was slightly improved so far as steers and yearlings were concerned. The top for matured beeves was $8.35 per cwt. paid for a drove of Nebraska bullocks that averaged here 1309 lbs. Other heavy steers made $8.25 and $8.20, with a spread of $7 to $7.75 catching the bulk of all killing classes sold. Some plain steers registered around $6.75. A load of choice feeder steers topped at $7.50, the highest here in recent trade. The bulk of all steers intended for stocker or feeder purposes cashed from $5.75 to $6.75. The offering of yearling cattle was excessive and values broke 25c to 50c in a dull session. Steers and heifers mixed topped this department at $8.25. Numerous other lots of lightweight yearlings centered around $8 and a spread of $6 to $7.60 caught the majority of all sold. Butcher cows varied from steady to 25c lower. Most of the offering moved from $4 to $5.75, best reaching $6, $6.25 and $6.50 in extreme cases. Canner cows at $2.50 to $3 and cutter cows at $3 to $3.75 were unchanged. Bulls dropped 15c to 25c in the trade, beef types moving largely at $4.25 to $5. Bolognas following at $3.75 to $4.50 and canners varying from $3 to $3.50. Veal calves opened steady, but suffered a violent break late in the period. Closing prices for good veals were $7 to $7.50 as against $8 to $8.75 Monday.

Hog Market Unsettled.

Hog market was extremely unsettled, with price trend downward, starting out with the highest top in about a month and later receding to the lowest level in over six weeks. An active packer and city butcher demand was offset by increased receipts and a slow shipping trade, the latter taking not over a third of the total supply, whereas ordinarily about 60 per cent of the arrivals move through this source of outlet. Declines since the close of last week amount to 25 to 40 cents on hogs and 50c to $1 on pigs and lights. Rough hogs show little if any change. Receipts for the period increased from 57,178 to 68,017 and the offerings were of better than average quality. Market started out active and strong, with a top of $10.90 Monday, compared to $10.85 on closing day the preceding week. Friday was the low point, with a top of $10.35. In the closing session prices turned upward and top moved to $10.45, with bulk of hogs selling from $10.35 to that figure. Strong weight and heavy hogs were scarce and demand uncertain, hogs weighing 240 to 260 pounds selling from $10.25@10.30, stronger weights $10.10@10.20 and heavies around 300 pounds from $10@10.10. Good weight native pigs sold at $9.75@10.15 at the close, medium weights $8.75@9.50 and pigs under 100 pounds from $7@8.75. Bulk of the good rough sows went at $8.75@8.85, with a few at $9; stags from $6.50@7.25.

Sheep Sell Down.

With continued light receipts, the sheep and lamb market was on a strong, active basis until near the week's close, when values took a sudden turn downward, lambs finishing 25c off and fat sheep 25 to 50 cents lower. Receipts all told were 7533, but fully 75 per cent of the total run consisted of stock billed direct or through and several classes were not represented all week. In fact, not one load of good wool lambs appeared and fat handyweight sheep were almost as scarce. Several loads of good fresh clipped lambs appeared and these sold in a spread of $13.65@13.90. Medium to common grades found a very slow and unsatisfactory market. A few spring lambs are commencing to show and these are finding a ready outlet to city butchers, but packers have not started to buy and there is no established market, prices being subject to wild fluctuations. The best spring lambs during the week brought $20@22. Fat ewes sold early in the week at $9.50, but at this time are down to $9, with best clipped at $8.50.

Horses and Mules.

Under comparatively light receipts and a moderate demand from all sections, the horse and mule market showed a good average at St. Louis during the week just ended. Everything sold satisfactorily except small, thin and green mules. Trade in these was very dull. Both southern and eastern horses found ready outlet at firm prices. Some sales were stronger. All of the desirable mules also moved readily, selling to dealers and outsiders. Combined receipts approximated 1300 head, with the two classes about evenly divided.

STRENGTH OF FOREIGN MARKETS FIRMS WHEAT

The higher range of wheat prices during the past week came largely as a result of reported revival of export buying.

A foreign demand in the wheat market gave evidence of more activity than for some time past, a reported turn for the worse in the European crop outlook being the chief reason assigned, although talk was also current that hopefulness in regard to the developments expected from the economic conference at Genoa had inspired some of the buying. Failure of the Liverpool market of late to follow price declines on this side of the Atlantic attracted special notice among traders here, and was interpreted by some to indicate a decided change of view on the part of at least some big interests abratd.

Advance of 7½c Saturday.

Recent sellers for a decline were driven to cover in an exciting wheat market on the Merchants' Exchange Saturday, May wheat closing at the top for the day and 7½c above the previous close. July and September wheat rose 2½c. Corn futures advanced a cent. The trade was thought to be mindful of the sharp upturn in May wheat last year and of a report from Chicago dealing with reported large holdings of May wheat by certain individuals. The Northwest weather outlook was not favorable. The late spring was an influence in the corn market. There were unfavorable crop reports from France and North Africa.

In the local cash grain market Saturday red winter wheat was 3c to 5c higher on fair milling demand, both for local account and on orders. Receipts were light and closely cleaned up at close. Only a few cars of hard wheat were offered and quotations were 4c to 6c higher. A price of $1.42 to $1.44 was asked for No. 2 soft white. White corn was ½@1c higher and yellow 1@1½c better. Elevators, mills and the feed trade brought. A couple of cars of white were taken to fill shiping orders. No mixed corn sale was reported. Shippers and accumulators were good buyers of oats and the limited offerings were readily disposed of at ¾c to 1c advance.

Bradstreet's reported weekly exports of 4,955,000 bushels of wheat and flour against 6,895,000 year ago. Last week's exports were 5,270,000 bushels.

May wheat opened at $1.32⅝, July wheat $1.30¾, September $1.16¾, May corn 58¼c, July corn 62⅞c and September corn 64⅝c. The early firmness was credited to the recent report of export business and to fact that while crop reports were mixed, the unfavorable ones were reported a little more numerous. Liverpool market was closed owing to Easter holidays. May corn showed little easier tone when other futures were higher.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 465 cars, compared with 505 a week ago and 470 last year, Minneapolis receiving 201, Duluth 59 and Winnipeg 205.

Local wheat receipts Saturday (two days), which were 98,400, compared with 55,236 a week ago and 374,499 last year, included 63 cars local and 19 through. Corn receipts, which were 59,800, compared with 35,100 a week ago and 84,500 last year, included 24 cars local and 22 through. Oats receipts, which were 92,000, compared with 28,000 a week ago and 140,000 last year, included 30 cars local and 16 through. Hay receipts were 399 tons local and 82 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 874,000 bu, compared with 497,000 a week ago and 1,123,000 last year. Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago, and heavier than a year ago, being 743,000 bu, compared with 474,000 a week ago and 314,000 last year. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 564,000 bu, compared with 337,000 a week ago and 357,000 last year.

Primary shipments of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 583,000 bu, compared with 515,000 a week ago and 455,000 last year. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 553,000 bu, compared with 476,000 a week ago and 424,000 last year. Oats shipments were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 401,000 bu, compared with 493,000 a week ago and 377,000 last year.

Weekly Butter Review.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 15.—An acute shortage of butter, characteristic of the month of April developed during the week ending today and sent prices bound to higher levels, according to the weekly review of the United States Bureau of Markets. Buyers who had held off as long as possible in anticipation of lower markets, began anticipating their wants as the week advanced and supplies became lighter. Those who did not soon found it almost impossible to fill their orders even at rapidly advancing prices. By Thursday the price of 92 score had advanced from ½ to 3½ cents and it was not until toward the close, when the markets became easier that there were indications of a more balanced supply and demand.

Recent heavy rains and generally bad weather have caused a delay in receipts and also has resulted in a poorer quality.

Despite light supplies on all the markets there was no real confidence among the operators. Every one realized that it would take but a small increase in the supplies or a small decrease in the demand to cause a break. As a result when the available supply at New York late Thursday became only slightly larger there was an immediate weakening of the market, which resulted in a decline on Friday.

CHICAGO, April 15.—It was a real old-fashioned bull market in wheat, with most of the activity confined to the May. It was a year ago when a sensational rise in May got under way and many who believe that the action of the market repeats itself were climbing in the bull band wagon in anticipation of a similar move.

Late months were benefited by the rise in May. Rough weather is forecast for the Northwest, which will delay preparations of the seed bed. Domestic shipping was slow, but buying of futures was noted by export houses. Omaha sold 25,000 bushels of wheat to come to Chicago. Shipping sales were 17,000 bushels. The market closed 1⅝c to 9c higher. May, $1.42¾@1.43; July, $1.25¾@1.26; September, $1.20.

Corn was affected by the action of wheat. A broader commission house demand for July was noted, based on the late spring. Illinois points offered corn to arrive for the first time in two weeks. Domestic shipping demand for corn was light. No evidence of any export demand was noted. Shipping sales were 40,000 bushels. The market closed 1⅛c to 1¾c higher; May 61½c to 61¾c; July, 65c to 64¼c; September, 67⅛c to 67¾c.

Oats followed the trend of other grains. Commission houses bought the deferred futures, while cash houses transferred hedges. Longs in May took advantage of the bulge to take profits. Better demand for cash oats was noted. Shipping sales were 90,000 bushels. The market closed ⅝c to ¾c higher; May, 38¾c to 38¼c; July, 41¼c to 41c; September, 42⅞@43c.

Provisions were firm. Pork closed unchanged, lard 7½c to 12½c higher and ribs 20c to 22½c higher.

New York Cottonseed Oil.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The cottonseed oil market was easy and lower today under commission house selling, due to the early weakness in lard. Last prices showed 1 to 7 points net decline. Sales, 3300 barrels. Prime crude, $10, nominal; prime summer yellow, spot, $11.50@11.80; May, $11.47; July, $11.39; September, $11.32; all bid.

MAN ENDED LIFE IN PARK

A Coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of suicide following an inquest over the body of William R. Elgin, 57 years old, of 5753 Maffitt avenue, who was found dead on a bench in O'Fallon Park early Friday. An autopsy showed he had died of poisoning.

William Brusse, a casual visitor in the park, told the Coroner of finding the body lying on a bench. Brusse shook the apparently sleeping man with the exclamation: "Wake up, Old Topper!" but Elgin was found to be dead. Papers on his body showed him to be a member of the local carpenters' union. These showed he had made payment on a lot in Valhalla Cemetery and had arranged to buy a monument to cost $368.

ANSWERED ROBBERY CALL IMMEDIATELY, DONNELLY SAYS

Chief of Police Donnelly of Webster Groves has called the attention of the Post-Dispatch to an error in the news story printed Wednesday, regarding the invasion of the Hodgdon card party by robbers the previous afternoon. It was stated that, after Miss Teddie Hodgdon called the telephone operator, saying "Police," and giving the number of her home, the Chief of Police called the house, and getting the reply, "Nobody home," started for the house.

Chief Donnelly said, "I started for the Hodgdon house as soon as I got word from the telephone operator that someone there had called up and had said 'Police.' I would not wait in such a case to telephone; if people want a policeman, they want him quickly. There was a call to the Hodgdon home, which was answered by a man who said 'Nobody home,' but the call was not sent by me, but by one of the telephone operators."

The robbers were still at the Hodgdon home when Chief Donnelly and policemen accompanying him approached the home. The robbers fled by the rear door and one of them was caught in the neighborhood soon afterward and another in St. Louis.

NEW PLAYS AND FILMS AND NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN PLAYERS

Elsie Janis With Her Gang; Walter Scanlan Sings in "Irish Eyes"

Army Entertainment and Gaelic Romance Conclude Local Theater Season—Bills at Popular-Price Houses.

EASTER WEEK, from present indications, sets a premature period to the theatrical season of 1921-22. The Shubert-Jefferson definitely announces that it will close next Saturday night, so far as regular engagements are concerned, and the American confesses its moral certainty that the same date will end its activities until next fall.

For its valedictory offering the American announces Elsie Janis and her "gang" in a revue, the cast of which is composed mostly of ex-service men. The Jefferson will present Walter Scanlan, Irish tenor, in a Hibernian opus entitled "Irish Eyes." Both open tonight. Miss Janis has not visited St. Louis for several years; Scanlan appeared here last season in "Hearts of Erin."

Miss Janis, one of the most versatile entertainers before the public, wrote the text of her revue and sketched its plot, such as is discernible; composed most of the music, designed costumes and settings, produced the show, and takes the principal part. It is said to be based on her ·perlences with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. This entertainment, or something like it, has been presented in London and Paris.

It is promised that the star will be on the stage most of the time, either alone or with members of her company, and that towards the end she will offer several of the feats of mimicry for which she is best known.

A Revolving Stage.

ADVANCE notices of "Irish Eyes" dilate upon its revolving stage, which eliminates waits between acts, and also spans the distance between Riverside Drive in New York and Galway Bay, in Ireland, in both of which localities the scenes are placed. Concerning the plot no information is forthcoming; it would perhaps seem superfluous in view of the fact that Scanlan is to sing "Mavourneen," "Kathleen," "My Galway Rose" and other Gaelic ditties.

The Orpheum's program this week includes Harry Watson Jr., with his familiar stunts in a telephone booth and as "Young Kid Battling Dugan;" Ben Welch, who is said to have become blind, but who continues to offer his character portrayals, this time in a skit called "Pals," with Frank Murphy; Tom Broan and Lillian Broderick in "Billboard Steps," a dancing turn, with Lucille Jarrett; and Fred Lindsay, said to have been a Lieutenant-Colonel in the British army and a hunting companion of Theodore Roosevelt, who gives examples of Australian sports and pastimes. Others on the bill are Claude Golden, card expert; Jack Inglis, and the Three Regals, gymnasts. The proceeds of Friday's matinee performance will be donated to the insurance fund of the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc.

For the first half of the week, the Columbia's leading item will be Rolfe's revue, described as an act combining music, dancing and comedy. Other skits on the bill are those of Lamey and Pearson, comedians, in "A Tale of Two Cities;" Alexander and Fields, in "Two of the Idle Rich;" Charles Frink, banjo player, and Jackson and Smith, eccentric comedians. The film feature is "The Hole in the Wall," with Alice Lake. Beginning Thursday, the program will be led by Sternad's Midgets. The film will be "Money to Burn," adapted from Sewell Ford's "Cherub Divine," with William Russell.

Rialto, Empress, Gayety

THE Rialto promises Al Lydell and Carleton Macy, comedians, in "Old Cronies;" Felix Adler and Frances A. Ross; Tsen-Mei, "the Chinese Nightingale;" Claude Golden, and Gautier brothers in "An Animated Toyshop," and the "Three Whirlwinds," skaters.

The Empress announces an international musical entertainment called "Chic Supreme;" the Ty-Bell sisters, Hall and Francis, in "Town and Country;" Fulton and Burt, and the "Seven Tumbling Demons."

The Gayety's show is "The Bon Ton Girls," a numerous burlesque company headed by John Barry and George Douglas, whose principal number is "Breaking Into Society." Afternoon and evening band concerts in front of the house are promised.

Jack Winn, an old-time press agent, has turned actor. He's playing the part of "Potaje" in "Blood and Sand," the Rodolph Valentino Paramount picture which Fred Niblo is directing.

Winn used to tell the world about such famous old-time shows as "The Fortune Hunter," "On Trial," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "The Merry Widow" and Barnum & Bailey's circus. Then for six years he was a theater manager in Los Angeles before giving press agentry the go-by in favor of acting.

William Duncan has just completed one of the most difficult roles of his screen career. In his latest picture, "The Silent Vow," the athletic Western star not only directed the entire production, but assumed a dual role, that of a father and son. The illusion is very cleverly kept up throughout the picture by some unusual double exposures. One trick which has never been worked before is the crossing of the "deadline" in the middle of the scene, in which Duncan, as the father, sits in a chair, and Duncan as the son walks in back of him. How this was done is a technical secret which Director Duncan refuses to divulge. Edith Johnson has the leading feminine role.

LONDON, April 15.

IN his new play, "Other People's Worries," at the Comedy Theater, R. C. Carton proves again that he has a wonderful eye for situation. There is a scene in Act III to rival the fancy ball scene in "Lord and Lady Algy," which is a classic of the kind. The ingredients of this scene are nothing to speak of—precisely because they are not there to be spoken of, but to be presented to the spectator.

There is a helpless invalid, slipping from his chair to the floor. There is a raging Major standing over him and bullying him with questions. There is another man, trying to protect the invalid, trying to keep his own temper, yet ending by being more in a rage than the Major.

That the invalid is a private inquiry agent whom the Major supposes to have evidence that the latter's wife is a bigamist, that the other man supposes the same thing, and that both are mistaken—these are subordinate, almost irrelevant, facts. The point of the situation is in itself; the absurd wrigglings of the invalid, the irate gestures of the Major, the rising anger of the other man. This situation keeps the spectators in convulsions of laughter.

Mr. Carton's dialogue is richly droll, and it has the peculiar virtue of the theater of being the right thing in the right place—for instance, the music hall lingo of the "topical vocalist" in the incongruous setting of a Mayfair drawing room, whither the vocalist has been brought to take part in a charity concert. To tell the story of the play would be to spoil it; it is for the theater; something to be presented, not narrated.

"Pride and Prejudice."

A DRAMATIC version of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," by Eileen and J. C. Squire, was presented the other evening at the Palace Theater before a brilliant audience that included the Queen, and with a cast in which Miss Ellen Terry and Mrs. Kendal appeared as guests in the ballroom scene.

To devotees of Jane Austen the occasion was hardly festive. To find the novel turned topsy-turvy for stage purposes—Mr. Collins proposing at the ball and Mr. Darcy at Pemberley, Elizabeth and Jane and everybody else brought to Pemberley by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett (with two t's!), and Pemberley itself transported from Derbyshire to the neighbor-

Eddie Cantor Hits and Misses in a New Revue

NEW YORK, April 15.

AFTER a season of varieties, the Winter Garden turned back to musical comedy Thursday night with "Make It Snappy!" an extravaganza in two acts of 27 scenes which stars Eddie Cantor and features Nan Halperin. Other principals are Cleveland Bonner, Muriel de Forest, Tot Qualters, Lew Hearn, Dolly Hackett, J. Harold Murray, Joe Opp, Marie Burke, Margaret Wilson, Conchita Piquer, Nell Carrington, Hermosa Jose and Ingrid Solfeng. Harold Atteridge is responsible for book and lyrics, Jean Schwartz for the music, Charles Sinclair and J. C. Hoffman for the staging and Watson Barrett for the scenic designs.

Eddie Cantor is the show; he can make a bad joke clutch an audience like a high note. He whips up a song to such a pace that for a moment one fancies he is going somewhere. His performance is hit or miss, and there are many leads which do not land. But at his best he is funny, and "Make It Snappy" contains a good deal of his best. His most effective act—where have we seen this before?—is in a tailor shop, where Cantor succeeds in selling a suit to a customer. An attempt by the comedian to stress his serious undertone by singing a pathetic ballad meets with failure. It does not get over as the ballads of Al Jolson do.

At the beginning of the performance, one of the comic characters remarked that he knew his son must be studying languages at college because he had received a bill of $500 for Scotch. One feared that it would all be like that. But most of Cantor's lines were amusing. At any rate, they seemed so.

One song of Nan Halperin's is diverting, and some phases of Cleveland Bonner's ballet are beautiful. Conchita Piquer, who was so amazingly good in "The Wild Cat," is almost lost in "Make It Snappy!" This year the girls on the runway are tossing ice cream bricks at the audience.

Romping Charlotte Greenwood.

THAT long, lanky, taffy-haired, likeable Greenwood girl, Charlotte, tripped blithely back into the night life of Forty-eighth street last Monday evening. She came in on a breeze of those comic little sayings called Daffydils—some new and some not, but all rather fresh—a smattering of "fly" remarks and some pretty costumes. "Letty Pepper" is musical, but not very much that way. It is not at all lacking in fun when Charlotte is swinging her arms, tripping over her train, and the like. Humor never fails her somehow, even in the tightest moments. And it seems spontaneous.

Oliver Morosco and his co-writer, Eugene V. Hobart, set Miss Greenwood down in the beginning as an abused department store clerk, and apparently struck out to make another "Irene" or "Sally" play. However, before they traveled far they realized Miss Greenwood's incorrigibility. From about the middle of the first of the two acts matters seemed to be entirely in the star's hands. Burlesque and comedy simply rolled over one another, hit or miss. And although the delightful King sisters, Jane and Mary, were allowed to perform two or three pleasing song numbers, there appeared to be few others in the cast to occupy the spotlight. On second thought there were Master Gabriel, the rather talented midget, and little Frances Victory, who played a child part well.

A lovely interior setting of colored silks and hidden lights adorned the stage for the second act, representing the display room of Letty Pepper's place of employment. A romping chorus that did its kicking in brief black silk throughout the first act, appeared here in flowing laces and diaphanous little things of great decorative effect.

Ray Raymond, who sang the principal songs with Miss Greenwood, may strike nearer to the key in later performances, and Stewart Wilson may be more merciful in his interpretation of the facial contortions Newest Griffith Spectacle Stars Lilian and Dorothy Gish With French Revolution for Thrilling and Picturesque Background.

ON LOCAL SCREENS

D. W. Griffith's latest feature production, "Orphans of the Storm," a dramatization of favorite old stage play, "The Two Orphans," is the week's feature offering at the Liberty. It has been widely heralded and its first presentation here is certain to arouse great interest among photoplay enthusiasts.

The cast alone would be sufficient to make it notable. Starring together in the title roles are the famous Gish sisters, Lilian and Dorothy, while the leading masculine character is portrayed by Joseph Schildkraut, recent star in the stage success, "Liliom." In the cast also are Sidney Herbert, Monte Blue, Kate Bruce, Creighton Hale, Franke Losee, Catherine Emmett, Morgan Wallace, Sheldon Lewis, Leslie King and other notable stage and screen actors.

Griffith has made "The Two Orphans" over into a historical romance with the tremendously dramatic period of the French Revolution as a background. This is said to greatly enhance the story of the pitiful plight of the two orphan sisters, one blind, who are buffeted about by fate in Paris in a time of lawlessness which makes their safety doubly precarious. The action includes many big mob scenes and character drawings of Robespierre, Danton and other noted French revolutionary figures, with a climax which carries the story to the very steps of the guillotine.

The New Grand Central and West End Lyric have as their Easter week offering a return showing of "The Four Horsemen of the Apoca'ypse," which was the picture of 1921. The stars in this dramatization of the famous novel by Blasco Ibanez are Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry. Valentino has the part of Julio, dashing tango dancer of the Argentine cafes, who goes to Paris and is drawn into the vortex of the world war. It includes many war scenes, but these are incidental to the main plot, a striking story of love and renunciation.

The Missouri Theater this week has a comedy drama picture for its principal photoplay attraction, and it also is stressing a special musical program which, the management believes, will share honors with the screen offerings. This is the presentation by an augmented orchestra of the "William Tell" overture and of Creatore's arrangement of "The Rosary."

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" is the title of the principal picture. This is described as a rollicking farce-comedy, with T. Roy Barnes and Lila Lee in leading roles and with the robust fun-making in the capable hands of Walter Hiers. The story is that of newlyweds who go to a mountain resort for their honeymoon and discover on their arrival that they have lost their marriage certificate. Their plight is made worse by a practical joker, who telephones to the hotel that they are not married.

On the bill also is Corinne Griffith in "The Yellow Girl," which is described as a "screen novelty."

What They Are Doing In the Movie Studios

Viola Dana was acting Mayor of Nashville, Tenn., for 10 minutes, when she visited that city on a recent tour. The Mayor, after giving her official welcome, turned over to her his official chair and told her the city was hers, to do what she wanted with it. The Governor of Tennessee was also on hand to welcome Miss Dana.

The child players in "A Doll's House" are Philippe de Lacey and Barbara Maier. The De Lacey boy was rescued by an American army nurse from a cellar during the bombardment of a little French village near Nancy.

Air pictures of Mount Popocatepetl, the world's highest active volcano, were taken by W. S. Heitzen, a Fox News camera man. From a height of 17,843 feet, in the midst of sulphur vapors, and at a still lower level he made pictures of Mexico's "Sleeping Hell."

"Restless Souls" is the title of the newest Earle Williams' production. The star appears in the role of a physician. Considerable comedy is said to run through the picture, although it also holds many dramatic scenes.

One of the big items on Vitagraph's list of new offerings is "Too Much Business," a seven-reel comedy of business and babies, with a love story thrown in. The comedy is adapted from the well-known Saturday Evening Post story, "John Henry and the Restless Sex," by Earl Derr Biggers.

Pat O'Malley plays the chief role in the forthcoming special, "My Wild Irish Rose." Little "Micky" Daniels also has a prominent part, and the girl is played by Pauline Starke.

"The Sheik's Wife," and "Gypsy Passion," two big special productions, which were recently seen on Broadway, are now being shown in various parts of the country. In "Gypsy Passion," the famous Mme. Rejane is seen on the screen for the first time.

Dorothy Dalton, who has been spending a short vacation in New York has returned to the coast, where she has begun work in "The Siren Call."

Anne Cornwall is the perennial sister of the movies. In her first part in pictures she was sister to Alice Brady. Next she was a temporary member of Irene Castle's family tree; then she was a sister of Richard Barthelmess, and now she is playing the younger sister to Gloria Swanson in her latest picture, "The Gilded Cage."

Thomas Meighan has completed "Our Leading Citizen," written by George Ade. He will begin work soon in 'Manslaughter," Cecil B. De Mille's forthcoming production.

Betty Compson wears a blonde wig again for "The Bonded Woman," her new picture. Betty was a blonde in "The Law and the Woman" and "The Green Temptation," her last two pictures.

Little Miriam Battista, 8-year-old stage and screen star, has been chosen by George Lawrence Nelson, winner of the Isadore gold medal at the last National Academy winter exhibition, for a series of studies in child portraiture. The first in the series is called "Portrait of Miriam Battista." and will soon be exhibited. Mr. Nelson, who is instructor in art at Cooper Union, New York, and the schools of the National Academy of Design, selected the tiny actress as an ideal study of childhood. Little Miriam is best remembered as the crippled girl in "Humoresque." Her more recent appearances have included "At the Stage Door," "The Good Provider" and as the sister of Norma Talmadge in her most recent production, "Smilin' Through." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Battista of New York City. Both her parents were born in Italy. Her great-uncle is the Archbishop of Buglioni.

Mary Hay (Mrs. Richard Barthelmess) has scored such an emphatic success in Russell Janney's production of "Marjolaine," at the Broadhurst Theater, New York, her name is soon to be in electric lights. Mr. Janney has placed her under a five-year contract. Later she will be starred in a comedy now being written especially for her.

Joseph Santley, one of the prominent stars of the "Music Box Revue," current at the Music Box Theater in New York, is considering an offer made by one of the biggest motion picture producing companies to put him forth in a picturization of "When Dreams Come True," the musical comedy in which he appeared for three years. Ivy Sawyer (Mrs. Santley) is included in the offer, and if young Santley accepts she will be seen in the role formerly played by Marie Flynn. May Vokes, who has been appearing in "The Bat," during its long run in New York, has been offered the role of Matilda, the part she created in the original cast of "When Dreams Come True." As Santley's contract for the "Music Box Revue" calls for his appearance throughout the life of that production, the motion picture contract cannot be put in force immediately.

CLOCKS LUXURIES IN ALBANIA

Three Periods of Time, Two Seasons of Year There.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

SCUTARI, Albania, March. 19.—Calendars and clocks are luxuries in Albania. The untutored peasantry know only three periods of time—morning, noon and night—and two seasons of the year—winter and summer. Days and dates are Sanskrit to them. Nor have they any conception of distances. When a traveler asks an Albanian the distance of one point from another he never answers in miles or kilometers, but "it is half a day, it is two days, it is a week." When an Albanian makes an appointment he is considered to have kept it if he comes within two or three hours of the time set.

With the absence of calendars, the people naturally do not know their correct ages, especially those in the country districts. In this respect the women of Albania enjoy an advantage over their sisters in foreign countries, who guard so jealously the secret of their years. Often the age of an Albanian woman is unknown even to herself.

YOU'LL GET RID OF BLACKHEADS SURE

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, and that is to dissolve them.

To do this, get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any mark whatever. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only cause irritation, make large pores and do not get the blackheads out after they become hard. The calonite powder and the water simply dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition. Anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should certainly try this simple method.

Don't Grow Old Before Your Husband

Science Now Shows What Often Causes Premature Loss of Youth, Beauty and Attractivness and Makes Women Fretful, Nervous and Run-Down

If Your Face Is Haggard, Thin, and Pale, Try This Simple Home Remedy Which Often Makes Women Look and Feel Years Younger and Surprisingly Increases Strength and Energy.

Thousands of women are like the woman in this picture. They have grown old much more rapidly than their husbands. The roses have faded from their cheeks, they are weak, pale and careworn at a time of life when they should still be filled with buoyant health and radiant with youthful beauty—pale, thin watery blood has fastened its grip upon them and is gradually sapping their health, vitality and beauty. In most cases men safeguard their health, better than women by eating coarser foods, being more out of doors and leading more active lives, therefore keeping their blood stream strong and vigorous. For want of good blood a woman may look and feel old at thirty; pale, haggard and all run-down—while at fifty or sixty, with good health and plenty of rich, red blood, she may still be young in feeling and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age.

For the purpose of enriching the blood and helping to create millions of new red blood cells, there is nothing like good old Nuxated Iron. Physicians usually prescribe two five-grain tablets after meals. Nuxated Iron directly increases the activity of the blood making organs and supplies true red blood food, thus increasing the power of the body to transform lifeless food matter into living cells, flesh and tissue.

At 40 Years

It is often remarkable what an astonishing difference it makes in a person's appearance to round out face and figure with a few pounds of good firm flesh. It is often equally surprising what a tremendous amount of pep, force and energy a little more oxygenated organic iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance.

FREE

For those who are thin or emaciated in appearance and wish something to help increase their weight, arrangements have been made with druggists to give a large $1.00 package of Nuxated Brand Genuine Yeast Vitamines absolutely free with each bottle of Nuxated Iron that you purchase. In taking Vitamines with Nuxated Iron always take Vitamine Tablets before meals and Nuxated Iron after meals. Weigh yourself before you start, note especially the color in your lips and cheeks, the lines in your face and the tired look around your eyes; then weigh yourself again after ten days and see how much you have increased in weight and improved in color and appearance.

If, after making the above test with Nuxated Iron or Nuxated Iron and Vitamines, you do not obtain all and even greater benefits than you expect, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

"Impossible" Combinations to Insult the Poor Stomach

Quite frequently you hear of some concoction meant to "tone up" the stomach or do some other wonderful thing which the medical profession, with all its knoweledge, would consider a great achievement if it were possible.

Such suggestions usually come from someone who has "heard about it," and takes it upon himself or herself to prescribe. Something like a pint of so and so, a couple of drams of this, an ounce of that—and so on.

But when the stuff is put together, it's a wonder any stomach can stand it. Very frequently it is a combination which is impossible of coordination. Ingredients which simply will not mix.

The best way is to ask the doctor. Our part is to compound what he orders—and do it correctly.

De Wolf Hopper's Revue.

TOO late for this week's review is a new musical production, "Some Party," which opened tonight at Al Jolson's Fifty-ninth Street Theater, with a cast headed by De Wolf Hopper. Jeff de Angelis, Scott Welsh, Percy Haswell, Sam Ash, Herbert Waterous and Nanette Flack are in the organization, which is known as "De Wolf Hopper's Funmakers." R. H. Burnside has arranged the musical numbers, and he and Gustave Kerker have written an opera in one act, "Burning to Sing."

Callers who attempt to see O. P. Heggie in his dressing room at the Booth Theater when he concludes his appearance in "The Truth About Blayds," after 20 minutes in the opening act, are frustrated by a domineering old Victorian in scarlet dressing sack and carpet slippers. This decrepit creature has a startlingly bright eye beneath an overgrowth of eyebrows. He has a powerful voice. But in general he seems to be hovering on the edge of the grave.

It is not possible to see Mr. Heggie. Mr. Heggie is so successfully concealed underneath his 90-year-old exterior that emerging is almost a retreading of the years from 90 down to 40 or thereabouts. Conversation must be with this awe-inspiring ancient, who talks in about this fashion:

"Even if I had opinions on current topics I should not express them. What use is there in an actor coming out with a whole lot of stuff on what he thinks about this thing or that thing? Who on earth cares what he thinks? It's an awful lot of rot. People must get awfully sick of it."

Whiskerless Victorian.

BEING a philosopher and a fisherman, this English actor could be expected to feel that way.

"As for the part of Blayds and the make-up. It has taken me weeks to work out this make-up. You know all the early Victorians wore whiskers. It was about their only real luxury. I didn't want to wear whiskers. They interfere too much. So I dug around and unearthed this photograph of Sir John Herschel, one of Tennyson's contemporaries. He doesn't wear 'em."

Mr. Heggie produced Sir John's picture. It might have been a photograph of Mr. Heggie plus his artificially applied 50 years.

"And although I am only on the stage for some 20 minutes or so, it is the hardest thing I've about ever done—since 'Androcles' anyway. For 30 minutes Blayds' entrance is built up. Nothing else is talked about except Blayds the poet. Then I am wheeled on in an invalid's chair. It looks like the quintessence of ease. But it isn't.

"Dignified Old Bore."

WHY? Well, Blayds is deprived of action except for a few gestures of the hands. He is the center of all eyes. He must live up to this tradition that has been worked up about him. He is 90. He must seem 90, and yet have voice enough to carry. He is a virile old gentleman. You can't do him with a cracked, squeaky voice. He's be an old bore. He must have dignity and humor and he must hold attention while he spins out his yarns. In fact, he must be convincing enough to last the rest of the play."

Thus Mr. Heggie dispelled the notion that he was in for a season of luxurious comfort, with about half a dozen hours of work a week.

"Hindu" Is Hokum.

WALKER WHITESIDE'S latest character role as "The Hindu," at the Comedy Theater, is congenial for two reasons he says. He can wear slippers and the play is just hokum.

Mr. Whiteside, minus his Oriental headdress, sat in his dressing room. He still wore his "cloth of gold," and more than $5 worth of jewelry consisting of 30 or 40 pearl necklaces, sundry moonstones, emeralds, rubies and other priceless (literally) gems worked into the embroidery of his robes, not to mention rings and more rings.

"Nothing is so comfortable as these—these alleged Hindu slippers," he explained. "It is one of the satisfactions of playing a part like this. If you can't wear the comfortable clothes of so-called heathen lands when you are in New York at least you can wear 'em on the stage. That's something. Am I right? I am.

"We don't pretend this play is anything but hokum. It wouldn't be any use pretending anyway. Because that's what it is—hokum. It's great fun playing a thing like this. You don't have to make it real. It isn't real. It is plain, straightaway acting. Am I right? I am.

Grace George as Mrs. Asquith.

MISS GRACE GEORGE is presenting in Chicago this week a new one-act play called "Me and My Diary." It is founded on the autobiography of Margot Asquith. * * *. Arthur Richman, author of "Not So Long Ago" and "Ambush," has sold a new play, "The Awful Truth," to Gilbert Miller, who will produce it soon in San Francisco, with Ruth Chatterton in the leading role. It is said to be in the lighter vein of "Not So Long Ago," with which Richman made his debut as a playwright a couple of years ago.

Peggy Hopkins, it is rumored, is to play the title part in Eugene Walter's latest play, "The Flapper," which is to have an early out-of-town hearing. * * * Geraldine Farrar subscribed $100 for a box at the benefit to be given next Sunday night at the Apollo Theater, for

"Now I Can Walk," Says Mrs. Southcott of Medina.

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power of Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 60 cents a large box."

Read this letter, written February 14, 1916, by Mrs. Albert Southcott, of Medina, N. Y. It seems like a miracle, but it is true, every word of it.

I know it because I get similar letters almost every day from people who have used my ointment for old sores, eczema and piles.

Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from an old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

Three New Plays for Easter Week in Gotham Theaters

NEW YORK, April 15.

THREE new productions are promised for Easter week in the local theaters, including Marjorie Rambeau's new vehicle, at first called "Jenny Jones," but at the last moment rechristened as "The Goldfish." The list follows:

Monday.

Maxine Elliott's—"The Goldfish," an intimate study of married life adapted from the French by Gladys Unger; in the cast are Marjorie Rambeau, Wilton Lackaye, Robert T. Haines and others.

Saturday.

Rose Coghlan. Miss Farrar will be unable to attend and asks that the box be resold in her name.

The first American performance of "Out to Win," with William Faversham, will occur Tuesday night at the Majestic Theater in Buffalo. This is an English play by Roland Pertwee and Dion Clayton Calthrop, which was presented last season at the Shaftesbury Theater, London. * * * James K. Hackett and Beatrice Beckley (Mrs. Hackett), will appear as Othello and Desdemona at the Shakspeare birthday celebration to be held April 27 at Stratford-on-Avon.

When Infant Phenomenon Grows Up

CHILD phenomena of the stage do not always prove false alarms when they grow up. Wallace Eddinger, co-star with Mary Nash in "Captain Applejack," made his first footlight appearance in the role of Little Lord Fauntleroy. Joseph Santley of Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue," began his stage life at the mature age of 3, as a little girl. In a repertory company he was a sweet little maid one week and a devilish little boy the next. Ernest Truex, who plays the young husband in "Six-Cylinder Love," appeared as Hamlet at the age of 5. With another infant prodigy as Ophelia, he toured the West in Shakspearean readings.

Gilbert Miller is sailing soon for London to negotiate for two theaters. At one he intends to present Doris Keane in "The Czarina," and at the other George Arliss in William Archer's "The Green Goddess."

hood of Brighton—these were comparatively minor annoyances.

What is really serious is the inevitable deformation of the novel, the alteration of its values and scheme of color, in the process of transfer to the stage. But the affair was greatly enjoyed by the majority of the audience, who presumably were not rigorous Austenites.

"The Afrikander."

A PLAY wherein one man behaves with remarkable unscrupulousness, which is nevertheless a play without a villain—this is the feat upon which Henderson Bland is to be complimented in the writing of "The Afrikander," now on view at the Kingsway. After an opening in which little is done and much said of no great consequence, the action suddenly quickens when James Courtenay, finding that Frank Hardy is about to propose to Vivien Ramsay, makes him believe that Vivien is not the widow that she thinks herself to be. Ramsay, Courtenay says, is still alive in South Africa.

Hardy believes this, partly because it is told him by a friend whom he trusts, and partly because the playwright has written here a vigorous and plausible passage of deception. This brings us to a closely written and admirably performed second act.

There are divers complexities of plot which need not be unraveled here. But how is it that Courtenay, though he has lied again and again and has behaved to his friend and his lady as only villains behave, is yet not a villain? He is unscrupulous because he loves; that is his plea; and somehow the author and the actor playing the part, Robert Minster, between them compel the audience to accept it.

"Getting Married" Revived.

IT IS 14 years since Shaw's "Getting Married" was first produced; revived now at the Everyman Theater, it proves to have stood the test of time better than many of Mr. Shaw's plays. The reason may be that "Getting Married" is not a play, but a symposium of what Mr. Shaw was thinking about 14 years ago. His thoughts are always interesting, and thoughts at that time were very interesting indeed. His revolutionary ideas are still mildly shocking, and one or two thoughts that were platitudes then have through the passage of time become original again. As for the acting—one might as well expect a work of Plato to be acted.

Another play by Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, "Old Bill, M. P.," is to be put on at the Golders Green Hippodrome next Monday night. It is a big-scale piece, in two acts of 14 scenes. Music has been composed by Norman O'Neill, Ernest Irving and Miss Ivy St. Helier. Capt. Bairnsfather will himself play in the production.

LLOYD GEORGE OFTEN SINGS TO FORGET POLITICS

By Cable to the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20 Cockspur st., London, S. W.

LONDON, April 15.—Of all the statesmen who have bene British Prime Minister, Lloyd George has been, and is, most photographed. His countrymen now expect innumerable still pictures and movies of him whenever he goes holiday-making or to a peace conference. So, this week, the movies here have special "close-up" of the mighty David planting potatoes, fishing and golfing in his Welsh homeland.

But there are no "close-ups" of his hymn-singing efforts while away on his last vacation. This was one of the most important doings of his holiday, for the Premier himself said it was the one thing that made him forget politics. Lord Riddell, his close confidant, complained when he returned to London with the Premier:

"There was too much hymn singing and not enough golf."

Those who know the Premier's home life say he often plays his own accompaniment on the organ, or, at other times, gathers around the organ with his family and has a Sunday evening songfest of old Welsh hymns.

In the last six months the Premier's great shock of hair has turned very white.

Large Asia Minor Nut Crop.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 15.—The largest nut crop Asia Minor has produced in eight years is harvested and ready for shipment from this port. Fully a third of the crop, which is chiefly filberts, will go to America, while the balance will remain in Turkey. Much of the crop is grown in the interior and brought to Trebizond by nomad camel trains. Shelled filberts are sold here at about three cents a pound, competing successfully with all other food products. The nuts are used as both vegetable and dessert.

FAMOUS OLD PRESCRIPTION FOR RHEUMATISM

From coast to coast the fame of a wonderful treatment for rheumatism has spread, until it is now estimated that the 50,000 drug stores in the United States each fill this prescription an average of eleven times in a year, making a grand total of 550,000 bottles of medicine consumed by those who suffer from rheumatism.

This indicates efficacy in no uncertain manner, for it is a truism that merit is its own best salesman. Even the medical fraternity, always skeptical, now admit the most proficient utilize this splendid formula in their daily practice, as most any well-stocked druggist can supply the ingredients, which long ago became staples of the drug trade.

Iodide Potash	2 drs.
Soda Salicylate	4 drs.
Wine Colchicum	4 drs.
Comp. Ess. Cardiol	1 oz.
Comp. Fl. Balmwort	1 oz.
Elix. Lactated Pepsin, ad. q. s.	8 oz.

Mix. Take 1 teaspoonful after each meal and when retiring.

NOTE: To subdue the acute pains of rheumatism, it is suggested the patient procure 5-grain Su-thol tablets, and take as directed on carton. Immediate relief of pain should follow and the liquid formula ultimately overcomes the dreadful affliction.

CHURCHMEN ASK FOR FLOWER SHOW ENTRIES

Bishop Tuttle and Archbishop Glennon united in an appeal yesterday to citizens to exhibit at the third annual free flower show at Shaw's Garden, May 20 and 21, in order to promote interest in backyard gardening, and to demonstrate its possibilities in St. Louis. The show is given under the auspices of the Garden Club of St. Louis, and no charge is made either for entries or for admission.

A long list of prizes is offered for amateur exhibits, and a prize list will be sent all who phone Grand 567. The General Garden Show Committee consists of Mrs. Hermann Von Schrenk, Mrs. J. Lionberger Davis and Mrs. O. K. Bovard. Dr. B. M. Duggar is president of the Garden Club, Mrs. W. J. Polk is vice president, and W. N. Matthews secretary and treasurer. None of the Garden Club members will compete for prizes this year, ribbons only being awarded their entries. Shaw's Garden makes no entries for the show.

Approved by Archbishop.

Archbishop Glennon's letter of indorsement and appeal was as follows: "I hope that the forthcoming show will be successful, and it should appeal to all citizens of St. Louis who love their homes and want to see these and their lives made beautiful. Many of us in the face of the decline of the home have been making strenuous efforts to bring back home life with all that this implies. Now the home and garden are intimately associated, so that they who would want to see the restoration of the "home beautiful" must also have in mind the restoration of the home garden, with its fruits and flowers.

"So those who have homes and gardens of which they are proud should certainly join under the auspices of the Garden Club to make these things known to our citizens. I would like to see the vacant spaces in and around our city transformed from the unsightliness and disorder so apparent today into pleaasant places, restful, colorful and homelike—a pleasure to the owner, the passer-by and the visitor. Let us join in making our city beautiful and the flower show a success."

Bishop Tuttle's Letter.

Bishop Tuttle's letter to Dr. Duggar, indorsing the flower show, follows: "I am glad that the Garden Club is to have the third annual garden show. You deserve the thanks of all citizens in St. Louis and I beg hereby to accord you mine. A wealth of uplifting and refining influences distribute themselves in the cultivation and care of beautiful flowers. You are working toward the welfare of our loved city in a delightful way. I wish you full success."

The prize list for the flower show includes garden tools, baskets, books on flowers and trees, silver vases, bird baths, and other articles, and entries of pansies, geraniums, snowballs, iris, and other familiar plants are wanted. There will also be cash awards made to the winners in the commercial growers' exhibits.

The Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand

THIS piano has won an unprecedented success by reason of its marvelously rich tone. It is an instrument that would win success upon its dainty appearance alone. The Apartment Grand contains many exclusive ideas in construction, among them the Candelectra, or small twin electric lights wired through the body of the piano; the Silento or practice klavier, which reduces the tone of the piano without affecting the action; and the Junior Unfolding Pedal, which permits the little child to control piano expression.

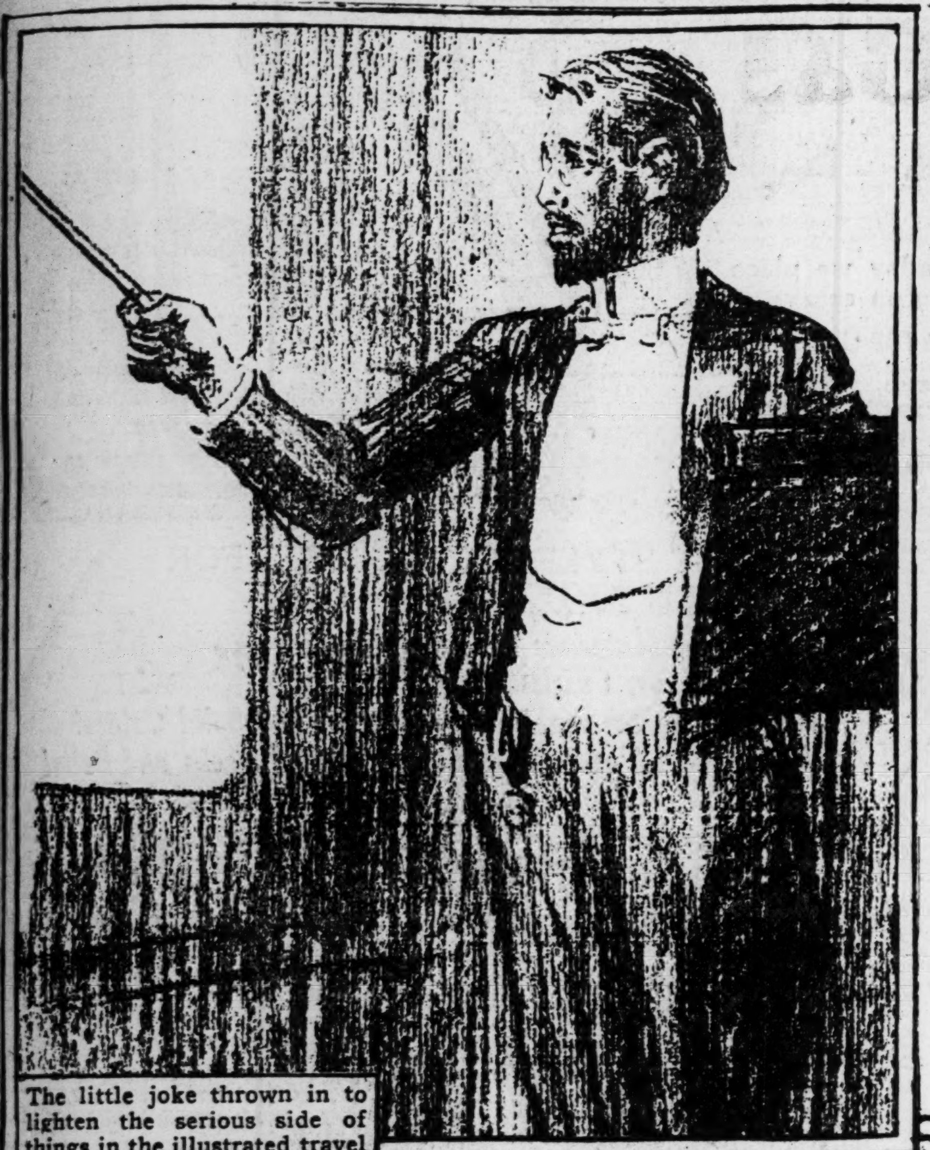
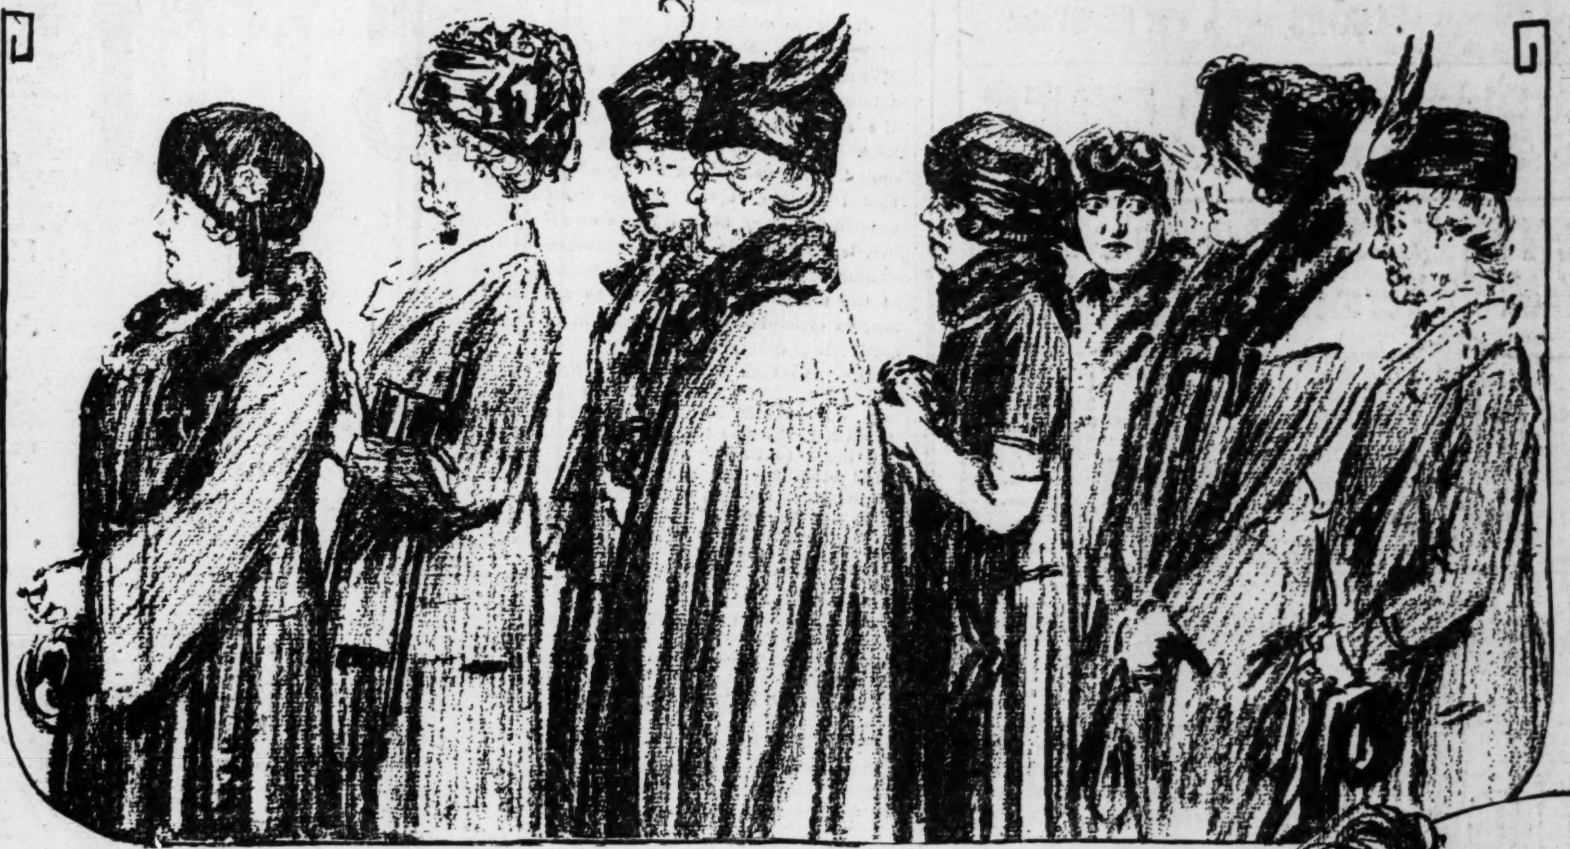
THE LECTURE COURSE

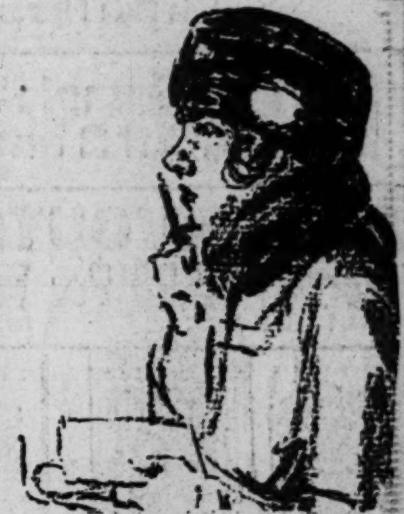
By W. E. Hill



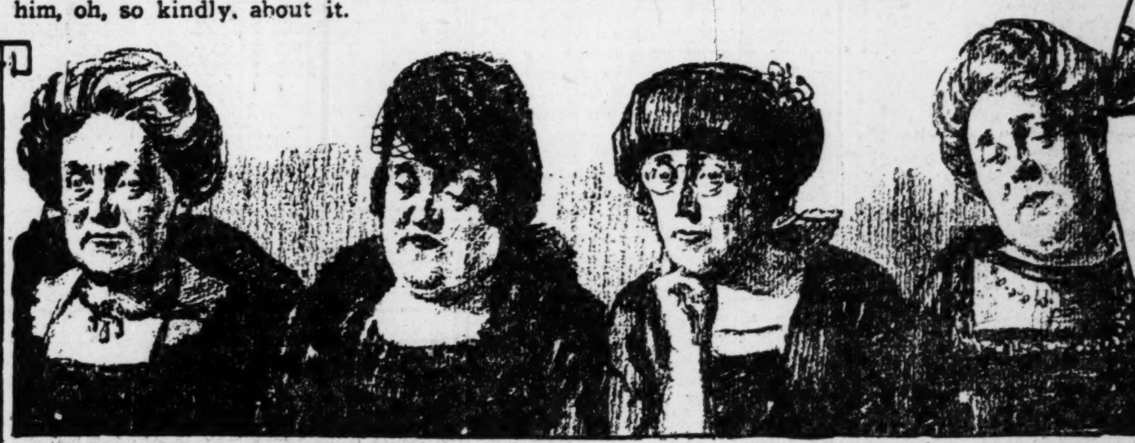
The little joke thrown in to lighten the serious side of things in the illustrated travel talk. Professor Cress, assistant associate librarian of the Alsop Memorial Institute, is doing the travel talking. It is about "The Rubber Gatherers of the Lower Orinoco and Their Quaint Haunts." Professor Cress will inject a bit of homely humor now and then. He will insist on telling about how they were accosted by three natives while camping along the Tipsytoe River who were the innocent cause of much joking on the part of members of the Cress outfit. "What," one of the party asked, "do you think of prohibition?" Quick as a wink the leader of the natives answered in the native lingo, "Hotsy Totsy wee wee," which translated means "bum." "So it would seem," Professor Cress concludes, "that the joke was on us and not on the natives."



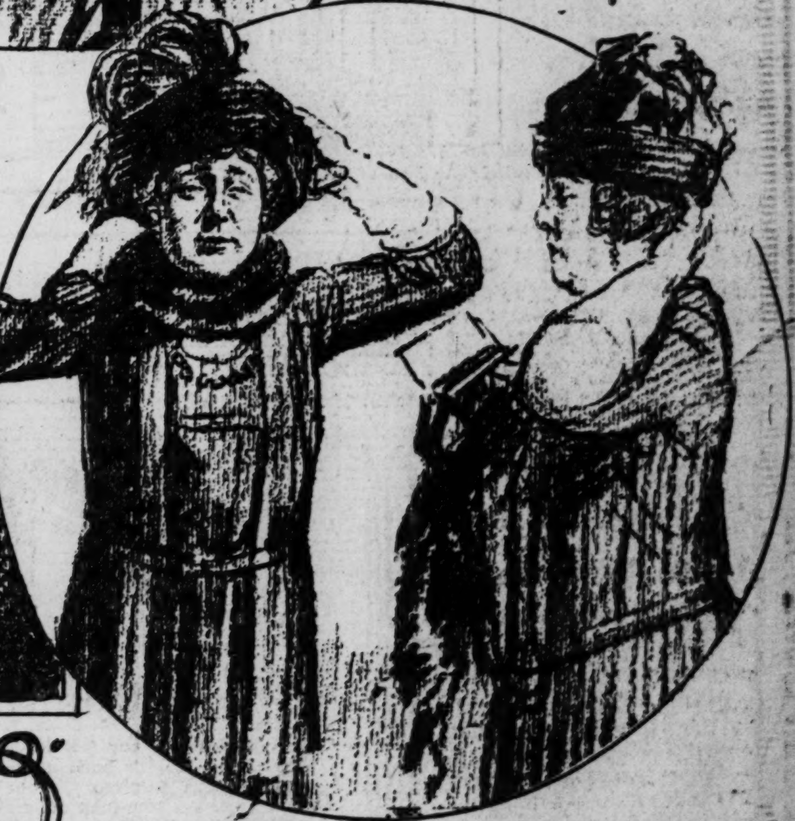
Every member of the Tuesday Afternoon Club is simply wild to tell Mr. Sweet how much his lecture on "Early Byzantine Art" has meant to her. A portion of the audience is shown en route to view the remains, so to speak. The lady at the head of the line is all set to tell Mr. Sweet about the almost perfect copy of a Gilbert Stewart her Cousin Will got hold of in Terre Haute. The lady directly behind her has a little girl who draws the dearest little ballet girls in wax crayon! What, the lady wants to know of the lecturer, is considered the best painting of a Madonna? She wants to be able to tell her little girl. The lady at the end of the group thinks the lecturer pronounced Byzantine wrongly and is going to tell him, oh, so kindly, about it.



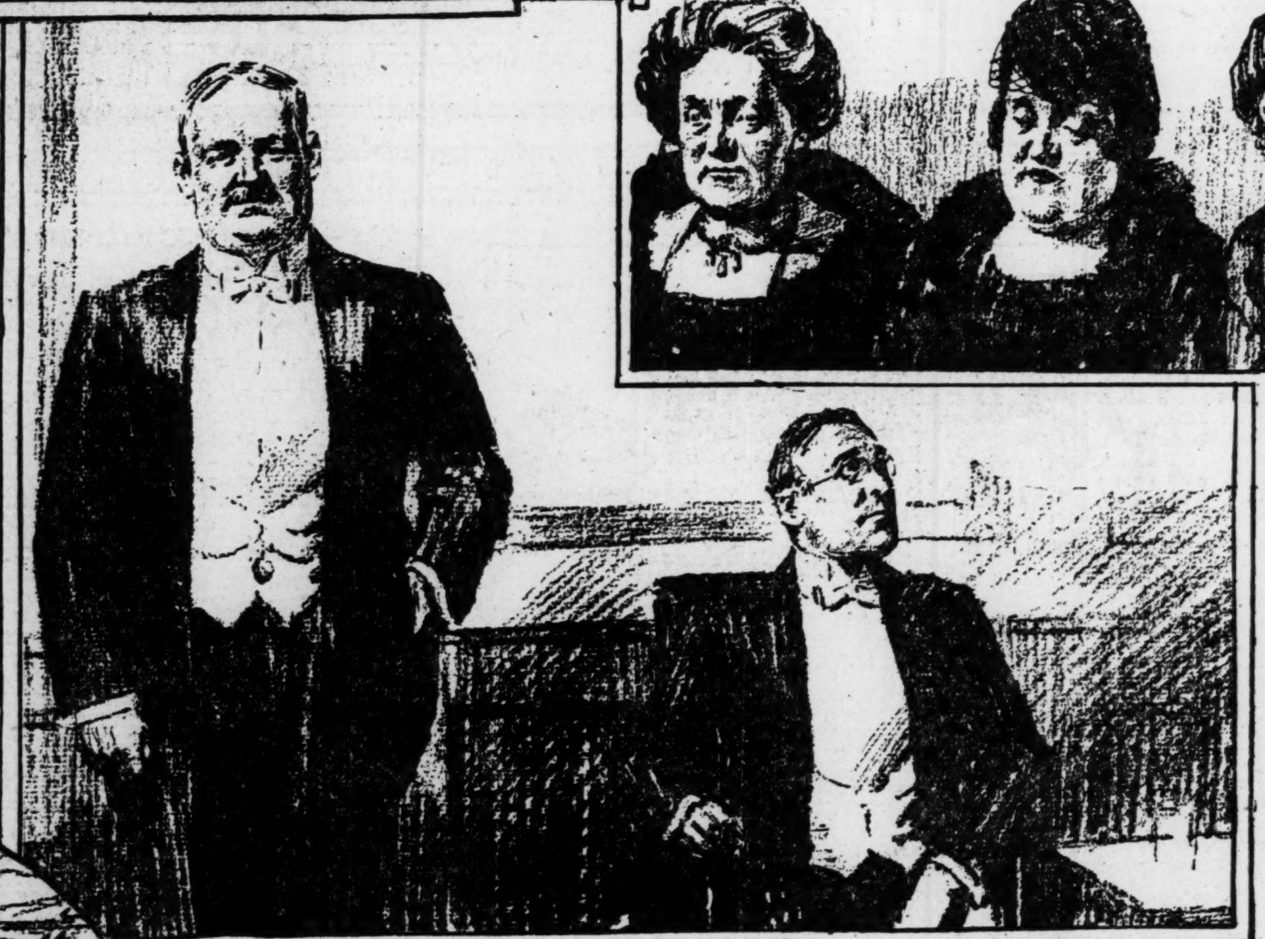
The lady with the little gold pencil who expects to take no end of notes on "The Economic Dependence of Modern Woman." After the first subheading the lead will give out, and naturally, the poor lady will lose interest and begin planning a waist to wear with her blue serge.



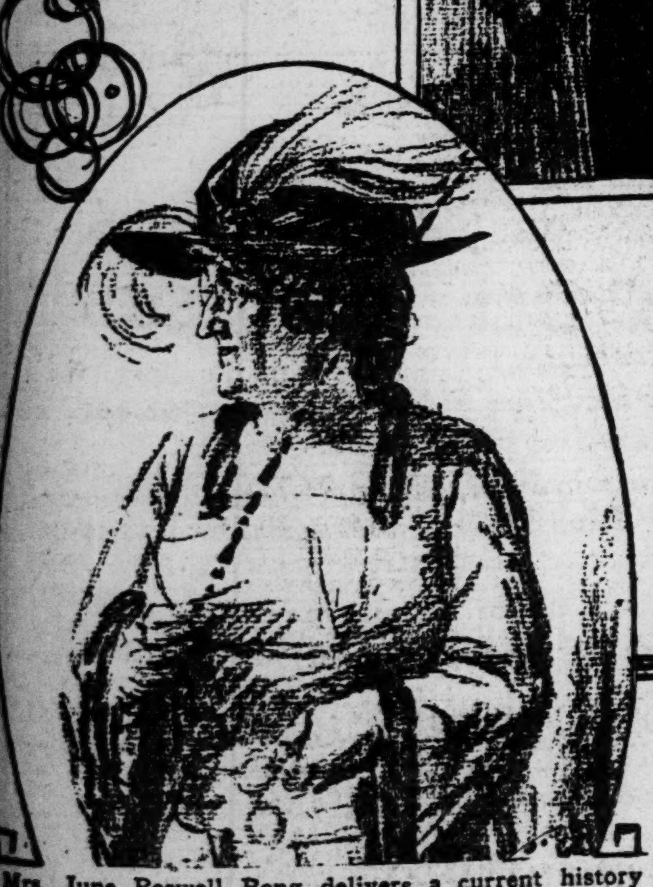
Four perfectly enthralled ladies drinking in every word—nearly every word—of an address on "American Leaders of Political Thought of Today and Yesterday." The determined lady on the extreme left applauds loudly whenever Mr. Woodrow Wilson's name is mentioned. Whereupon the earnest lady seated between the two sleepy listeners will completely lose the drift of everything for the next few minutes trying to stare the determined lady out of countenance.



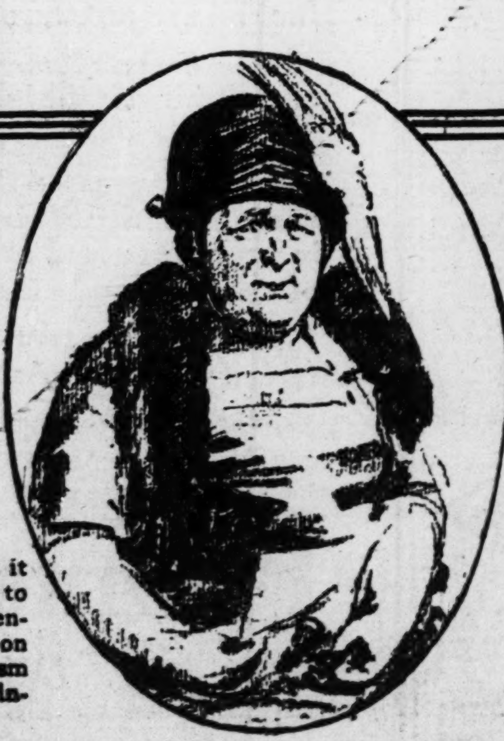
"Well, I don't just know that I agree with everything he said, but I think he has a simply marvelous personality." In other words, they haven't understood much of the lecture.



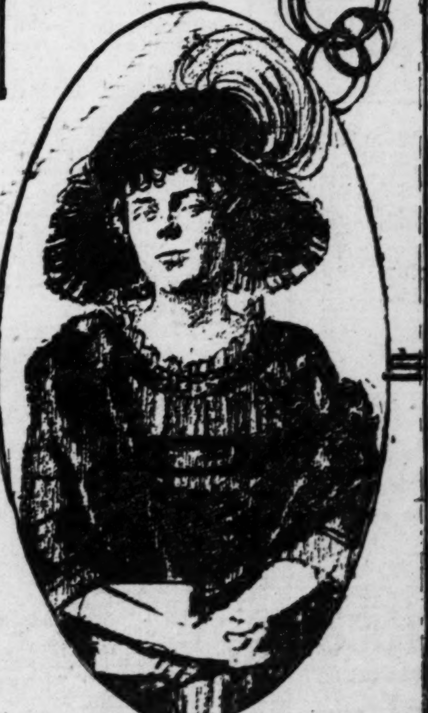
Extremely verbose is the gentleman who comes forward before the lecture with the information that "not only have we, tonight, the honor of listening to one of America's greatest authorities, etc., etc., but it is to be our privilege this evening to hear, etc., etc." After twenty minutes more of this he takes great pleasure in presenting, etc., etc. Then the lecturer, having simulated for some minutes past great interest in the proscenium, comes to with a start and registers great love for the master of ceremonies and the audience, and is reminded then and there of a little anecdote, etc., etc. Here follows one of the world's oldest and worst anecdotes. The master of ceremonies with a "how-can-he-think-of-these-things" air laughs immoderately, followed by a sickly titter from the audience.



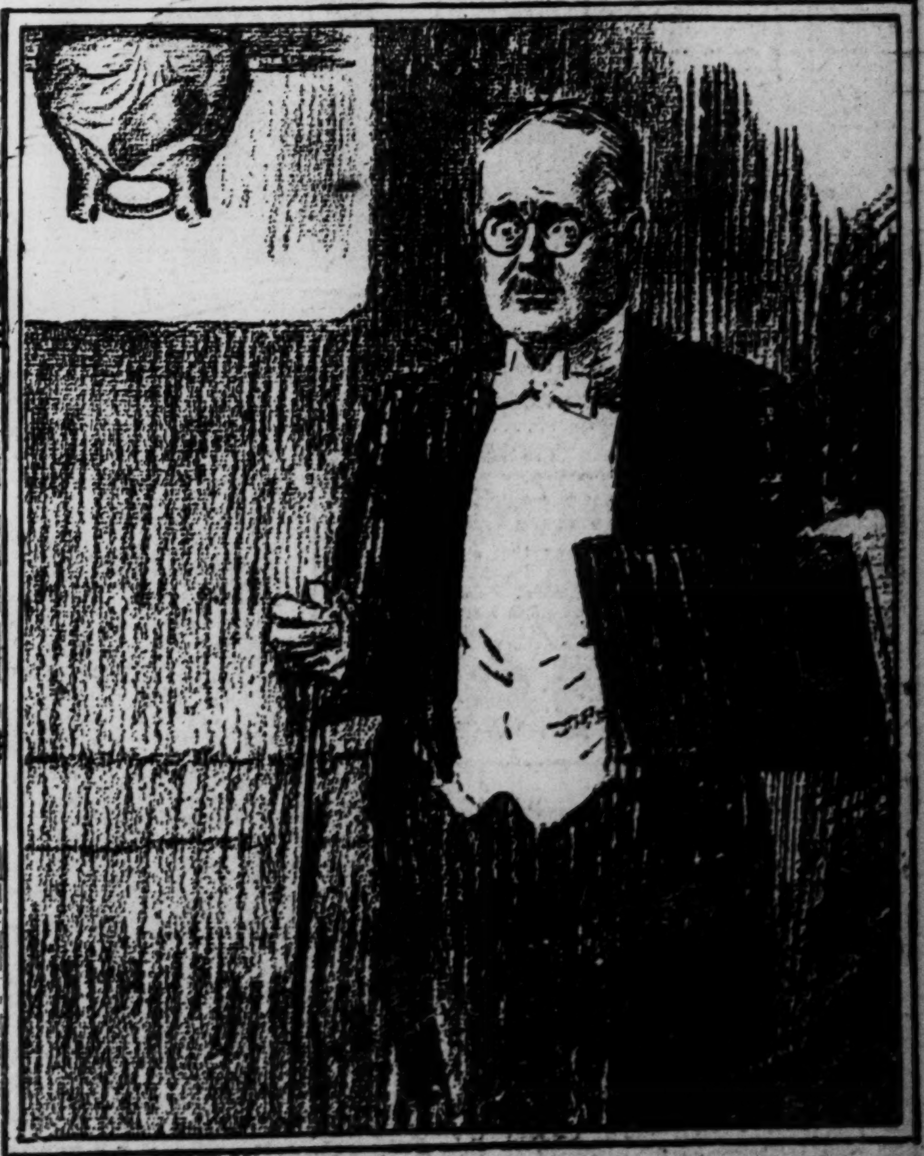
Mrs. June Roswell Rong delivers a current history resume on alternate Friday mornings. Mrs. Rong keeps the lucky numbers of the lecture course up in all the political questions—that is, the really vital ones, and gives them the pleasant feeling of being just a little bit ahead of the news of the day. Mrs. Rong is discussing Mr. Harding's cabinet this particular Friday morning. "And," she concludes, "there's Mr. Mellon. He has been used to handling money all his life. So that makes him particularly fitted to serve in his present capacity. And then, of course, there's Mr. Hughes. He, as you all know, is a most cultured gentleman. And that makes him particularly fitted to do his work. And now, if anybody wishes to ask any question—" (Applause from all the ladies in the audience whose husbands are Republicans).



The lady who thought it would be such a pity to waste the ticket listening to a little talk on "Constructive Idealism Among the Ancient Hindoo Poets."



More or less popular authoress, who is going to read throatily, from her published works. Also one little poem, "Again I Question," which has never been published, and maybe never will be.



A lecture on "Early Peruvian Art," illustrated by lantern slides, of pots, kettles, jelly molds and various objets d'art, among the early Peruvian best families, showing the slides that got in up side down. Professor Knuckle, Litt. D., L. H. D. of Squee Institute, is lecturing. At the present moment he is looking no end hurt and reproachful at the man who is running the lantern.

A feature of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts exhibit at the City Art Museum, which is attracting much attention, is the splendid showing of the so-called applied or decorative arts. This section of the art students' work, embracing bookbinding, tooled leather, metal work, china painting, pottery, basketry and weaving, is displayed in cases distributed among the special exhibition rooms at the museum. Among the 14 examples of bookbinding are several of meritorious design.

The various volumes show "blind tooling and gold tooling on several different varieties of leather, the fine fixtures of which add much to the beauty of the finished binding. The process of gold tooling upon leather, a far more difficult and intricate one than is realized by the average layman, has been well handled in most instances. The three principal types of binding—full leather, half leather and limp leather—are all represented. Aside from the bookbindings, there are numerous other examples of tooled leather as applied to purses, boxes, caskets, table pads and other articles.

Pottery and Painted Chinaware.

Four cases filled with pottery and painted chinaware attest the activities of the ceramic department of the St. Louis Art School. The pottery pieces are of the hard, porcelaneous type, fired at high temperatures. The majority of them are glazed in soft-toned, delicately variegated colors, resembling the flambe glazes. The forms, most of which have been made upon the wheel, are appropriately simple, and the only ornament is an occasional bit of low relief or pierced work. The chinaware, only the painting of which is done by the students, shows interesting conventional and geometric designs of polychrome and gold. One tea set has a charming all-over glaze of celadon-like green, with a simple decoration of lines in darker green and gold. Another attractive tea set is in blue, with decoration of flowers in thick enamel, which gives an appearance of low relief.

Metal Work.

The metal work consists of a smoking stand, a double candlestick, trays, bowls and other objects hammered from copper, and a few smaller pieces in silver. Not the least of the charms of this sort of work is the beautiful surface color or "patina" which objects of metal may be made to assume under various treatments. Several of the copper bowls are finished in a beautiful iridescent color, rivaling the sheen of antique glass. This color is produced by the simple process of heating the metal to a certain temperature in a clean, smoke-free atmosphere. Other pieces are finished in rich brown and yllow tones by the use of chemicals.

The textiles on exhibition were woven by hand from thread dyed by the students in the class room. There are attractive scarfs, table covers, bags and other articles in pleasing designs and harmonious colors. Several pieces in effective blue and white checked patterns are reminiscent of the quaint old-fashioned bedspreads woven in colonial days. Other designs show the most modern of impressionistic color schemes. Four examples of batik work add a pleasant note of more brilliant color. The art school exhibit, as well as the bronze sculptures by Albert Laessle, will remain on view at the Museum until April 30.

INDIAN TO DISCUSS INDIAN MUSIC

Tsianina Redfeather Will Speak on Topic at Public Library Wednesday.

The subject of "Indian Music" has been chosen for the Morning Etude's meeting at 10:15 o'clock Wednesday morning, in the assembly room of the Public Library, Thirteenth and Olive streets, and a talk on that topic will be given by Tsianini Redfeather, a well-known Indian singer.

A musical program will be given by Mrs. Mabel Pearce Meisenbach, Mrs. Lotta K. Bosse and Mrs. Harry S. Hart, vocalists; Miss Alice Betz, Mrs. Elizabeth Brey Vater and Mrs. A. R. Richards, pianists; and Mrs. Rosalind Elsner Anschuetz, violinist.

WEEK'S TOUR OF TEXAS TO ADVERTISE ST. LOUIS

One Hundred Business Men, Departing Sunday, Will Carry Band and Distribute Souvenirs.

About 100 St. Louis business men, representing manufacturing, wholesale and jobbing houses, banks and business organizations, will make a special-train tour of Texas, in the week beginning next Sunday, April 23.

The train, which will leave St. Louis next Sunday, at an hour to be announced later, will run over the M., K. & T. lines, and will carry an electric sign with the words, "St Louis to Texas Good Will Tour."

The cities and towns visited will be:

Denison, Whitesboro, Pilot Point, Denton, Fort Worth, Cleburne, Alvarado, Itasca, Hillsboro, West, Waco, Temple, Bartlett, Granger, Georgetown, Austin, San Marcos, New Braunfels, San Antonio, Seguin, Luling, Waelder, Flatonia, Columbus, Richmond, Houston, Hempstead, Navasota, Bryan, Hearne, Calvert, Crossbeck, Mexia, Corsicana, Ennis, Ferris and Dallas.

The night stops will be at Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Corsicana and Dallas.

St. Louisans to Have Band.

The train will carry a band, and the band will get off first at each stop, and will march into the business district. The Mayor and business organizations of the different places have been notified of the time of arrival in each place.

While the band plays in the public square or other central place, the St. Louis visitors will call on the local merchants. At the night stops, entertainment programs, with banquets and speaking programs, have been arranged. A film, "St. Louis, the Miracle City," will be shown.

Souvenirs to Be Carried.

Business men making the trip are planning to carry a stock of souvenirs for distribution among their Texas acquaintances. These will include mirrors, vanity cases, purses, notebooks, pencils and rulers.

Mayor Kiel will be represented on the trip by his secretary, W. T. Findley. The Chamber of Commerce will be represented by its president, F. W. A. Vesper, and its secretary, Paul V. Bunn.

The Chamber of Commerce committee in charge of the tour is: Phil A. Becker, chairman; S. G. Langston, J. H. Rabe, James T. Riley, T. W. Van Scholack and Scott R. de Kins, secretary. The trip is in renewal of an annual custom which was interrupted by the war, the first such trip having been made in 1902.

NO MORE JURY TRIALS UNDER NEW CRIMINAL CODE IN RUSSIA

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, April 15.—Soviet Russia's new criminal code, just put into operation, provides for assistants to the judges as a substitute for jury trials.

"There are no jury trials," said Nicolai V. Krylenko, chairman of the Supreme Revolutionary Tribunal, or the Attorney-General of Russia. "The people's courts consist of one judge, appointed by the Executive Committee of the local soviet. Instead of jurors, he has two assistants, chosen from a list of trades union men, provided by the unions. These are chosen separately for each trial. In more complicated cases six of these assistants are named for the judge."

The people's courts correspond roughly to the police and lower civil courts in the United States. Above them are the revolutionary tribunals.

"In the revolutionary tribunals," Krylenko declared, "there are only three judges, all appointed by the soviets and without any assistants from the trades unions."

The State police, which has succeeded the Cheka, has powers to hold persons for investigation, not longer than two months, but cannot inflict any punishment whatsoever.

Prisoners may have counsel appointed by the court, or may select their own attorneys, Krylenko said, from the "corporation of lawyers," an association which is to be formed. To this organization only qualified barristers will be admitted and the Government will have some control over the association.

There is also a court of appeals, which may review any sentence. This is located at Moscow.

State prosecutors are to be permanently appointed, acting similarly to the State's attorneys in the United States.

"My trouble began by a breaking out of small pimples on my forehead and scalp. The pimples festered and itched and burned causing me to scratch and irritate the affected parts. My hair fell out and my face was disfigured for the time being. I lost my rest on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted for years. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which helped me so I bought more and now I am healed." (Signed) Miss Ethel Adkins, Orbiston, Ohio, Aug. 19, 1921.

For Freckled, Rough or Muddy Complexion

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may readily be gotten rid of. Ordinary mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any drug store or toilet counter. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles, liver spots, moth patches, pimples or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand-new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

The mercolized wax method is appreciated particularly by those who prefer "natural beauty" to that which is obviously otherwise.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, March 13.—More than a hundred prominent persons, including Princes and diplomats, were present when a monument to the memory of Prof. George Trumbull Ladd, late of Yale University, was unveiled on March 11, in the grounds of Sojiji Temple, near Yokohama where his ashes were recently buried.

When the monument was unveiled by Mrs. Ladd, Prince Tokugawa and others spoke in high praise of the late Professor Ladd. Mrs. Ladd concluded the ceremony with an expression of gratitude for the sentiment expressed in behalf of her late husband.

Prof. Ladd, who was regarded as one of America's great psychologists, died in New Haven last summer at the age of 80. He had visited Japan three times and gave a number of lectures in educational psychology at different universities. When he was received in audience by the late Emperor Meiji he was decorated with the order of the Rising Sun. In accordance with his own request a portion of his ashes were brought to Japan by Mrs. Ladd recently for burial. The monument just unveiled is of stone more than 10 feet in height and stands upon a hill in the temple grounds. It was erected by his friends and pupils in Japan.

MIND HEALING SEANCE ENDS IN PANDEMONIUM

By Cable to the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Cockspur st., London, S. W.

LONDON, April 15.—Amid scenes of hysterical pandemonium, M. Coue of Nancy concluded his auto-suggestion seances in London.

At the invitation, it is said, of Lady Beatty, who is supposed to be one of M. Coue's "cures," he visited the Special Neurological Hospital at Tooling to talk with a large number of shell-shocked soldiers.

Lady Beatty, who is the wife of Admiral of the Fleet Lord Beatty, and who before marriage was Miss Ethel Field of Chicago, almost suffered a nervous breakdown while on a visit to the United States during the Washington conference and has been greatly interested in the welfare of the shell-shocked soldiers. She went to Nancy, it is reported, was cured by M. Coue, and thought he would be able to help shell-shocked men in hospitals here.

Accompanied by Lady Beatty, M. Coue visited the Special Neurological Hospital, and is said to have cured one man of headache. Immediately afterward a soldier named Withers, suffering from bodily tremors, went before him. M. Coue with lightning-like rapidity passed his hands up and down the man's trembling limbs, suggesting at the same time that the tremors were as unreasonable as they were uncomfortable.

General Hysteria Results.

Suddenly the patient emitted a piercing shriek and flung himself to the floor in wild hysteria. The effect of the frenzy of this patient was to cause the wildest frenzy among the other shell-shocked men present, and many had to be carried bodily from the room while doctors and nurses tried to soothe the others.

Lady Beatty and the other visitors had to make a quick exit from the room.

Before leaving for France, M. Coue said that even the power of auto-suggestion is quelled by hysteria, and he did not seem to be much disturbed by his last tragic seance.

Lady Beatty is only one of a number of Americans here who have been deeply interested in M. C. Coue's work. Indeed, it is asserted he was brought here the first time at the instance of American women.

Hospital's Work Set Back.

One of the neurological hospital doctors is quoted as saying that the work of the hospital has been put back for years as a result of M. Coue's seance.

Leading physicians here told the Post-Dispatch that the hysteria produced among shell-shock patients need not be taken as proof the treatment is worthless.

The nerve specialist said the French lecturer should not have attempted his cure en masse, but should have taken each patient individually. The nervous tension created by the preliminary lecture, this physician said, was so great that when the first man became hysterical the others easily followed.

Recognized physicians are skeptical about M. Coue's claims, but one said he approved such treatment as long as one follows M. Coue's advice and undergoes regular medical treatment with it.

It was generally pointed out the principle of M. Coue's method is very old. One physician said it had been used 2000 years ago.

Compulsory Voting Bill in Commons.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 15.—A bill seeking to compel all registered voters to go to the polls on election days has been introduced in the House of Commons. If no reasonable excuse is offered for not voting, the fine for the first offense is a sum not exceeding 10 shillings. For a second offense the fine would be one pound or seven days' imprisonment.

FINAL WIND-UP!!

Only 12 more buying days and your opportunity is gone forever. We are going to sacrifice every piece of Furniture in the house regardless of value or former price.

WHY? Because we have no place to go and are forced to sell this merchandise. The building is leased and we will positively sell the $50,000 balance of our $175,000.00 high-grade stock at "give-away" prices. In other words, we would rather dispose of our goods to the people of St. Louis and vicinity than to turn the stock over to dealers.

Come quick! No reasonable offer or terms will be refused. Look at these items! They show the awful sacrifice. Many other items not listed here on sale. Come in the morning, if possible, to get quick salesmen's attention. We will have a large crowd and "early birds" pick the plums. Remember on account of the phenomenally low prices all sales are final. A word to the wise is sufficient.

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Why Burden Yourself With Fat?

Prominent, repulsive fat that comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden, a hindrance to activity, a curb upon pleasure, a thief of all that is pretty and graceful and sweet in womankind. Why don't you take off the fat where it shows? You can do so easily, safely and without the slightest fear of harm or bad after effects, by just taking after each meal and at bedtime a pleasant little Marmola Prescription Tablet. These little tablets are as effective and harmless as the famous prescription from which they take their name. Buy and try a case today. You can thus say good-bye to dieting, exercise and fat and get back the graceful figure and poise you desire. One dollar for a case is the price the world over. CLAVILUX INVENTOR FEARS JAZZ ATROCITIES

Instrument Plays 'Compositions' of Color and Opens New Field of Art, He Says.

Thomas Wilfred, exponent of the "art of light," the young Danish singer, poet and musician, who recently invented the clavilux, the instrument through which intricate "compositions" of colored rays are played upon a screen, is already concerned with what "jazz fiends" may do with his invention, once it becomes popular.

"I shudder to think what can happen," Wilfred, who has been appearing here before schools and clubs this week as a minstrel performer on the old English lute, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. "Just as the instrument, rightly used, will open a field of art ultimately transcending all others, so will the clavilux be easy also of the greatest abuse.

"The art of light, although only in the first days of its infancy, has already shown that color can be developed into forms as rhythmic and harmonious as can the notes of music. 'Discords to the eye,' however, can be quite as fully the reverse. 'Visual jazz,' by persons with a perverted sense of color, would look like Coney Island gone wild.

"Color Poems Possible."

"Beautiful color poems, a delight to the eye and the emotions, are possible. Five weeks I held constantly increasing crowds for 40 minutes at a time, without a sound almost, in the darkened Neighborhood playhouse in New York, where the clavilux was first publicly shown.

"I tried playing on their emotions. It was easy. I could hold them in a solemn hush of sadness, swing them close to ecstasy, border them upon a state of merriment, all by the change and play of varied light and color forms."

Wilfred, who came to the United States in 1916, has been engaged in this pioneering work in the "art of mobile color," as he calls it, for 17 years. His clavilux is an electrically powered, box-like instrument, about 6 feet long, 4 wide and 36 high, much too heavy to be carried readily about the country. Its frame is of tank steel, for there must be no vibration, as the slightest deviation in the light streams would ruin the most carefully played compositions.

Molds Light Into Many Shapes.

"I take pure white light," he said, "and mold it into forms, thousands if desired, that move and change into countless shapes and positions, as I flood, weave or streak different colors over the screen, by manipulation of the keyboard. All human moods and emotions can be expressed. Ordinarily the effects are soothing, spiritual, even."

Wilfred says that an entirely new type of artist will come into being as the possibilities of his invention are developed. The artists, he believes, will likely be recruited from the ranks of painters and musicians as these are the arts most closely related to that of "mobile color."

AMERICANS BUY RUBBER PROCESS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, April 15.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Christchurch, New Zealand, says an American syndicate, headed by Dr. Woodward, a millionaire, has paid, £2,000,000 (normally $10,000,000), for a secret process which, its promoters declare, will revolutionize the rubber industry.

The process, invented by a New Zealander named Stock, makes possible the utilization of any kind of old rubber, it is said, and greatly lessens the price of everything made from rubber, especially tires.

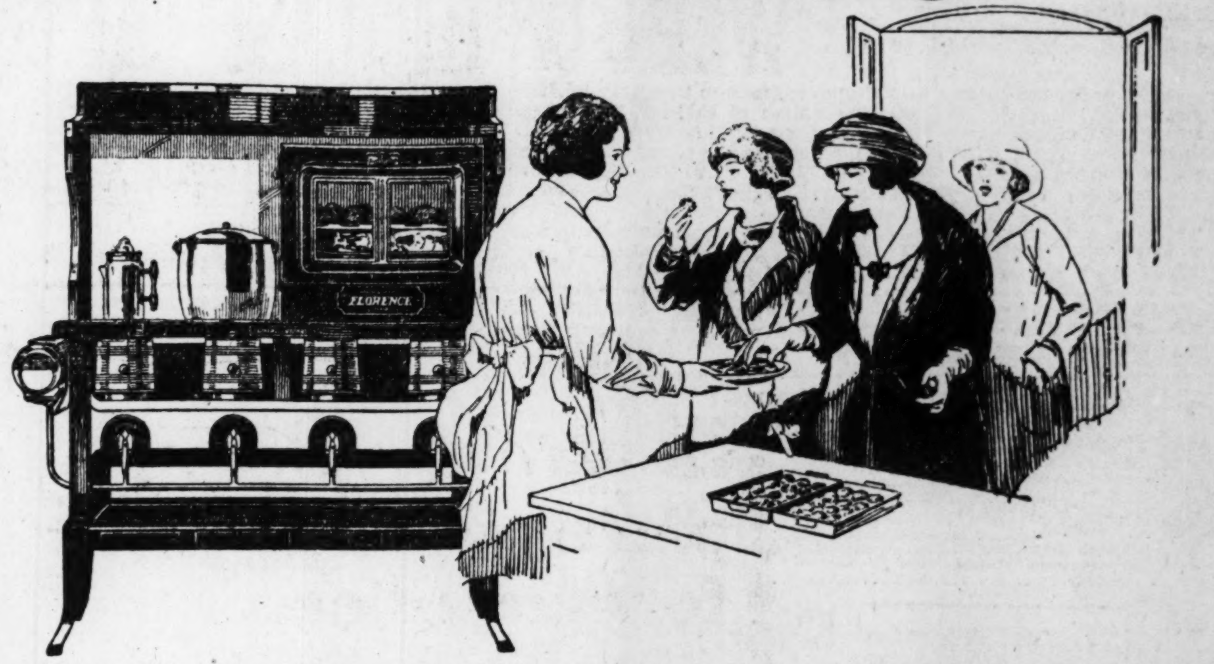
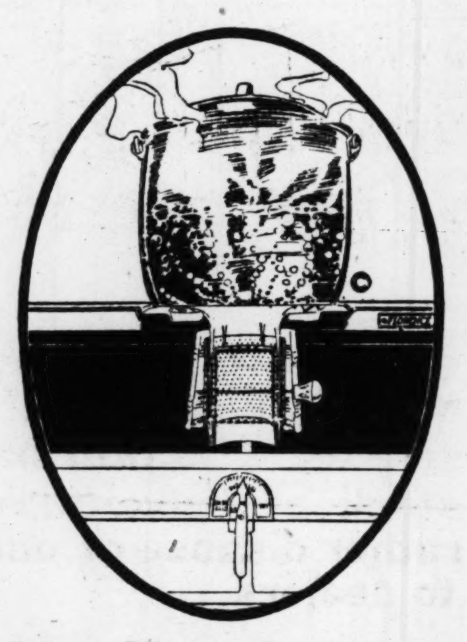
Come in and See it Work

Florence National Demonstration Week
April 17-22





More Heat—Less Care

YOU are invited to come in and taste the tempting goodies we are cooking on a Florence Oil Cook Stove. At the same time you will see how simple and convenient it is to bake, roast, boil, or fry on this stove, because many good things will be cooked right before your eyes.

A lighted match touched to the asbestos ring starts the powerful heat quickly. The Florence Oil Cook Stove is easily regulated by means of a lever, so that you can get the right heat for any cooking—hot, medium, simmering.

A few minutes at any of the stores listed below will convince you that the Florence Oil Cook Stove is simplicity itself when it comes to cooking and baking, easy to keep clean, very economical, and a good-looking addition to the kitchen. Made in five sizes—one to five burners. Come in and see it work.

FLORENCE
OIL COOK STOVES

New Ideas in Spring Home Furnishings

©JRB

OUR new furniture has arrived and certainly it is a wonderful incentive for better homes! All the charm of Hepplewhite, all the dignity of the Adam Brothers, all the beauty and grace of Sheraton—now faithfully portrayed by expert artists, make a display such as is seldom assembled in one store.

AND the prices! Fortunately, the big reductions on furniture have been made on high-class furniture, the kind Prufrock-Litton has always specialized in. These reductions have been most generous, and through several fortunate purchases we have been able to secure high-grade furniture at prices you formerly paid for cheap furniture.

Did You Ever Attend an Easter Egg Hunt?

Many children, as well as grownups, enjoy Easter Sunday as much as they do Christmas or Thanksgiving.

It was a beautiful bright Easter Sunday in early Spring. The flowers, bushes and trees were in bloom.

About fifty children were invited to a country home, all dressed in their new Spring frocks. Some three hundred or more Easter eggs were hidden under the bushes, in nests, in the barn, around the porches and in the crevices of the rocks around the lake.

Let us all be happy this day and enjoy Easter Sunday with the jolly little folks.

(Signed)

Harry Prufrock.

PRODUCTION INCREASES AT STUTZ FACTORY

For the first time since its completion, the enlarged factory of the Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., has been given an opportunity to prove its efficiency, says G. W. D. Donnelly of the Supreme Motor Co., local distributors.

The activity which has accompanied the recent announcement of the new "D-H" motored Stutz has brought all of the facilities of the new plant into play and production is going forward on a most satisfactory basis.

The new Stutz plant was built with a view to producing the present product. Specially designed tools and equipment were installed for the construction of all major units entering into the "D-H" motored Stutz and batteries of specially built machines and testing apparatus were acquired. The Stutz factory comprises more than 400,000 square feet of floor space; 16,000 square feet being set aside for the production of each individual car at peak production.

MOTOR CAR BUSINESS SHOWING IMPROVEMENT

All reports indicate that the motor car business is improving in every part of the country, says Frank Bishop, president of the Briscoe Motor Sales Co. It is well known that some sections have been reporting exceptionally good business. Others have been slower to respond to the general optimistic trend, but the tendency has been one of improvement, and this is now being distinctly felt everywhere. The increase in buying, it is safe to say, has been more rapid than was anticipated in many quarters. Those companies were particularly fortunate that anticipated such a return of good business, and prepared themselves for a possible demand by reducing their high-priced inventories, making thorough preparations for economical and efficient production, and bringing their line absolutely up to the minute in point of engineering refinements, mechanical improvements and the last word in body design.

A good example of the companies who have placed themselves to command a maximum amount of the present business is the Liberty Motor Car Co. In a statement issued by the sales department this company reports as follows:

"More Libertys were built and shipped in March than during any one of the preceding 18 months. Despite this record-breaking production in March, there were 20 per cent more unfilled orders on hand at the factory on April 1 than on March 1."

ACCIDENTS DECREASE IN FRANKLIN PLANT

The active safety first campaign which has been waged in the factory of the Franklin Automobile Co. for some time past is bearing results.

According to figures recently compiled by Donald Cavanaugh, who is in charge of accident prevention work, the number of accidents in the Franklin plant in 1921 showed a 38.2 per cent decrease from the 1920 figure. This percentage was based on the number of man hours worked. In 1920 the number of accidents amounted to 4.41 per 100,000 man hours worked; in 1921 they were decreased to 2.72 per 100,000. Only such accidents as cause an employe to lose one-half day or more of his time were taken into consideration.

During the year 1920 there was a total of 6652 lost-time days. In 1921 this figure had been reduced to 2292 lost-time days, a decrease of 49 per cent—an average loss of about two-thirds of a day per annum to each employe.

Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

NASH

IT IS interesting to observe to what lengths Nash goes in painstaking shop practice, because it bears directly upon the quality that has earned Nash cars their nation-wide esteem.

To make certain that Nash cylinders are absolutely true, a stream of cold water is circulated through the water jackets as the barrels are machined. This prevents heat being generated by the operation of machining, and it is heat that expands the cylinder and causes the variations in size which distinguish inferior cylinders from Nash cylinders.

FRONTENAC MOTOR CO. OBTAINS NEW FACTORY

Work will start immediately preparing the buildings for Frontenac production, and sample cars are promiserd for May.

The Frontenac Motor Co. is incorporated for $1,000,000 under the laws of Delaware and comprises both New York and Indianapolis capital. Allen A. Ryan of New York is to be chairman of the Board of Directors. Other New Yorkers interested include Kenneth R. Howard and William Rand Jr., and Indianapolis, is represented by William N. BUSINESS CONDITIONS SHOW UPWARD TREND

The uptrend in business has been very noticeable in this district during the past two months, according to Russell E. Gardner, vice president of the Gardner Motor, Inc., manufacturers of the Gardner car.

Increased activity in many lines, capacity orders coupled with a better employment situation, and a renewal of construction work, gives confidence to all who have been hammering away for business.

The strategic position St. Louis enjoys is largely responsible today for the returning prosperity of this section. The central location of this city is a tremendous factor in the distribution scheme of the country's foremost manufacturers. The freight problem alone is materially alleviated in the aggregate because the haul is shortened, north, east, south and west.

EASY RIDING COMFORT

STUTZ

With The New "D-H" Engine and Compensating Spring Suspension

Greater Performance Efficiency with Maximum Simplicity

Take the very pinnacle of fine car behavior as the minimum of your expectations when you test the "D-H" motored Stutz. It will revise every past opinion that you have formed of what a motor car can be made to do.

It throttles to a mere creep and darts to 60 miles an hour with greater rapidity and ease than ever before has been possible. Its 90-mile-an-hour top pace so far exceeds any ordinary demand that speeds which tax other cars to their utmost become a mere loafing gait for the "D-H" Engine.

There is never a tremor, so completely is all perceptible vibration banished. So irresistible is the pull of 45% greater torque, which is the useful application of a 65% power increase, that the Stutz over-rides every highway handicap.

Yielding at not a single point to the performance of delicate, complicated multi-cylinder motors, the Stutz with the "D-H" Engine represents so high a development of the fundamentally correct, simple, power unit that it becomes virtually free of all service requirements.

Behind such a motor, riding in the comfort of the Compensating Spring Suspension, an enchanting new motoring sensation is in store for you.

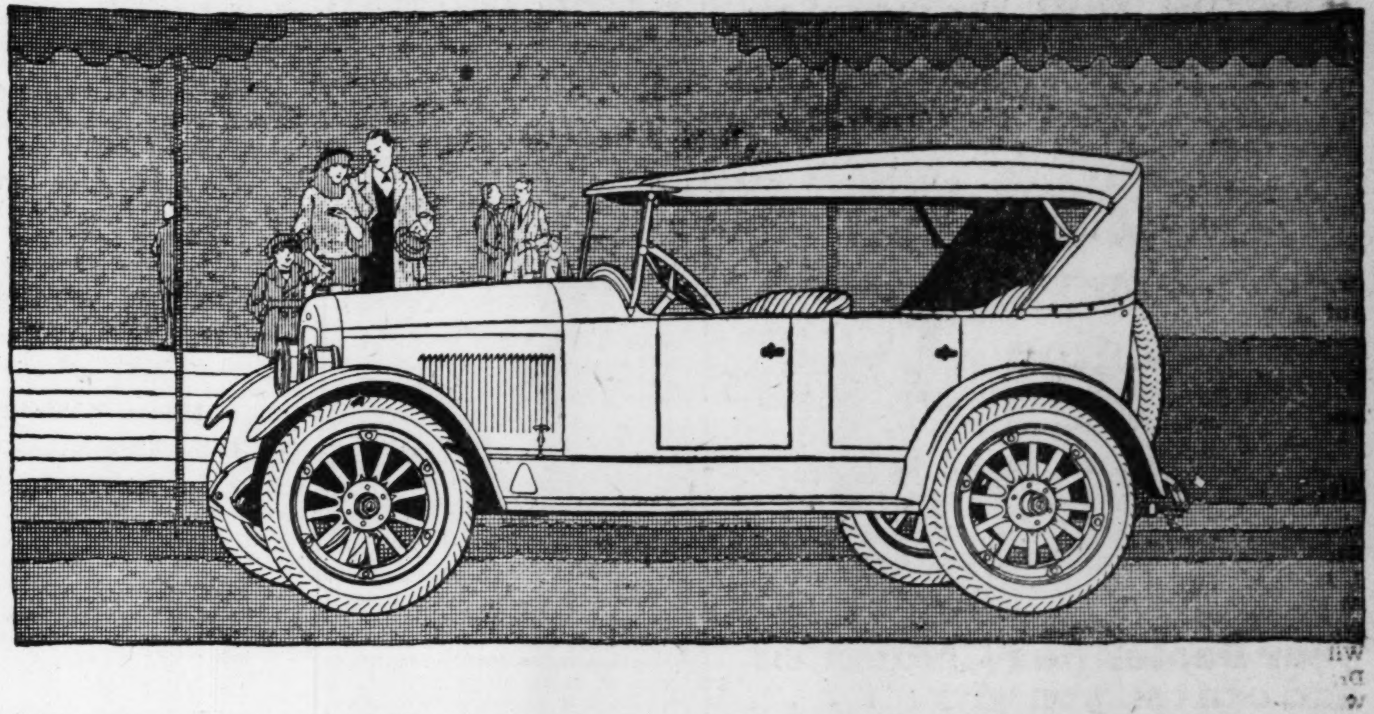
Real Six Cylinder Comfort for $1065



Sixes run smoother, throttle down lower, pick up faster, climb better—do everything you want a car to do better than a four can do it. You'd sooner drive a six than a four.

And now that the Jewett Six is available at $1065 F. O. B. factory, there is no reason why you should not have a six. No longer need you put up with the lesser abilities of a four when at this low price you can have not only such performance but also such strength and stability as is yours in the Jewett Six.

Paige-designed and Paige-built the Jewett is above all things a quality automobile. The 50 horsepower, 6-cylinder motor—larger and stronger than that used in any other car in its price class—is built complete in the Paige shops. It is the perfected output of a manufacturing institution that for years has built powerful, smooth-running, capable power plants.

Study the flow of this mighty power as it is delivered in the Jewett chassis back through clutch and gear, drive shaft and axle and you will find every essential unit remarkably strong and capable. Here is the sound, sturdy construction that will stand up under the hardest work. And it will last the longer in the Jewett because the inherently balanced, smooth-running six does not jerk and vibrate.

This Six of remarkable performance and unusual strength is available at this low price because of the unusual position of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. With no bonded indebtedness, with great financial strength, with complete facilities, with a rapid turnover of capital, this company was able in producing a new six to take full advantage of the present materials market and to offer you real quality at a price never before possible in a really high-grade six-cylinder automobile.

Ride in a Jewett today and let it prove its strength and power to you in demonstrated performance. We ask the opportunity to prove to you to your own satisfaction that this six does beat fours.

Her Stomach Made Her Nervous

Was Nervous 12 Years Due to Gas on Stomach

"For 12 years I suffered from gas on the stomach and was nervous and short of breath. Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) is fine—it has done me more good than anything. Words cannot express my gratitude." (Signed) Lela Cook.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of any intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thouhgt was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

HUPMOBILE SALES SHOW LARGE INCREASE

A recent statement issued by George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., Hupmobile distributers, shows that this company has made a large increase in business the first quarter of 1922 compared to the same months of previous years, showing also that the Hupmobile factory has a steady and permanent growth.

According to his figures, their business as a whole shows a 377 per cent increase, the wholesale department, under the direction of S. R. Jones, shows the dealer organization with an increase of 51.4 per cent. The sales in this department show an increase of 325 per cent.

The retail department, under the directions of Albert Weber, show an increase of 52 per cent in number of Hupmobiles, but the closed car sales show an increase of over 500 per cent.

The steady growth of the Hupmobile Motors Corporation is shown by the following figures: The factory in 1917 stood seventeenth place in volume of production of all cars, exclusive of the Ford, and represented 1.2 per cent of the total business of all the automobile companies. In 1920 it was in tenth place with 2.3 per cent of the total business; in 1921 it held ninth place with 2.4 per cent of the total business; compared with 1922, with their production of 30,000 cars, will probably place them in sixth place with about 3.75 per cent of the total business.

Known Value of the Hupmobile Wins Other Owners Daily

We first noticed a keener and deeper interest in the Hupmobile, when the recent curtailment in buying in all lines began to make itself felt.

Our experience coincides with that of other Hupmobile dealers, for we are informed by the factory that during this period Hupmobile sales registered a remarkable vitality and volume.

The truth is that they increased over any similar period in Hupmobile history—and that increase is now reaching even larger proportions.

What is at the root of this ever-growing demand for the Hupmobile? Simply that it is being fostered and increased by the insistence of the public on value.

Today, everyone wants sound value for his money—and everyone knows that it pays to own the Hupmobile.

They know that the Hupmobile means better service, and cheaper service, with far fewer visits to the repair shop.

That is why Hupmobile owners as a body, are loyal, and why owners of other cars in every price class are coming to Hupmobile.

Do Not Overprime.

Do not overprime when struggling to start a balky engine. The usual tendency of the man who does not know is to fill the cylinders with a mixture so rich the motor will not fire by pulling out the choke and filling by way of the priming cups. Leave the compression cocks open if you suspect the mixture is too rich and spin the engine with the starter. Thus the mixture will be thinned until the motor will start.

SUIT DROPPED AGAINST NATIONAL MOTOR CAR CO.

Announcement has been made of the withdrawal of the suit brought by an indemnity company, acting for a parts maker client, against the National Motor Car and Vehicle Corporation of Indianapolis.

Coincident with the announcement that this suit has been withdrawn, comes the statement from George M. Dickson, president, and M. E. Elstun, secretary and treasurer, that the refinancing plans under consideration for some time had been successfully completed, and that between $450,000, and $500,000 of additional working capital had been made available.

This, with the balance of the $750,000 bond issue authorized by the stockholders, of which only a portion has been used, places the National company in a strong position.

The erroneous suit started against the automobile company by the indemnity company acting in the name of a parts maker client never was heard in court. The action was withdrawn on request of the plaintiff, who had ordered the insurance company to delay any action until the plans then under consideration were completed.

The Park Automobile Co., which is one of the oldest automobile firms in St. Louis, having been organized in 1904, distributed the Peerless car in St. Louis territory from 1916 until 1919.

The officers of the company are Sam Primm, president; H. Dulle, vice president, and E. M. Miller, secretary and treasurer. In addition to distributing the Peerless car the company will continue retailing the Studebaker line.

MOTORISTS COMPLAIN OF NEW YORK PLATES

Many owners of motor cars registered in New York State are complaining of the registration plates which they are obliged to carry. They insist that these plates mar the appearance of thier cars and could be much improved by the expenditure of a little more money per pair than at present.

During 1921 there were 779,344 cars registered in New York State that paid a total of $10,288,858 in registration fees or an average of $13.20 each, yet the motorist is in 1922 obliged to get along with plates that cost about 17c per pair and are, to say the least, anything but good to look at, either on or off a car.

A movement has been started in Arizona to have the 1923 license plates for motor vehicles made of copper instead of sheet iron. While it is estimated that a pair of plates of the former metal will cost 18c more than a pair of sheet iron plates nevertheless, those behind the movement feel that the extra cost is warranted if it will procure more durable and attractive registration numbers.

The most important thing to note, however, in connection with the movement, is the desire for plates, which from the standpoint of workmanship, strength, and attractiveness, comport with these same qualities which inhere in the average American motor vehicle.

Something along this line is surely desirable in New York State where the motor vehicle registration plates are anything but attractive in design, and all too often the workmanship on them is very poor.

All but 300,000 pairs of the 1922 New York State registration plates were manufactured by the State Prison Department at a cost of 17¼c per pair. The 300,000 in question were manufactured under contract by a private concern for 15¾c per pair. It is possible, therefore, that quality has been sacrificed for price.

When it is realized, however, that the 779,344 motor vehicles registered in New York State in 1922 paid a total of $10,288,858 in special fees into the State Treasury, it would seem that a little more money per pair could be paid for registration plates which would be an ornament to a motor vehicle and not an eyesore.

Massachusetts State is a little more liberal in its expenditures for plates where the State prison at Charlestown manufactures them at a cost ranging from 18c to 24c per pair according to the size of the plate, for motor vehicles and 12c per pair for motor cycles. Whether these few cents additional are responsible for the better appearance of the Massachusetts plates is unknown, yet it is a fact that they look much better than the New York plates.

It is expected an appeal will be made to the proper authorities with a view to having for 1923 a plate that will be commensurate with the grade of products owned by motorists and the amount of money paid by them to the State.

New LIBERTY Six

No previous achievement of the Liberty engineers has been accorded such prompt and unqualified approval as the new Liberty models—the factory within 30 days after their presentation being compelled to commence night operations.

The public recognized in the new Liberty at $1295 a sound and satisfying motor car investment. They recognized in the Liberty chassis the same able engineering that through six years has sustained an enviable reputation because of the wholly satisfactory performance of Liberty cars. And in the five new Liberty body models they saw original elements of dignity, grace, and smartness.

Any owner of a previous Liberty model will frankly assure you of its genuine goodness. And a single inspection of any one of the superb new models will reveal that same fine dependability, augmented by an entirely new expression of the body-building art.

Essex Coach $1345

Just Try It

Yet it gives the closed car advantages you have always wanted. It is solidly built to endure and stay free from squeaks and rattles. It gives the essential qualities that make closed cars desirable in ample measure.

Light and economical enough for business, it is also a roomy, distinctive car of quality, ideal for family use.

It has the noted Essex chassis, which holds more famous performance and endurance records than any car its size or price ever won. Many are open records never equalled by any car regardless of price—including its wonderful feat of four times breaking the transcontinental record with four different Essex touring cars.

Marconi Company Announces It Will Enable Travelers to Talk to Physicians.

Copyright (New York World and Post-Dispatch) Press and Pulitzer Pub. Cos., 1922.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Cockspur st., London, S. W.

LONDON, April 15.—With the latest developments in long distance wireless equipment on the ocean liners, American millionaires who are, or who fancy themselves ill, can now keep in practically constant touch with their pet specialists at home while crossing the Atlantic and can receive "absent treatment."

It was asserted that on the last Eastern-bound trip of the Baltic, she was able to "talk" to the Cape Cod wireless station when she was almost alongside the Liverpool docks. The Marconi company promises in the near future a practically perfect 24-hour-a-day, ship-to-shore service for the whole transatlantic trip.

The value of such a service would be emphasized in the case of an American coming to England who had been under special medical care before he sailed. Should he suffer a relapse when in mid-ocean, such a patient could flash an urgent message to his physician, giving every detail of his symptoms. The doctor could then wireless back the exact treatment needed. The Marconi company itself has already taken advantage of the wireless as an aid in long-distance medical treatment.

NORTH PARKVIEW TO HAVE GROUP OF 17 APARTMENT HOUSES

MOST OF SECTION ALREADY BUILT UP

Interest in Market Street Widening Movement Evinced by Purchase of Northeast Corner of Tenth and Market by W. J. Miller.

By Berry Moore.

Sites embracing 1100 front feet in the North Parkview addition have been purchased for 17 apartment buildings to be erected as soon as the plans are available by Victor E. Rhodes, the Best Investment Co., and [illegible] F. Lerner. The transaction was effected by the Francis-Perry-Ruth Realty Co., and the purchasers have arranged with this concern for loans aggregating $225,000 to be applied toward construction of the buildings. The price paid for the ground has not been made public.

There will be 14 four-suite buildings, two eight-suite buildings of different sizes, and one single building of suites of five and six rooms with sun parlors, equipped with wall beds, breakfast room and tile baths. Excavation has begun preliminary to the erection of five of the buildings, while plans for the others are being made.

The ground fronts on both the north and the south side of Cabanne avenue, the north and the south side of North Drive and on Eastgate avenue. Construction will be under the supervision of the Francis-Perry-Ruth Co., which will direct the leasing of the apartments.

A considerable number of apartment buildings have been erected recently, and many others are under construction in North Parkview, which lies on the north side of Delmar boulevard, just west of Skinker road and which has been the center of construction of this character. Absorption of this division through building operations, speculative and otherwise, has been swift and complete, with the exception of a few scattered lots, which, however, are not available at the prices at which they are held, according to operators.

Delmar Garden a Magnet.

The probabilities are that Delmar Garden on the north side of Delmar boulevard, just west of North Parkview, and in University City proper, soon will be entirely out of the market, as a result of the demand for sites for apartment buildings, notwithstanding its remoteness from the business center. Though this tract was subdivided only recently, many apartment buildings already grace it. Plans are being made for between 20 and 30 buildings of this type for the addition, which was launched by Joseph Jannoupolo, who was proprietor of Delmar Garden.

While the greatest interest centers in flats and apartments as investment or for speculation trading, the demand for property, especially small plots in the business district, is a noteworthy feature, according to Eugene Christy of the Mercantile Trust Co. The Mercantile Trust Co., the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and the Franciscus & Kunz Real Estate Co. have received earnest money in connection with several large deals, a number of which embrace building projects. These will be disclosed for publication as soon as the contracts have been approved. The dominant note of the 1922 movement is the investment and speculative demand which invariably precedes a building revival of large scope in this area.

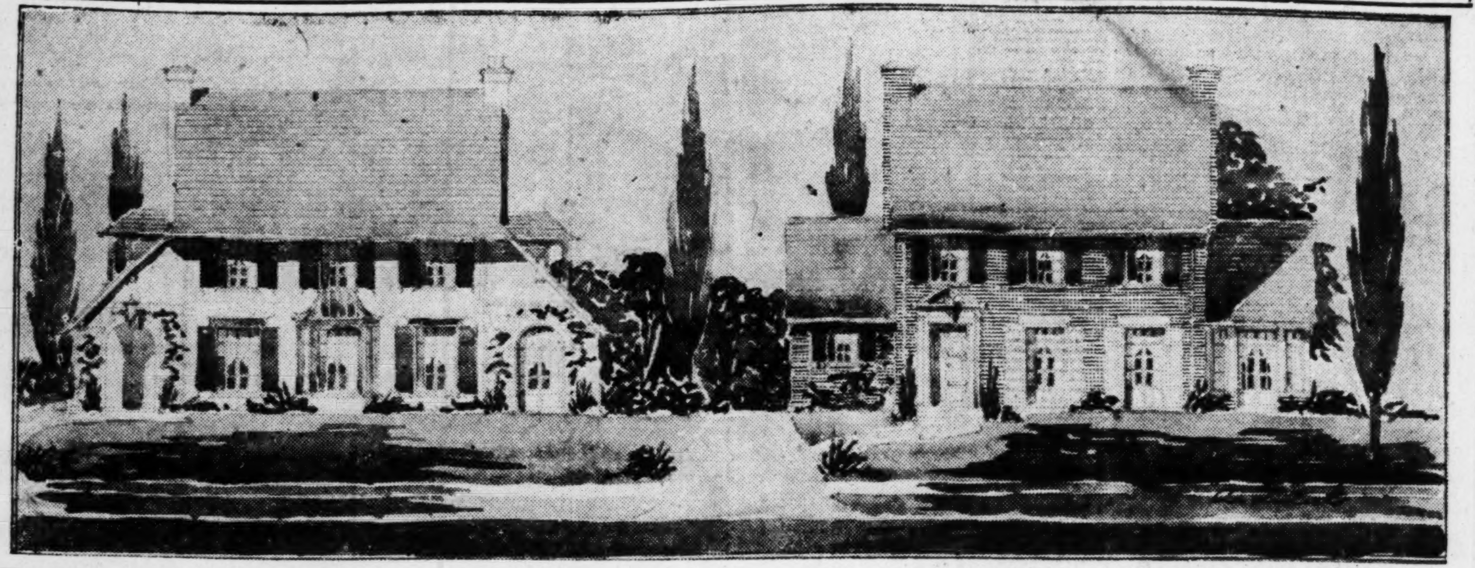
A feature of the week was the purchase by M. J. Miller, through J. I. Epstein, of the three-story building and site at the northeast corner of Tenth and Market streets, owned by the Ettrick Realty Co., composed of A. Blair Ridington and others. The dimensions of the lot are 32x106 feet. Theodore Coleman of Epstein's office conducted the negotiation. The price was not disclosed.

This transaction is significant, in view of the movement to widen Market street, as showing the interest in this thoroughfare on the part of speculators and investors predicated on the successful issue of this project.

Wants City to Buy Property.

Julius Pitzman, City Surveyor, and an authority on real estate matters, is of the opinion that the city should condemn and buy the land on both sides of Market street, between Union Station and Broadway and then resell it in half blocks, if the project to widen the street is carried through. The holdings on both sides of the thoroughfare within those limits run principally in 25 and 30 foot lots, which are not available for spacious buildings and could not be assembled for sites for improvements of more than ordinary magnitude after the thoroughfare had been widened, except at prohibitive prices, according to Pitzman.

NEW HOMES IN WEST MARYLAND TERRACE



THE houses shown in this picture are being erected on the north side of Pratt avenue, in West Maryland terrace, and are nearing completion. They are unique in design, exceptionally well built, and complete in every detail. Each house contains 8 rooms, besides sunroom and reception hall and tile bath, and has a hot-water heating plant. The floors throughout are finished in hardwood. The roofts are slate, with copper gutters and downspouts.

The one of stucco is in the Provencal type of architecture, and the other is of matt brick in the Maryland colonial style. The lots have a frontage of 78 and 92 feet.

The houses were designed by Maritz & Young, architects, for a client of the Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co., under whose supervision they are being constructed.

TRACT OF 21 ACRES OPPOSITE ALGONQUIN GOLF CLUB SOLD

Morgan E. Coggeshall, real estate officer of the Webster Groves Trust Co., reports the sale of the Williams Tract on the Berry road, opposite the Algonquin Golf Club, to Edward T. Hall, secretary of the Ralston Purina Co. and president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis. This tract of 21.55 acres has a frontage of 630 feet on Berry road and a depth of a quarter of a mile.

On the property is a house, barn and outbuildings, which eventually will be torn down. Hall plans an expensive home on the north section of the tract. The west part of the tract will be improved and subdivided and the southern part will be highly restricted and sold at an attractive figure.

E. J. Burgard of the real estate department of the Webster Groves Trust Co. represented both parties in the transaction.

In spite of the inclement weather, Coggeshall reports an active demand for Webster property and reports the following eight sales, all of which have been made since the first of April:

A lot on Plant avenue for James F. Allen to J. H. Koester; a four-room bungalow at 506 Oak street for J. Gentle to Philip Seris; 254 feet of vacant property on Lee avenue for D. Jannopoulo to E. W. C. Watson; 648 Marshall avenue, a six-room house, for J. R. Blevians to J. G. Richardson, and a large lot in Webster Park for the account of W. R. Skinner t C. A. Betts.

Delmar Heights Active.

A. R. Schollmeyer and W. J. Abbott had a good week at Delmar Heights, notwithstanding the weather. Builders are vieing with speculators in the purchases of sites in this subdivision which is right in the track of the westward growth of the city. It is at the intersection of the North and South road and overlooks University City from a commanding position.

The largest individual subscription was $10,000, given by David L. Remley of Clayton, head of a St. Louis grocery firm. Other individual subscriptions as high as $5500 were received, and in many cases the subscribers promised more. The principal campaign, for which the present one is preliminary, will begin April 26. Between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 must still be raised to finance the Temple, $1,000,000 of the total cost of $2,500,000 having already been obtained. SPECIAL LOT SALE TO BE HELD TODAY AT MOTOR HEIGHTS

MODEST HOME DEMAND IS SPRING FEATURE

The Davis Realty Development Co. will start a special sale at Motor Heights today, which is expected to be a feature of subdivision activity in the industrial district of Northwest St. Louis. The tract has about 250 lots fronting on St. Louis, Goodfellow, Clara, Labadie and Greer avenues. Half the lots have been sold. The remainder are to be offered at prices and on terms which it is believed will insure the early closing out of this subdivision. The lots on St. Louis avenue are considered attractive as sites for business buildings, while those on the other streets are being exploited for flats and apartments for families whose breadwinners are employed at the large industrial plants of that part of the city.

Many of those who have bought lots in this subdivision are having plans made for homes to be started this spring.

Salesmen's Club Organized.

A salesmen's club has been formed among the employes of the Davis company, the object being to foster home building in St. Louis, which is not keeping pace with that of other cities, according to Everett Davis, president of the company. The club will give a luncheon at the M. A. A. Tuesday, at which Carl Baer, chief of the development department of the Chamber of Commerce, will "sell St. Louis to St. Louis."

The demand for sites for improvement with homes of the modest kind is an outstanding feature of the spring movement in the real estate field. Special sales are being held at many large subdivisions, including the tract at Gravois avenue and Bates streets, recently acquired by Stedlin Bros., clients of David P. Leahy; Arbor Terrace, Delmar Heights, Bircher placefi Princeton place, Greater Greenville terrace, Ramona Park, Gravois-Neosho Heights and Motors Heights.

Lots in all these additions are finding receptive market and are being bought cheaply as home sites. When the cost of construction has been reduced, the presumption is that there will be a broad revival of building operations.

Arbor Terrace Lots Sold.

The Joseph Darst Realty Co. during the week sold 17 lots in Arbor Terrace, on the north side of Natural Bridge road, west of and adjoining Kenwood Springs. Most of the purchasers are preparing to build. This subdivision, just placed on the market, occupies one of the most picturesque situations adjacent to the city. It is reached by the Kirkwood-Ferguson line.

Fifteen Bircher place lots were sold by Haake & Stinson, agents for the Francis-Perry-Futh Co., owner of this subdivision, which is on King's highway, just north of the great industrial district of Northwest St. Louis, and is reached by the Union avenue cars. Plans are being made for several new houses.

Phil A. Smith reports the sale of 21 lots in Gravois-Neosho Heights subdivision at Neosho street and Past avenue, three blocks east of Gravois avenue, and only a short way from Grand avenue. The lots are being bought as sites for homes of the modest kind. The tract is reached by the Cherokee cars. The prices at which it is being offered include sewers and sidewalks.

New Builder in Field.

David P. Leahy reports the following sales in Gravois avenue and Bates street in the new subdivision of Stedlin Bros. Thirty feet on the south side of Eichelberger avenue to Joseph Fritz; 90 feet at the southeast corner of Eichelberger and Bates, to Oscar Friede; 50 feet on the west side of Bates, north of Gravois avenue, to Albert G. Zeigler; northeast corner of Gravois and Bates, 35x120 feet, to [illegible] R. C. Coleman, dentist; 90x1[illegible] feet on the south side of Eichelberger to George W. Bilyen; 64x127 feet northwest corner of Gravois and Bates, to Henry Kempker; 30 feet on west side of Bates, north of Gravois, to Joseph Lautner.

YOUR HOME

Built just the way you want it built. Beauty, quality and economy in cost are assured by our combined architectural and building service. You know the cost before you start. It's guaranteed.

See the wonderful new fireproof homes in course of construction on Woodrow Avenue, in the block east of the Lucas and Hunt road, opposite Glen Echo Country Club, in

Virginia Park

These buildings are constructed on the principle of the fireproof office building. The reinforced concrete floors are carried on reinforced concrete columns. The roof is of concrete. They are fireproof and vermin proof—save insurance. They cost no more than the ordinary brick construction which is not fireproof. They will have steam heat, hardwood floors, tile baths, and all modern improvements such as enter in the modern high-class home.

Drive out St. Charles road to Lucas and Hunt road, thence north to Woodrow avenue, in Virginia Park, or take St. Peter's car on St. Charles line at Wellston to Woodrow av.

Has Your Child a Home?

IN the minds of us older folk a halo of loving memories surrounds the recollection of childhood days in the "old home." But will our children have any such home memories to cherish in the years to come? Will home to them mean anything more than a series of crowded, noisy apartments? That's up to you, Mr. Father and Mother. If you now pay $100 rent you can afford to

Live in Maryland Terrace

You and your children can here enjoy a real home—a comfortable, happy, worth-while existence amidst congenial, prosperous neighbors of refinement and social standing, surrounded by wholesome home influences and educational advantages of incalculable value to your boys and girls. The money you now pay in rent, backed by a surprisingly small amount of ready cash, will finance the entire project.

Drive Out to 7047 Westmoreland—

Ask to be shown the lots still obtainable. Or 'phone Mr. Davis any evening or Sunday at his home—Cabany 147—and arrange to come out whenever most convenient. Let us show you some of your future neighbors' beautiful homes and tell you the approximate cost to build.

Maryland Terrace lots are 190 to 220 feet deep, and all improvements are completed. No crowding or building congestion possible. Adjoins Washington University Campus, right in the heart of the social and educational center of St. Louis. University car line.

A Bargain That's BIG

A Rare Investment Opportunity Beckons You From the Surest Profit-Producing Property in All St. Louis—

MOTOR HEIGHTS

An opportunity that, from the very nature of present housing conditions in St. Louis' greatest industrial district, cannot last long. An opportunity that is being grasped eagerly by investors of vision and decision, who perceive the immense coming demand for apartments and homesites for thousands of workers—and the very limited territory still available within walking distance of the factories.

This isn't an optimistic dream, but just plain, common-sense, actual facts, as your investigations will prove.

Motor Heights lies between three important business thoroughfares—St. Louis, Clara and Goodfellow Avenues, right in the heart of the busiest industrial center in this big city. Buy as many lots as you can, for values are bound to climb as demand becomes urgent, and we confidently predict a quick profit for you. Terms are only $100 to $300 cash—balance in small monthly payments. Write or phone our office for details of this exceptional money-making opportunity.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

O. L.—The quarter of the year 1854 is worth 25c to 30c.

K. D.—Missouri ratified the Prohibition Amendment Jan. 16, 1919.

F. B.—The gold dollar dated 1852 is worth $1.50 to $1.75.

A. R.—Address Medill McCormick, Illinois Senator, at the Century Building, Chicago, Ill.

SUE.—The 50c piece of the years 1820 and 1842 are each worth 50c to 55c.

THANKFUL READER.—A letter directed to the St. John's Methodist Church, King's highway and Washington, would no doubt reach the Rev. Dr. Gifford Gordon.

SUMMER GIRL.—When washing the gingham dress set it in cold salt water to which add a small lump of alum. Let stand for about one-half hour, then wash in warm borax suds. This will help to keep the original color.

WM. R.—William Henry Harrison was the ninth President of the United States. He was elected in 1840 and though in good health at the time of his inauguration, was later taken ill and died April 4, 1841. He was succeeded by John Tyler.

P. C. H.—It would be impossible to make comparison of the battles of the World War and those of the Civil War, because of the vast difference in conditions. The Battle of Shiloh of the Civil War occurred April 6, 1862, the Union army losses were 1754 killed, 8542 wounded, 2855 missing; aggregate 13,047. The Confederate losses were 1723 killed, 8012 wounded, 959 captured and missing, aggregate 10,694. The Generals in question were all able commanders.

G. M. B.—In July, 1921, the Missouri banks received a limited amount of Missouri 50-cent pieces, which were authorized by Congress in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of Missouri's statehood. They were to be sold at $1 each and the profits were given to the centennial fund. The coin on one side showed the head of Daniel Boone with the dates 1821 and 1921. On the reverse side the figures of an Indian and a Missouri pioneer with 24 stars. At the top is the legend "Missouri Centennial" and at the bottom "Sedalia."

SHEILA.—Louise Homer, singer, was born in Pittsburg, Pa. She is the daughter of William Primble and Sarah Colwell, Beatty. She studied music in Philadelphia, Boston and 2 years in Paris, France. She married Sidney Homer of Boston, Jan. 9, 1895. She made her debut as a opera singer in Paris in 1898. Her greatest successes have been in contralto roles. 2. Ernest Richard Kroeger, musician, was born in St. Louis, Aug. 10, 1862. He was educated and studied music in St. Louis. Married Laura A. Clark of Lebanon, Mo., Oct. 10, 1891. Director of College of Music of Forest Park College for women in 1883. Organist of the Church of the Messiah in 1915. Composer and writer of music. 3. We do not know whether you refer to Thomas Morrell Moore the inventor or to Thomas Verner Moore, the professor of theology.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

T. D. K.—You are entitled to the maximum Missouri bonus, $250.

STUNG.—Consult a lawyer without delay regarding the stock.

CLARA.—You can secure a copy of the Stop Signal ordinance from the City Registrar, at the City Hall.

GEORGE J. F.—If your land or fence is threatened you have recourse by law. Consult a lawyer.

ANXIOUS.—The money you inherited should have been invested at interest and the interest reinvested.

FROM THE COUNTRY.—The woman is liable on the notes which she signed.

CLARA.—A marriage in Texas, within one year after obtaining a divorce in Missouri, is legal and cannot be annulled.

LIN.—If the company is to be a corporation, it will have to obtain a charter from the State. A lawyer should be consulted.

R. W.—Second cousins can marry in the State of Missouri. We do not have information regarding the states in which first cousins can marry.

SOLDIER.—The man should give his present wife's name. If he is out of Missouri the Bonus Commission will communicate with him by mail.

A. B.—The man has a right to name his widow executrix and trustee for the children. If the children are mentioned by name in the will, they cannot break it.

WORRIED.—If the home is in the joint names of your husband and yourself, it will pass to you on his death, and the children cannot claim any interest in it.

MISS B. R.—For information regarding necessary papers, etc., to bring your brother to the United States, inquire at the U. S. Immigration Office, 1305 Chemical Bldg., 8th and Olive streets.

VERY SORRY.—If your wife is a negress you can, in view of the circumstances under which the marriage occurred, have it annulled. You can then marry the woman with whom you have been living and make your children legitimate.

MRS. S. W. S.—You can compel your husband to support you by suing for separate maintenance. You could also have him prosecuted for wife abandonment. Consult a lawyer or the Free Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Bldg.

OLD TIMER.—If you were continually traveling not staying long in any one place, and if you regard St. Louis as your home at the time you enlisted, you can claim it as your residence. In that case you would be entitled to the Missouri bonus.

OLD LADY.—Illinois provides a pension for mothers, under certain circumstances, application for which should be made to the County Court of the County in which the applicant resides. We do not know of any Illinois law authorizing pensions for old persons who are not mothers. We suggest that, for additional information you write to the County Clerk of your county.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MARIE.—A woman 33 years of age, 5 feet, 5 inches tall, should weigh 143 pounds.

C. B.—The St. Louis city hospital was located at its present location at the time of the cyclone.

A READER.—To enlarge the bust increase the body fat generally, this is the most dependable method. Massage, with fats and oils, especially the massage may tend to development, but cannot be depended upon.

MRS. L. K.—Sleeping under feathers is not unhealthy unless the feathers or the ticking are unclean or in some manner infected. A feather bed which has been used by a consumptive should not be cleaned by washing but by thorough fumigation, exposure to sunlight and through renovation.

X. Y. Z.—Your weight, age and height correspond well, which means that the lack of development in the lower leg is an individual peculiarity. The chances are that not much can be accomplished, although exercises which develop the muscles of the calf will help. Standing flatfooted and raising the body on the toes, persistently practiced, is a good exercise, so is walking, skipping the rope, etc. Massage may help.

FROM THE COUNTRY.—When there is even a suspicion of a deranged heart, it is certainly foolish to do other than ascertain just what the condition at present is. Caffeine, strychnine and such drugs will stimulate, it is true, but really serious condition may exist for which something might be done, and valuable time be lost. Consult a good physician or if unable to pay consult a clinic. These clinics are maintained for such purposes.

POST-DISPATCH READER.—Pimples are caused generally by some disturbance in the general functions of the body. We do not attempt to pass upon remedies advertised. Correct any disturbance of the general health. Locally apply to the pimples—one part Vlemnick's solution and four parts of water, mixed. Dab this lotion on at night and let dry. Wash off in the morning and rub into the skin a good quality of cold cream. Gradually increase strength of the solution by diminishing the amount of water.

MOTHER AND SISTERS.

In sweet memory of our dear son and brother, Edwin Herrin, who departed this life six years ago, April 16, 1916:
To yonder fair land of all sunshine.
Sadly missed by,
PARENTS, SISTER AND RELATIVES. (c)

In loving memory of Harry Matthes, who died one year ago, April 14.
Oft we think of you, dear Harry,
And our hearts are sad with pain.
Oh, this world would be a heaven
Could we hear your voice again.
His loving mother, brothers and sisters.
LOUISA MATTHES.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband, William Groschke, who died April 13, 1919:
You are gone but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be,
As long as life and memory last
I shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by wife, IDA.

Died one year ago, April 13, 1921, Gus Borgading Jr.
None knows of the depth of my regrets,
I remember whom others forget.
Only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting with one I loved so well.
Sadly missed by wife,
JOHANNA BORGADING.

In sad but loving memory of my dear daughter, Georgia Evelyn Wessels, who entered into rest April 20, 1909, and my dear son, Earl Kenneth Wessels, April 25, 1921:
I think of my darlings in silence,
No eyes can see me weep,
But many a silent tear I shed
When others are asleep.
Lonesome Mother, MRS. J. W. GOLDEN, Fort Sheridan, Ill.

In loving remembrance of our darling son and brother, Harlan Joseph Hanke, who departed this life a year ago April 16, 1921.
The depths of sorrows we cannot tell,
The loss of our son and brother we love so well;
And while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving remembrance of my husband and our dear father, August Hoelscher Sr., who departed this life one year ago today, April 19, 1921:
Just one years ago he left us:
Oh, there's such a vacant place;
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
Or see his smiling face.
Silently as the shades of the evening
Gather around our lonely board;
Silently they bring before us
That dear face we see no more.
Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In memory of our dear husband and father, Henry C. Brammeier, who departed this life April 18, 1921:
He bid no one a last farewell,
He said good-by to none;
His loving heart had ceased to beat
Before we knew he was gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways
Are pleasant to recall.
He had a kind word for each one
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, Mr. Jacob Bayer, who departed this life April 16, 1921:
Gone, dear father, gone forever!
How we miss your loving face!
But you left us to remember
None can ever fill your place.
When evening shadows are falling
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing,
If daddy could only come home.
Sadly missed by
YOUR LOVING CHILDREN, GRANDCHILD AND ALL WHO LOVED YOU.

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, August Schaaf, who departed this life just one year ago, April 12, 1921:
Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today
Are the ones who loved him best.
We never thought that on that day
Our dear father would be called away,
For all of us he did his best
Until the angels took him home to rest.
In silence you suffered,
With patience you bore,
Till God called you home
To suffer no more.
Sadly missed by
DEAR WIFE, CHILDREN, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear son, Raymond Katz, who departed this life so suddenly two years ago, April 14, 1920:
The month of April again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
Because it took from us away
A dear one just two years ago.
Do not ask us if we miss him:
Oh, there's such a vacant place,
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
Or we see his smiling face.
But he has gone to brighter regions;
No friend on earth like him we'll find.
For all of us he did his best
God took him home when He thought best.
Sadly missed by
FATHER AND MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM. (c)

A "ROLLING STONE" gathers "no dough." We've been here 11 years and going strong. We are certainly slipping you "the goods" for your "jack" here. We'll let you "listen in" on these big values at $15, $18 and $20 suits, top coats and gabardines for spring; save 25 to 40 per cent. We've got it on the world for selling "clothes at the rock-bottom prices." We have scored a regular "knock-out." What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you. These fine garments are made by manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for salesmen; they are made better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit. This policy enables us to save you money. All we ask is to "go shopping around" first and come here last. We will certainly get your "dough." Buy more, pay less. Acrobatic and Animal Acts Will Be Given Twice Daily at Coliseum.

The third annual indoor circus of the St. Louis Police Relief Association, which will be given at the Coliseum twice daily for 10 days, will open tomorrow afternoon. The performances will be at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m.

The show, which will be directed by David E. Russell, manager of the Columbia Theater, will be given on two platforms and a ring, and will consist of circus acts by recognized professional talent, assisted by the Police Zouaves and the Policemen's Quartet.

Wild animal acts will be presented, including Haveman's exhibition of trained lions and leopards, Capt. Andrews' grizzly bears, and three performing elephants.

A large troupe of aerial trapeze performers, a group of Arab pyramid builders, and a number of balancing and acrobatic acts will be presented. A special feature will be "Rollo the Limit," who loops the loop on roller skates.

Other acts will include wire-walking dogs, performing ponies, contortionists, the La Tell Sisters, who perform bird-like flights suspended by their teeth, and other novelties. Comedy will be funished by a troupe of more than 20 clowns.

The proceeds from the circus go to the Police Relief Association. Tickets may be obtained at 1006 Olive street. The general admission price is 50 cents.

THIRD DIVORCE SUIT IN LESS THAN YEAR FILED BY WOMAN

"None of Your Business," Mrs. Fehl Says Orpheum Orchestra Leader Answers Regarding His Whereabouts.

Mrs. Leona Fehl of 4549 St. Ferdinand avenue, yesterday filed her third divorce suit in less than a year against Walter P. Fehl, leader of the Orpheum Theater orchestra. They were married Nov. 3, 1914.

Mrs. Fehl filed the first suit last spring and dismissed it after a reconciliation. Another separation took place and she again filed suit, which also was dismissed on his promise to mend his ways, she says. The last separation took place April 10.

In her petition Mrs. Fehl charges that her husband remained out late at night, sometimes all night, and told her it was none of her business. She asks custody of two children and alimony. Her lawyer, Taylor R. Young, said that Fehl's salary is $105 a week and that the court will be asked to allow Mrs. Fehl $150 a month. Fehl is living at the Sheridan Apartments, Olive street and Taylor avenue.

Settlement Filed Shows Late Banker's Son Had to Pay Bills of Experts Both for and Against Him.

It cost Frederick Van Blarcom $11,958 to have a guardianship over him removed, according to a settlement filed yesterday in the Probate Court by his former guardian, the St. Louis Union Trust Co. Of this $3208 is the total allowed to doctors who testified as experts in three trials before he finally was declared of sound mind, $250 was paid to William E. May for special services at the hearings in behalf of the petitioner, and the rest went to lawyers. Randolph Laughlin and the firm of Frumberg & Russell, attorneys for Van Blarcom, were paid $6000, while George H. Williams, attorney for the guardian, which opposed the proceedings, received $2500.

Van Blarcom not only had to pay the fees of his own lawyers and experts but also those of the attorney and experts who opposed him. The doctors who testified and the amount of their bills follow: Stanley P. Howard, $250; Joseph T. Griest, $100; Marc R. Hughes, $400; Jerome D. Potts, $300; D. S. Booth, $175; James F. McFadden, $300; W. W. Graves, $200; H. W. Herman, $300; Albert F. Hug, $50; Robert E. Keaney, $508; M. W. Hoge, $50; T. H. Romeiser, $275, and A. H. Deppe, $30.

The settlement shows that since May 11, 1921, the guardian received and disbursed on account of Van Blarcom and the litigation $37,541. Much of this was paid either to him directly or for his personal expenses and maintenance in hospitals, the settlement shows.

PREACHER'S APPETITE IS DIVORCE GROUND

Wife of Rev. J. P. Finley Alleges He Dislikes Work, but Eats Heartily at Her Boarding House.

The Rev. James P. Finley had an enormous appetite for almost anything but work, his wife stated in a petition for divorce filed yesterday. She wants him restrained from coming to her boarding house at 4549 Westminster place, and eating her food. The Rev. Mr. Finley, formerly pastor of a Presbyterian Church at Memphis, Mo., and later with the Y. M. C. A. in France, is now in Columbia, Mo., the bill states.

Throughout the petition are repeated references to the minister's appetite. His wife alleges that, at the time of the separation, in January, undernourishment had reduced her weight to less than 100 pounds, while her husband, more than six feet in stature, and correspondingly broad, had waxed healthy and strong. It was his custom, during the pastorate at Memphis, she continues, to spend most of the days lying on the hay in the barn, eating nuts, apples and cheese.

When the United States entered the war, she goes on, her husband got a position in the commissary department of the Y. M. C. A., and went to France. She came to St. Louis and started a boarding house. When her husband returned, he found the boarding place so comfortable that he made very little effort to get work, she alleges.

Eventually he did obtain a position soliciting for the Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief, at a salary of $2500 a year, but, she charges, he contributed little of this money to her support, and encouraged her to continue keeping boarders. In May, 1920, she sold the house, which she had paid for with time payments, gave him $1000 of the money, and went to Ireland to visit her mother.

It was understood, she continues, that he would send her $100 a month, but instead, he bought a Ford. She remained in Ireland five months before he sent money for her return fare, she states.

Arriving here, she surveyed the situation, and decided that her wisest course was to open another boarding house; so, accordingly, she made a payment on the present place and advertised for boarders, getting 19. Her husband resumed his "loafing and lounging," says the petition, "alternating between the dining room table and choice alcoves and couches, and spending his time reading trivial literature and automobile catalogues."

On one occasion, the petition states, he shocked her and the boarders by warmly declaring at the dining room table, when girls' skirts came under discussion: "They can't make 'em too short for me." The circumstances under which the final separation took place are not described.

Mrs. Finley asks for $200 a month alimony, custody of the two children, John and Edna, an injunction to keep the Rev. Mr. Finley away from the house and dining table, and that he be declared to have no interest in the property. Finley could not be reached for a statement.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The Senate has voted, 36 to 17, to extend the Ball rent law, which gives a commission appointed by the President power to regulate rents of residence property in the District of Columbia for two years from next May 22, when the present law will expire. Senator Spencer voted for the extension and Senator Reed against it. The bill now goes to the House.

The much controverted Ball act was declared constitutional a year ago by the Supreme Court in a 5-to-4 decision.

The commission may act either upon its own initiative or on complaint of a tenant or owner. If it finds that rents or other conditions are unreasonable, it may order modifications, nothwithstanding any lease that may exist between tenant or owner.

The act gives a tenant the right to continue in possession of rented property at the expiration of his lease so long as he pays his rent and conforms to the other conditions of the contract. The right of the tenant in this respect is subject only to the limitation that the owner may take over the property for actual occupancy by himself or his family, or for tearing it down for the purpose of constructing new rental property.

Besides putting "teeth" into the act in several places the Senate adopted an amendment offered by Senator Caraway of Arkansas extending the jurisdiction of the Rent Commission to hotel charges.

REPORT STRESSES NEED OF STABILITY IN MINE INDUSTRY

CONDITIONS ARE LAID TO OVERDEVELOPMENT

Moving to Another Community Is Said to Be Necessary to Mine Worker Seeking New Employment.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Russell Sage Foundation, in a lengthy report on "The Coal Miners' Insecurity," made public today, holds that no satisfactory agreement of a permanent nature on wage rates can be reached between miners and operators in the bituminous coal industry until steps have been taken to curb what the report describes as "the over-development of many more mines than are required to supply the country's needs." This over-development, the report declares, has resulted in giving an average of only 214 days of employment annually to the 600,000 men employed in the industry, thus nullifying the advantages of wage increases.

In giving out the report, the Foundation states that it investigated the coal situation in connection with its study of human relations in industry, and that it has analyzed data on irregularity of production and employment in bituminous mining extending over a period of 32 years. This data, the report adds, includes the most recent statistics on annual earnings and kindred subjects compiled by the United States Geological Survey, the National Coal Association, the United Mine Workers, the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, and various state bureaus of mines.

A summary of the report as prepared by the Russell Sage Foundation, says:

"The bituminous coal mines have been open for work on an average of only 214 days a year in the 32 years from 1890 through 1921. If 304 days be regarded as a full working year, the lost days of employment and of mine operation have averaged 90 in a year. Only twice, and this during the war, did the miner reach the high mark, when he had as few as 61 idle days in a year. In 11 of these 32 years the loss of working time, and consequently of wages, has averaged 100 days, or more, for the bituminous miner.

Over-Development of Mines.

"Of these lost days, 37 per cent, according to the estimates of the United States Geological Survey, have been due to the over-development of soft coal mines. Mines now in operation could produce from 700,000,000 to 900,000,000 tons a year, according to various estimates of the President's Bituminous Coal Commission and statisticians of the Geological Survey, while the country can use approximately 500,000,000 tons.

"This excess of capacity over production brings more men into the industry than are needed, and makes employment intermittent and uncertain, even when business in general is most prosperous. As the demand for soft coal has increased from a little over 100,000,000 tons to over 500,000,000 tons annually in the past three decades, the number of mines and the number of employes have increased, but the days of employment in a year have shown no appreciable increase, except temporarily during the period of the war. Increased demand and higher prices have resulted in opening new mines, enlarging others, and employing more miners, rather than in giving more regular employment to men in the mines already open.

"Seasonal variations in demand, according to the Geological Survey, account for 47 per cent of the lost days in bituminous mining. In the period from 1913 to 1922, the production of coal in the month of greatest output exceeded production in the month of least output by 11,000,000 to 16,000,000 tons or more, and was never less than 6,900,000 tons. Seasonal fluctuations result in keeping more men and more capital in the industry to be equipped for the annual peak of demand than would be needed if work were more evenly distributed throughout the year. This excess of numbers employed tends in turn to make employment irregular and uncertain. Nevertheless, even the elimination of seasonal variations would not make employment regular so long as too many mines are operated.

Higher Pay to Offset Idle Days.

"To offset periods of idleness and lack of earnings, the bituminous miners are forced to seek higher rates of pay. But these higher rates do not give the miner a living wage throughout the year, when he has the opportunity to earn wages so few days in the year. In 1920 the United Mine Workers reported to the Bituminous Coal Commission that in the year of greatest regularity of employment, 1918, the average annual earnings of their members in the central competitive field varied from $1364 in Ohio to a maximum of $1532 in Western Pennsylvania.

"Had they been able to work 304 days a year, their earnings with those rates might have reached a maximum of $1850. Data derived from the United States Census indicates that in 1919 the average annual earnings of miners in the same area varied from $1062 in Indiana to a maximum of $1318 in Pennsylvania. The general average increase of 27 per cent, granted by the Bituminous Coal Commission in 1920, would have increased these earnings had employment been no more irregular than in the past. Even in the comparatively prosperous year of 1920, however, the days of operation of the mines were 9 per cent less than in 1918, while in 1921 the opportunity for employment decreased 23 per cent, as compared with 1920, and 32 per cent, as compared with 1918. Thus, irregular employment has nullified the advantage of increased rates of pay.

Living Cost Estimates.

"Estimates of the cost of living prepared by Prof. W. F. Ogburn of Columbia University, to be presented by the United Mine Workers to the Bituminous Coal Commission, showed that in January, 1920, $1603 was required for a budget to provide a 'minimum of subsistence' for a family of five. To provide a 'minimum of comfort' for families living in mining communities required, according to Prof. Ogburn's estimate, an annual income of $2244. Prices have decreased somewhat since these estimates, but even in the prosperous year of 1918 the miners' average annual earnings were not equal to the estimated 'minimum of subsistence,' except for a comparatively small group of machine miners employed every day that the mines were open.

"Facts about miners' earnings and the suffering which unemployment causes in their families can be understood only if conditions of life in a mining camp are known. In many mining communities the mine is the only place of employment. To find another job in dull periods means moving to another town. Moreover, a miner's family lacks the economic safeguards of life in a community with several varied industries, in which other members of the family, including wives and daughters, find work. For many coal miners this resource is lacking. The coal industry necessarily becomes responsible for insuring sufficient income to the men in the mines to maintain their families throughout the year.

Stability of Industry Needed.

"Overdevelopment of the industry and lack of opportunity for the miners to earn wages regularly in the bituminous coal industry render precarious and difficult the lives of more than half a million miners and their wives and children. The adjustment of wage rates every two years is sure to produce conflict and bitterness until the equally important question of stability for the industry receives effective attention for operators and public. Greater security in employment must be made the foundation for better human relations in this industry.

"The miners in the soft coal industry might well ask for a guaranteed minimum of employment as the basic need, taking precedence over wage adjustments this year. The necessity for regarding a reasonable minimum of employment as a fixed charge upon the industry would probably make operators more reluctant to open new mines or to enlarge unduly those already open. To make employment regular is important not only for the standard of living of the miners' families, but for the economic conduct of the industry. Capital, as well as men, is wastefully used when money and energy are invested on a scale to produce much more coal than is required. The public, the operator and investor and the coal miner have a common interest in making bituminous mining efficient and economical."

The hall bedroom is the refuge of the incompetent woman, Miss Blanche Geary, director of the economic bureau of the National Y. W. C. A., told members of the Town Club yesterday, in advocating that business and professional women "own their own homes and quit buying rent receipts."

For women who wish to be assured of a home when their wage earning period is past, she outlined three ways to proceed.

The first is for the woman who has saved $1500 to $2500, and can borrow more "on the basis of character." "With these funds, plus a good architect, and an honest contractor, a cottage may be built within easy commuting distance of the business woman's work, and her monthly outlay for amortization, interest and upkeep, will not exceed the $65 to $85 she has been paying for rent," asserted Miss Geary.

The second plan suggested was one now functioning successfully in New York City, by which 22 business and professional women bought their own apartment house, arranged it to suit themselves, and pro rated expenses. The monthly payments have been running from $50 to $57.50.

Building of club houses by women's organizations was advocated as the third plan, the money to be obtained from members and from business men willing, because of the public service involved, to advance the needed funds, at 4 to 5 per cent interest. Attractive rooms were to be rented as cheaply as possible to women workers who had not sufficient money to provide their own homes through the other methods recommended.

WILSON'S LACK OF "PUBLICITY SENSE" SEEN IN REBUKE

DID NOT FORESEE PUBLIC'S REACTION

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—When Woodrow Wilson disowned the innocuous little message which the devoted Joseph P. Tumulty said had been given to him by his former chief for delivery to the Jefferson day diners in New York, he demonstrated again his utter lack of a "publicity sense." Roosevelt had it in marked degree; Harding has it; Wilson never did. I mean that it was never Wilson's habit to calculate what would be the public reaction to his acts or utterances, or, if he did so calculate, it was not in his nature to be deterred if he thought the reaction would be unfavorable. It was not a "public be damned" spirit that moved him, but rather a scornful refusal to compromise with himself. He was, and is, intellectually honest. Perfect honesty of the intellect sometimes leads to ruthlessness. Wilson was ruthless with Tumulty, and he will suffer for it in public esteem just as he suffered after his curt dismissing of Lansing. I have no doubt that he wrote his note to the New York Times in a moment of pique, not stopping to think of its effect on the public or on Tumulty. In any event, no appraisal of probable public sentiment would have stopped him; but I am inclined to think he would have toned down the brusqueness of his rebuke if he had paused to consider how grievously Tumulty's feelings would be wounded.

Long Illness a Factor.

A point that has been generally overlooked in the welter of gossip about the Wilson-Tumulty rift is the long siege of illness which the former President has undergone. He is not now a perfectly well man, though the manner in which he has beaten back to comparative health and strength is remarkable. Illness has not dulled the keenness of his mind. Illness, however, makes for irritability, and to that the former President is not immune. I believe that the harshness of his treatment of Tumuly is directly traceable to his illness.

No doubt is expressed here that the former President was perfectly sincere in saying that he had authorized no message to the New York Democratic dinner. Nor is there any doubt in the minds of Tumulty's friends that Tumulty believed the President had given him a message. It was never Tumulty's way at the White House to speak for his chief without authority to do so. In his daily round table talks with newspaper men, except when he had a formal statement from the President to convey, he was extremely careful to say that he was speaking his own views and not those of the President. I recall that he got specific, written permission from the President to say that Senator Spencer had misquoted him in giving the purported text of the President's remarks at one of the secret sessions of the Paris conference. And when the actual official text was received unexpectedly at the White House, from the stenographer who reported the session, Tumulty, though eager to release it immediately for publication, refrained from doing so till the President, through Mrs. Wilson, gave his express consent.

Tumulty as Devoted as Ever.

Tumulty's attitude toward Wilson has not changed since their retirement to private life. He is as loyal and devoted as ever. He would not have given out a message as coming from Wilson if he had not honestly believed that Wilson had authorized it.

Tumulty went to Wilson's home the day before the New York dinner and asked for a message. It is not difficult, from a knowledge of the two men, to reconstruct what happoned. "Governor," Tumulty said, "the boys up in New York would like a word from you for their Jefferson day dinner." (I do not pretend to quote either Wilson or Tumulty, but only to give an idea of what probably passed between them). The former President had no formal message to give; but in the conversation that followed he said essentially what Tumulty quoted him as having said, that he was "ready to support any man who stands for the salvation of America." Tumulty received the impression that this was intended by the former President to be a message to the New York Democrats; Wilson, evidently, did not so intend it. Between the two friends there was a misunderstanding—that is all there is to this phase of the story.

Immediately Became Wrathful.

Now, it is a fact that Wilson is keeping hands off politics, insofar as the conflicting rivalries of Democratic politicians are concerned, and when he read that his "message" was being construed by the friends of Gov. Cox as an indorsement of Cox's presidential ambitions, he immediately became wrathful. His note repudiating the message quickly followed.

One of the many rumors engendered by the incident has it that Wilson was already displeased with Tumulty because of the latter's book. It is not easy to see how this could be so, as the book breathes devotion to Wilson in every line. A recent caller on the former President quotes him as saying that he had "skinned" the book, but not as expressing any opinion about it. This caller got the impression that Wilson was rather pleased that the book had brought Tumulty such a handsome profit. The theory that Wilson resented the publication would appear to be further discounted by the fact that Tumulty has visited him several times since the book came out.

A report with sounder foundation is that which connects the incident with the known rivalry of the forces promoting the respective presidential aspirations of Gov. Cox and William G. McAdoo. It is altogether probable that some of the McAdoo people sought to lower Tumulty in Wilson's esteem, in retaliation for Tumulty's supposed friendly interest in the Cox cause. They have doubtless told Wilson of the dinner that Tumulty recently gave for Cox in Washington. If the reports brought to him by the McAdoo contingent made any impression on Wilson, they were probably a contributing cause of his decision to let the public know in unmistakable fashion that he was not supporting Cox for the presidency.

Supporting No Candidate.

The truth is that Wilson is supporting no candidate. Whether or not he meant that his words to Tumulty should be conveyed to the New York dinner, they express his sentiments. Wilson is heart and soul for American co-operation with the rest of the world through the League of Nations, and he is not going to weaken his advocacy of that principle by mixing in Democratic factional fights at this stage.

The prediction is here ventured that the difference between Wilson and Tumulty will be smoothed over before many weeks have gone by. They had "breaks," of a sort, in the White House, and it was inevitable between two men of such different temperaments; for days at a time Tumulty would not go near the "Governor." A friend of both used to liken their differences to the spats between a devoted married couple. Wilson and Tumulty, I believe, will not let the present difficulty make a permanent breach in their curious alliance—surely the most curious that ever existed between two public men and marked, on Tumulty's side at least, by an affection and loyalty difficult to parallel in our history.

BOTH HUSBAND AND FORMER HUSBAND IN ALIENATION ACTION

By the Associated Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 15.—William J. Lester, Seattle theater manager, is suing George T. Williams, Wall street steamship operator, for $100,000, and Williams is suing for $150,000, all over the affections of Mrs. Amanda Lester, who in her time has been the wife of both men.

And now, according to the two men, she is living with neither of them.

Williams married her in 1900 at Camden, N. J., and they lived happily until 1914, when, according to his complaint today, Lester came along and alienated her affections. Then Williams got a divorce and Lester married her.

Lester's suit, filed two weeks ago, alleges that in 1920 Williams went out to Seattle with a second wife, dropped her there, and, again wooing his first spouse, took her away from Lester, and brought her back East. Lester charged that Williams and Mrs. Lester were now living together in New York. This allegation Williams denied today in a formal answer.

BULLET OF UNIDENTIFIED MAN FATAL TO PIETRO PASSANANTO

Pietro Passananto, 35 years old, of 1114 North Ninth street, an Italian merchant, died at 8:10 o'clock last night at the city hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen, inflicted at 10 o'clock last Sunday night by an unidentified man, Passananto said, as he was walking south on Ninth street.

Passananto said he was in front of 1209 North Ninth street, when he heard shots across the street, and, turning, saw a man shooting, and that one of the shots struck him. Passersby took him to 937 North Eighth street, the home of his brother-in-law, where a policeman, who had heard the shots, found him under the care of a physician.

Attorney and Former Stenographer Wed in Belleville.

The secret marriage of Ernest E. Walker of 4349 Arco avenue, an attorney, and Miss Dorothy Whitworth of 4423 Oakland avenue, formerly a stenographer for the Brown Shoe Co., in Belleville on Feb. 18, was announced last night at a party given by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. H. E. Krantz of 4046 McRee avenue.

The wedding was the culmination of a childhood romance. The bride is president of the Wagoner Memorial M. E. Church Chapter and the bridegroom president of the St. Louis Federation of the Epworth League.

SUES TO RECOVER $1400 HE SAYS HE LOST AT GAMBLING

"TONY" FOLEY AND 8 OTHERS DEFENDANTS

Department store methods of efficiency have been introduced into the gambling business by "Tony" Foley and eight associates, according to allegations made in a suit filed yesterday in the Clayton Circuit Court, in the name of T. J. Hughes.

Hughes is suing Foley and his alleged companions for $1400, which he says he lost in dice games and horse race betting in their establishment at 6128 Easton avenue, which, he asserts, they have furnished and decorated to imitate the gambling palace of Monte Carlo.

Hughes says he made a demand on Foley and the rest for the return of his $1400, and that their reply was a glassy stare.

The Defendants Named.

The defendants whom he names are Anthony P. (Tony) Foley, Joe Connors, Eddie Gleason, Butch McGuire, William Bambrick, John Doe Schwartz, J. Faulkner, James Mulligan and John Doe, alias Wolf. He relates the part which, according to his charge, each of these takes in managing some department of the establishment.

Nothing appears in the petition to show Hughes' address or occupation, and his lawyer, Hans Wulff, refused to give any information about him, saying that he did not wish him to be "reached." Prosecuting Attorney Mueller said he doubted whether it would be possible to use Hughes successfully in a criminal proceeding. In a similar case last month, he said, a man who had brought a civil suit against a gambling establishment withdrew it when Mueller attempted to get him to make an affidavit as a basis for a criminal prosecution.

Hughes says in his petition that the Easton avenue establishment is "frequented by tremendous crowds of people, both men and boys." He says it is in a three-story brick building, and is entered by a stairway leading from the first floor to the second floor, and from the second through a door protected by a doorkeeper into a large room. In that room, he says, customers participate in a free drawing, and those drawing a properly numbered ball receive credits on a $1 bet on a horse whose number corresponds to that on the ball.

How Admission Is Gained.

After leaving the first room, Hughes relates, customers are led into the next room by a second doorkeeper, who scrutinizes all comers closely, and when satisfied as to their identity and qualifications, passes them to a third doorkeeper, who lets them into the stairway leading to the third floor. There, it is stated, the final arbiter grants admission to the main gambling emporium.

On the third floor, according to Hughes' description, the walls are decorated with paintings, the windows are curtained and festooned, and the gambling tables and paraphernalia are decorated to imitate those of Monte Carlo.

Hughes then proceeds to specify the different departments, and to name those who conduct them. The dice tables, he asserts, are operated under the direction of Joe Connors, by McGuire, Gleason, Bambrick and Schwartz. On the tables, he declares, "are stacked many thousands of silver dollars, lawful money of the United States, to lure and entice the public into attempting to break the bank."

Book on Races Made.

At the right, it is further stated, a "21 game" is conducted. At the southwest corner of the same room is a mahogany and ebony roulette wheel with numbers of black, red and green, upon which a small ball spins at varying velocity as the wheel turns in the opposite direction. If the customer wins a bet on the black or red, he gets dollar for dollar; if he wins a bet on green, or on any number from 1 to 38, he gets $35 to $1, it is stated.

Dining Hall and Drinks.

Hughes says the management maintains a dining hall where "there is drink sufficient to satisfy the cravings of the patrons, to induce said patrons to forget their duties at home, and remain until all their money is squandered."

Section 5742 of the Revised Statutes of 1919 provides that "Any person who shall lose any money or property at any game or gambling device may recover the same by civil action." Another section provides that the action must be instituted within three months.

CONSTABLE MAY DIG UP BODY TO EXECUTE WRIT OF REPLEVIN

Negro Goes to Law to Get Wife's Corpse and Finds Stepdaughters Have Held Funeral.

It looked last night as though Constable William Lynn of East St. Louis, holding a writ for the replevin of the body of Mary Ellen Costly, negress, personal property of her husband, Clifford Costly, and valued by him at $100, would have to execute the writ by digging up the body at the Booker Washington Cemetery on the Bunkum road, but Lynn was waiting for daylight before proceeding to carry out the mandate of the law.

Mrs. Costly died Thursday night and at 1 o'clock, R. M. C. Green, an undertaker, acting for Mrs. Costly's two daughters by a former marriage, Evelyn Jackson and Mrs. Minnie Guyton, took the body away, against the wishes of Costly. The husband wanted William Officer, another undertaker, to conduct the funeral and notified Officer to go and get the body.

Officer asked Green for it and Green refused to give it up. Then Officer had his lawyer make written demand and Green still refused. Then Costly obtained a writ of replevin, in which he described the body as his personal property, valued at $100.

Constable Lynn, armed with the writ, went hunting for the body. It was not at Green's. The burial certificate informed him that burial was to be from 627 Brady avenue. He went there and found a vacant lot.

At Green's last night, it was stated the body was buried yesterday afternoon in Booker Washington Cemetery. But Lynn holds the writ and it calls for the delivery of the Body to Costly and if Costly insists, it is said, it will be up to Lynn to disinter it and deliver it to him.

CHILDREN PERFORM SHAKSPEARE CLASSIC WITH STRIKING ZEST

Children perform better when impersonating their elders; this, at least, was the impression given yesterday afternoon by the Junior Players' rendition of Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," at the Artists' Guild. This classic piece was given with greater ease and coherence than any of the dramatized fairy tales which have heretofore comprised the Players' repertory.

In fact, it was a delightful performance. It called for a cast of 24 persons, and the lovely costumes designed by Marguerite Breen resulted in some charming ensembles of color. Moreover, for the most part, the players spoke their lines with unusual zest, and made the most of the Bard's drolleries.

For the first time this season those two amazing little stars, Helene Higgins and Pauline Parker, were seen in the same cast, in the parts of "Hermia" and "Helena." There is a remarkable suggestion of Julia Marlowe in the dignity and self-containment of the former. Pauline is a more emotional type. Both were compelled to look to their laurels yesterday by the spirited "Puck" of Margaret Clare McGinnis.

Victor Woerheide presented a boisterous and effective "Bottom, the Weaver," and the ribald manner in which James Higgins, as "Demetrius," repulsed "Helena's" advances, induced much laughter. The performers ranged in stature from Marin Swords, of high school size, to the tiny Elizabeth Fagley, who had the role of "Mustardseed," and wasn't much larger than one.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 15.—The engagement of Miss Fannie Clark Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Jere Rogers of this city, and Anderson Gratz, wealthy manufacturer of St. Louis and New York was announced here tonight. He and his brother Benjamin Gratz, are owners of the American Manufacturing Co., with large bag manufacturing plants in New York and St. Louis. Miss Rogers is a descendant of the family of Gen. George Rogers Clark, the explorer. She recently returned from a six months' stay in Europe. Miss Rogers and Gratz have been friends for several years. Gratz and his brother left Lexington when boys and went to St. Louis.

Benjamin Gratz, brother of Anderson Gratz, said last night that he understood the wedding would be early next month, and that a trip to India is planned for next fall. Anderson Gratz's home is in New York but he is frequently in St. Louis. Miss Rogers has not visited here.

TREASURY CERTIFICATES ISSUE OVERSUBSCRIBED

Total Subscriptions Expected to Total $300,000,000 for $150,000,000 Issue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—A heavy oversubscription of the new Treasury issue of 3½ per cent six months' certificates bearing the lowest Government interest rate since 1917, was announced tonight by Secretary Mellon. Preliminary reports, he stated, indicate that the total subscriptions will aggregate over $300,000,000 for the issue, which was for about $150,000,000.

All the Federal Reserve districts, he said, have reported oversubscriptions of their quota. Further details as to allotments will be announced when the final reports are received by the Treasury.

EDITOR LECTURES ON 'DARKEST HOLLYWOOD'

R. E. Sherwood of "Life" Tells Why Literary Classics Are Rewritten.

Sherwood is 6 feet 3 inches tall, and when he walked slowly to the platform and looked solmenly down upon his audience, it was plain that this was no occasion for jesting. In a hollow voice he stated that all the travelogues annually given in this country, if placed end to end, would take 87 years to pass a given point, and many of them would never reach the point. An impetuous listener giggled, but the speaker fixed upon him a stare of such poignant grief that the irreverance was not repeated.

Describing how he set forth for Hollywood by way of Havana, the lecturer told of reaching the film colony and investigating vice conditions there. He related how the scenarists take literary classics and rewrite them so the directors can understand what they are about, and of the orchestras that play "Hearts and Flowers" to stimulate a proper emotional mood in the performers of tragedy. If the film has a patriotic theme the orchestra plays something by George Cohan.

One of the most interesting scenes that he observed occurred during the filming of "Robin Hood," when the lunch whistle blew. This was a signal for all the knights and ladies in costume to rush to the lunch tent for ice cream cones, after which they divided into small groups and rolled dice. He indicated by his manner that he did not think this was especially funny, and that apparently made it unanimous.

He said that Charlie Chaplin was the only genius there, and that Douglas Fairbanks was a fine athlete, and that Mary Pickford had a good head on her, and managed Doug and brother Jack and sister Lottie, and would never be suspected of being the "sweetheart of the world" if heard discussing a new contract.

Then he exhibited a film which showed him, as a visionary young man, setting forth from New York on a mission to "investigate" Hollywood, and how he stumbled into several studios and didn't realize th they were studios at all, and w chased by the Keystone police for and finally started home on a freig train. Then he hesitated, and if anybody wanted to ask any q tions he would answer them, but body did, and he said he guessed t was all, and he thanked them.

AN EASTER CHICK

THIS BABY, WHO LOOKS LIKE A FUZZY WHITE CHICK, IS SAID TO BE THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CHILD IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON. HER NAME IS BILLIE BYRD WEST.

The Play Dog of the Scientific World

This queer pup has wires, springs, coils and batteries for internal organs —He can't see a wink with his 5-inch eyes, but he follows the light according to the selenium which is in him—He has demonstrated to a scientist's satisfaction that even the most prudent moth couldn't keep away from the flame if it wanted to—John Hays Hammond Jr. used this odd mechanical beast in perfecting an enemy-proof torpedo :: :: ::

AROUND and around the darkened laboratory the scientist moved; circles, "figure eights," eccentric trajectories were described by his pounding feet. The only illumination in the room was the ray of light cast by the pocket flashlight the scientist held in his hand, and always as he ran he held the flashlight behind him.

And ever at his heels, no matter how he twisted and turned in that wild chase, silently sped an "animal" the like of which the world had never seen. Two great eyes of glass stared unblinkingly at the light in the scientist's hand as the weird chase went on.

Suddenly the light went out; there was a moment of darkness, and then the room was brilliantly lighted by the ceiling globes. In the center of the room stood the "beast," now docile but still staring at the point where the flash light had last been. Across the room stood the man he had been "chasing." He was John Hays Hammond Jr., world famous inventor and scientist. And the animal that had followed him as he sped around the laboratory was his pet, a beast of his own creation. Unlike Frankenstein's horrible creature, Hammond's was of glass, metal and wood, and could not rise up and destroy its creator.

The world sees the scientist as a serious man whose entire life is dedicated to research and experimentation for the further advancement of civilization. But what would the world think if it could see one of the most serious savants running around his laboratory chased by a grotesque mechanical beast which he is inducing to follow him by the simple expedient of turning into the creature's five-inch condensing lens eyes the rays of a pocket flashlight?

The first impression one would get from reading an account of Hammond's invention is that he had forgotten for a time the serious work in which he is constantly engaged, and had used his vast knowledge of scientific facts and theories to construct a machine that looked like an animal, acted like one and is actuated by the same motives that actuate many of the smaller animals. But the impression would be false, for Hammond, with the co-operation of B. F. Miessner, another scientist, constructed his animal as one of the many experiments performed in perfecting a new instrument of war—the wireless torpedo that cannot be interfered with after its launching.

So out of the most serious and profound research has developed this interesting by-product, the "mechanical dog."

These two scientists actually succeeded in constructing a "dog" that would follow them about the room at the rate of three feet a second, turn when they turned, perform many complex maneuvers and run around in 10-foot circle in much the same manner that a real dog chases his tail. And the "mechanical mutt," as he has been called, is more faithful to the light that leads him on than was the proverbial ass behind the bucket of oats.

Shocking conduct for two eminent scientists? Not at all! Rather are they to be lauded, for in building their animal, making him follow a light and behave like a clown Hammond and Miessner have given support to the theory of Dr. Jacques Loeb, famous scientist, that in certain animals apparently volitional or instinctive acts are purely physical phenomena.

Hammond's and Miessner's "dog," which is known to science by the more sedate appellation "orientation mechanism" or "artificial heliotropic machine," is extremely simple in construction and principle. It consists of a rectangular box, three feet long, one and one-half feet wide and one foot high. This box contains all the instruments and mechanisms that take the place of heart, nervous system, muscles and other necessary parts of a flesh-and-blood dog. Instead of the vital organs, however, the "body" contains a driving motor, solenoid electro-magnets, a storage battery, selenium cells and a copper wire nervous system. Instead of eyes the "dog" is equipped with two five-inch condensing lenses that serve exactly the same purpose. The body is mounted on three wheels, two of which are geared to the driving motor and the third swinging on a pivot. This last is the steering apparatus that works automatically when the "dog" "sees" a light in the vicinity.

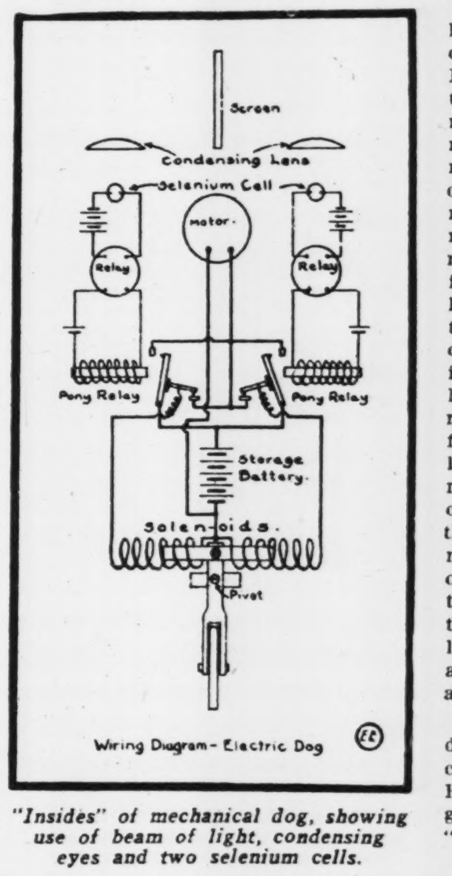
Behind the eyes of the "dog" are located the selenium cells, upon which light acts in exactly the same manner that it acts upon the eyes of the moth. And the inventors have shown with their "animal" that the moth can no more avoid flying toward a light than can the "dog" avoid following it, because the structure of the moth's eyes is basically the same as the "dog's." In explaining the "dog" soon after it's "creation," Meissner said:

"If a portable electric light, such as a hand flashlight, be turned on in front of the machine it will immediately begin to move toward the light, and, moreover, will follow that light all around the room in many complex maneuvers at a speed of about three feet a second. The smallest circle in which it will turn is about 10 feet in diameter; this is due to the limiting motion of the steering wheel.

"Upon shading or switching off the light the 'dog' can be stopped immediately, but it will resume its course behind the moving light so long as the light reaches the condensing lenses in sufficient intensity. To the uninitiated the performance of the psuedo dog is very uncanny indeed. The explanation is very similar to that given by Jacques Loeb, of reasons responsible for the flight of moths into the flame.

"The orientation mechanism possesses two selenium cells corresponding to the two eyes of the moth, which, when influenced by the light, effect the control of sensitive relays instead of controlling nervous apparatus, as is done in the moth. The two relays (500 to 1000 ohm polarized preferred) controlled by the selenium cells in turn control electro-magnetic switches which perform the following operations:

"When one cell or both are illuminated the current is switched on to the driving motor; when one cell alone is illuminated an electro magnet is energized and effects the turning of the rear steering wheel. The resultant turning of the machine will be such as to bring the shaded cell into the light. As soon and as long as both cells are equally illuminated in sufficient intensity, the machine moves in a straight line toward the light source. By throwing a switch, which reverses the motor, the machine can be made to back away from the light in the most surprising manner. When the intensity of the illumination is so decreased by the increasing distance from the light source that the resistance of the cells approach their dark resistances, the sensitive relays break their respective circuits and the machine stops."



"Insides" of mechanical dog, showing use of beam of light, condensing eyes and two selenium cells.

And there you have it. Science, seeking to illustrate a principle involved in the perfection of a torpedo that would be proof against enemy interference, has turned out a mechanical animal that gives support to an important theory in the far-removed field of animal biology, as well as furnishing a foundation for the invention of a new and terrible instrument of warfare.

Additional proof of the seriousness of the motives that led Hammond and Miessner to construct their animal may be found in the fact that Prof. Jacques Loeb, recognized throughout the world as one of the leading scientists of the day, has devoted an entire chapter in his book "Forced Movements, Tropisms and Animal Conduct" (Lippincotts), to a discussion of the animal and its relation to his theory of tropism, or the innate tendency of lower animals and plants to react definitely to external stimuli.

Loeb himself is a man who has performed many experiments that on the face of them appeared either funny or ridiculous to the uninitiated, but which were of great importance. This is especially true of his work in the field of animal biology, in which the experiments were of the kind that were given support by Hammond's and Miessner's dog.

Science has found that many animals and plants of the lower orders react positively or negatively to light, which it calls heliotropism, and on this subject Loeb has performed many experiments, interesting but less startling than Hammond's experimental invention of a mechanical animal. Loeb has made tiny shell fish act in a way just opposite to that in which nature intended they should act—as often happens also in the case of humans—by giving them beer to drink; he has made dope fiends of small water animals, set flies standing on their heads or turning somersaults forward and backward, and made many other curious experiments that one would not expect a sedate scientist to be doing, unless one appreciated what the scientist was trying to prove or discover.

In his book Prof. Loeb tells of the interesting experiment in which he added beer to the water in which he had placed the California Daphnia, or minute shell fish. Nature has made these tiny creatures stay away from the light. When they are placed in a tank with a window on only one side, they will move away from the light and cluster on the side away from it. This is because they are what science calls negatively heliotropic.

But what happened when Dr. Loeb added beer to their water? In a second all the laws of nature, for them, went to pieces and they became lovers of the light. Scientifically, they became positively heliotropic. Instead of fleeing to the back of the tank, they made their way swiftly to the window, where they clustered. Of course, when the water was changed and the effect of the beer no longer was felt, they reverted to their natural actions and kept in the dark.

Even this experiment of Loeb's has a definite relation to the mechanical dog of Hammond and Miessner, for Loeb has claimed that in heliotropic animals it is not love, fear or any other internal force that causes their movement, but it is rather the effect of external stimuli that they cannot help but obey because of the natural effect of the force on the nerves and muscles. The mechanical dog, he contends, follows the light for the same "reason" that the moth flies into a flame. The construction of the "dog" makes it impossible not to follow the light, and the moth, for the same reason cannot prevent itself from flying into a flame. It is not the love of the light that attracts the moth, says Loeb, but it is the peculiar construction of the moth that co-ordinates the muscles and nerves with the sensitive retina of the eye, making the moth positively heliotropic and bound by the laws of nature to fly directly into the strongest light that it approaches, even though that action means death.

That is where the mechanical dog comes in. Nature has given certain laws to the moth, and Hammond and Miessner have given the same laws to their "dog."

Nature gave the moth nerves and muscles; the inventors gave their creation copper wires and a motor. But turn on a flashlight when both the moth and the mechanical dog are in the room and see what happens. Both will act in exactly the same manner—they will start moving toward the light.

And so it happens that science, seeking to invent an instrument for the destruction of men, has shown why moths love the bright lights and that it is possible for man, in some ways, to duplicate the laws of nature.

Nemesis Follows Betrayers of Nurse Edith Cavell

Doom overtakes another in the person of Armand Jeannes, sentenced to hang for treason — Sinister fatality has pursued those who had a hand in her execution — Jeannes' crime doubly villainous, because he was a Belgian, for whose country the British entered the war — Remarkable aspects of this strange case

IT DOES not appear that the Council of Ambassadors need trouble about bringing the executioners of Edith Cavell to justice—a grim fatality is attending to that. There is something eerie and fearsome in the certainty with which retribution has followed those responsible for that dreadful episode of the great war.

William II of Germany alone had power to pardon her. He is a lonely exile, his wife in her grave, his favorite son a suicide. Von Bissing is dead; Von Sauberzweiz is dead; Nels de Rode is dead; Quien has gone to prison for 20 years; Wiert has been banished for life. Now comes news from Mons, Belgium, that Armand Jeannes must hang.

In Brutus' tent at Phillipi, Cassius realized that the dead hand of Caesar could yet accomplish his destruction. Meade's men, serving their murderous cannon on the heights of Gettysburg, sang: "John Brown's body lies a-mold'ring in the grave, but his soul goes marching on." The austere, high-minded nurse is at rest, but Nemesis presses relentlessly upon those who accomplished her death, and once more the hand of doom falls upon a man's shoulder.

For the British there is poetic justice in the name of Mons in this connection. It was at Mons that the "Old Contemptibles" met the German rush for the first time. It was at Mons that they were swept so ruthlessly by the massive momentum of the great gray army from the east. Mons is a name in British history, just as Cavell is—a name denoting sacrifice, heroism and unbreakable courage.

Armand Jeannes was arrested by the Mons police last June, and, after an interrogation, was committed for trial on the charge of treason, one of his alleged activities having been the betrayal, to German occupational authorities, of the system whereby Nurse Cavell was secretly assisting allied soldiers over the Dutch frontier to join their regiments.

Prior to the war, Jeannes had been a clerk in the offices of Maitre Libiez, a barrister. After Mons was occupied by the Germans, numerous incidents transpired, one of which was the imprisonment of Maitre Libiez. After the armistice of 1918, and the withdrawal of the beaten invaders, Jeannes, apparently out of great foolhardiness, remained in Belgium. He must have known that he would be denounced sooner or later, and that Germany was the only safe place for him.

In any event, he was arrested in Brussels in 1919, on a charge of theft, and imprisoned. But this was only the prelude to far more serious charges. Various reports had come to the Belgian authorities from citizens who had remained in Mons during the period of occupation. These led to the arraignment and interrogation of Jeannes last June.

The most amazing set of facts was developed. Jeannes, under the German occupation, had become a German spy outright. He made several journeys into France, bringing back useful information. Most useful of all—to the Germans—he got important information about the operation of the French and Belgian systems of espionage. Numerous Belgians remaining in the occupied territory were denounced by Jeannes, and several of them were executed as spies. No doubt, Jeannes' information was correct, for so thorough were his investigations that the Belgian and French spy systems in that territory were virtually exterminated.

One of the French operatives who fell a victim to Jeannes' noxious activities was an officer of the French Intelligence Department who had slipped into Mons, from where he was dispatching important information to his commander. Jeannes discovered him, denounced him to the Germans, and the officer, whose name was Halluyn, was tried by courtmartial and shot. Before the execution he wrote a touching note to his family, part of which follows:

"This is my last day. Good-by, my dear wife; good-by, my dear children. Tomorrow they will kill me, but do not be distressed—it is for France. Remember that I leave you after having done my duty, and that to my last moments I shall think of you. I cry once again: Vive la France!"

Jeannes' character soon became so notrious that his usefulness at Mons was ended. After that he went to Maubeugé and other portions of occupied Belgium, and finally was officially made a Commissioner of German police.

Following his arraignment on a charge of treason, he was promptly identified by many witnesses. One of them was a woman whose husband had been denounced by Jeannes, tried by courtmartial and shot. Confronting him in the room of the Judge d'Instruction, she shrieked: "It is he! I recognize him! He brought the gendarmes to our house and pointed out my husband!" Before officers could prevent it, she flung herself on the prisoner and lacerated his face with her nails.

Subsequently an enormous quantity of evidence against him was accumulated. Among the disclosures was one that he had assisted in revealing Miss Cavell's activities. These consisted of the following: Many allied soldiers had been left behind in the retreat, some

GASOLINE

NOW YOU CAN DEFY POISON IVY

Science finds that burn may be averted, even eight hours after face or hand touches plant, by the use of gasoline—Bathing infected spot with "gas" dissolves poison deposited on skin—Some things that ivy victims ought not to do, appearance of the plant and the disease it causes, described by experts—An article of timely interest to all who love the woods :: :: :: :: ::

THE fear of poison ivy, which has kept many a city dweller away from the woods and meadows a whole season through, is now an unnecessary fear. The specter in the shadows of the forest is gone. Science has provided the means for warding off the illness which otherwise would follow infection. It is a real illness, too, as many victims can testify.

Of course, for those with sufficient years and enterprise, it always was possible to inform themselves about the appearance of the poison ivy plant and thus avoid contact—usually. But persons experienced in woodcraft have been poisoned, too, so widely distributed is the plant and so easily may one touch it.

But now one may be safe from ivy poisoning, even without any knowledge of botany. For the disease has preliminary symptoms which can easily be recognized by anybody, and the remedy is just an application of ordinary gasoline. Or benzine may be used instead.

For science has discovered that the irritation of the skin, in ivy poisoning, is no different from any other chemical burn, and that gasoline or benzine will dissolve it and remove the poisonous oil of the ivy, if applied in time.

As many as eight hours may elapse between the touching of the ivy and the application of the home remedies just mentioned. Even persons on hikes in lonely districts may benefit by the discovery, since any passing automobilist can supply enough gasoline to do the work.

For the benefit of out-of-doors people, and particularly those unfortunates with a marked susceptibility to ivy poisoning, these instructions have been prepared by a physician of the Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital, and skin specialist, who discusses the matter as follows:

"Ivy poisoning is a disease caused by a volatile oil in the ivy vine, and many other plants may produce the same symptoms, such as the sumac, even the tomato vine in some instances, the primrose and numerous cut flowers. A peculiar fact is that these plants are not poisonous to everybody, but only to certain individuals. Such persons are said to have an idiosyncrasy to the plant which poisons them. Even ferns may cause eczema in susceptible individuals.

"Eczema and inflammations of the skin caused by plants, in which the ivy comes first and the sumac second, are all of the same character, that is, difficult to tell whether caused by primrose, sumac or ivy.

"It has been said that walking in the neighborhood of ivy, with the wind blowing, will cause an attack of poisoning in susceptible individuals, but this theory is not accepted by scientific men. Usually a case which is sought to be explained in this way was really caused by dust which had been on the plant and was blown into the face, or the victim probably touched a leaf without knowing it.

"The dermatitis and inflammation due to ivy and other plant poisoning are nothing less than chemical burns of the skin. If one were to paint the skin with pure carbolic acid, it would produce a chemical burn in from 15 to 20 seconds. If one is susceptible to ivy and rubs an ivy leaf on the skin, it will require 12 to 30 hours to produce the dermatitis.

"The difference between plant poison and carbolic acid might be compared to a slow fuse and a fast fuse in setting off a shell. The ultimate result is the same, with only a difference in the time necessary to complete it.

"The first symptom that appears when one touches ivy (and all who go into the country should be aware of the fact) is a slight redness, with a burning or itching sensation on either the hand or the face. The patient usually scratches this area on account of the itching, then touches the face or other parts of the body, thus spreading the irritation to other locations.

"In the course of two or three days the irritation spreads to many localities of the body and small blisters soon appear, owing to the great irritation caused by the chemical.

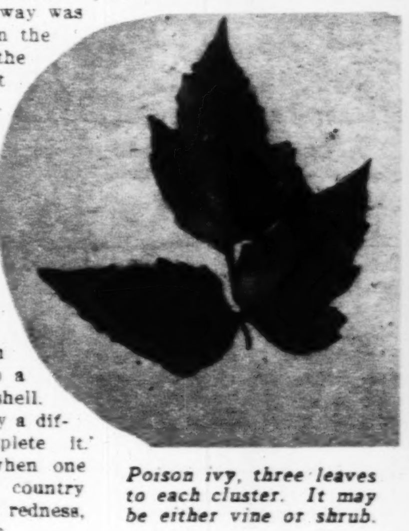
"One of the greatest dangers in ivy poisoning is the possible occurrence of secondary infection. The inflammatory areas burn and itch, and sometimes germs are introduced in these areas by the finger nails, when rubbing the inflamed skin. When secondary infection occurs, pus is formed, abscesses occur and the disease causes much more suffering and is greatly prolonged in its course.



Poison ivy, three leaves to each cluster. It may be either vine or shrub.

"Uncomplicated, ivy poisoning runs its course in 10 to 20 days, unless the patient is of a temperament that causes him to scratch and rub in spite of all warnings. He may spread it over the entire body by rubbing and scratching.

"Within the last few years, new theories have been advanced concerning poison ivy, but for practical purposes they have not been sufficiently proved to be a specific cure. For instance, the injection of an extract of the plant has been tried, to immunize persons known to be susceptible or sensitized to the poison. Success has been attained in enough instances to warrant the completion of these researches.

"Ivy poisoning, however, can be prevented, after known exposure. The oil secreted by the plant and deposited on the skin by contact is soluble in gasoline and benzine.

"When a person has been in the country and develops a small red spot on any part of the body which itches, eight or 10 hours later, he should get some gasoline, which can be obtained from a passing automobile anywhere, at any hour. He should wipe the red spot with gasoline five or six times in the succeeding 12 hours and apply talcum powder or corn starch. Gasoline will remove the poisonous oil from the skin, just as it takes grease spots from the clothing.

"But if blisters already have formed it will be too late for the gasoline treatment, for the damage has been done, the oil has penetrated the skin and cannot now be removed. The disease is well developed, at such a stage.

"After the ivy poisoning disease has developed, only the most soothing applications should be used. When the face is swollen and the eyelids closed, the very best applications are cloths wrung out of ice water, kept on the eyes and face more or less constantly or for half-hour periods five or six times a day.

"Dilute lead water (with emphasis on the dilute), which can be obtained from any drug store, if applied as a cold compress, will perhaps give more relief than cold water or ice applications.

"The application of tincture of iodine to a poison ivy burn is like trying to put out a fire with gasoline. It should never be used under any circumstances at any stage of ivy poisoning. So many people do use iodine for ivy poisoning that I want to emphasize this point. The patient already has one chemical burn, and the iodine causes another. Don't use iodine.

"For the treatment of lesions on the body or extremities, powders are generally of more service than lotions or salves. A very nice, soothing antiseptic powder would be 1 per cent menthol and 1 per cent camphor, in equal parts of cornstarch, talcum powder and boric acid. Apply it several times a day, with cotton. Use sweet oil to cleanse once daily. The less water is applied the better.

"Patients should not bathe for several days after the full development of ivy poisoning, as bathing has a tendency to spread the disease over the body. It is best not to bathe for eight or 10 days, if there is much eruption on the body, until the disease has run its course and is subsiding.

"No internal remedies are of any value in checking an attack of ivy poisoning, and diet is of no consequence, although if large areas are involved a rather simple nutritive diet is indicated.

"A few years ago we were consulted by a man in charge of a dozen employes who went out into the woods and cut foliage for decorative purposes at church fairs and other similar affairs. About two-thirds of these men would suffer attacks of ivy poisoning after each trip to the woods. At our suggestion he provided himself with a bucket of gasoline, which

Symphonies of Perfumes Predicted by Chemists

Foresee an art of nasal entertainment that will rival music—Point out that nose is the most neglected of all sense organs, having been compelled to perform the drudgery of the facial family without any adequate recreation — French scientist has arranged a scale of odors, and composers may soon set their genius at work :: :: ::

CONSIDER the human nose. It is one of man's best friends, yet how little he has done for it! Not so with the eyes and ears. Lavish care has been expended on their education. Great musicians, painters and sculptors have devoted their genius to entertaining them. And all this time the nose has practically been allowed to go to seed. Although obviously one of the most outstanding features of the face, it has been permitted to develop in its own wild, free way, without any of the advantages of a cultured training.

This seems unfair, and it is a relief to know that something finally is being done about it. The nose's friend and benefactor in this instance is Dr. Septimus Piesse, a French chemist, who is assisted in the noble work by Dr. Marston T. Bogert, professor of organic chemistry at Columbia University. Dr. Piesse feels for the nose. Moreover, he understands it as few men do. Beneath its rugged exterior he sees infinite possibilities. Given an opportunity to reach maturity under the proper conditions, he believes that it can become a shining member, one that the eyes and ears would willingly be seen with in any company.

In proof of his confidence in its capacity, the learned scientist has laid the foundation for a complete art, designed solely for the edification of the nose. He has established a scale of odors, so that in the future great nasal composers may devise whole symphonies for its amusement. Heretofore, the musical possibilities of the nose have gone unrecognized. The low term, "bugle," as applied to it, has been one of derision.

But Dr. Piesse is in earnest. Concerts for the ear have become almost a necessity. More recently, with the invention of the color organ, a similar art has come into existence for the eyes. Dr. Piesse proposes to do a like service for the nose. He sniffs anticipatingly, grandiose concerts of odors, composed to soothe and exalt the long-neglected proboscis.

No such trifles as those of the perfumer occupy his ambitions. His conception is a grander one. He speaks of probable Fourth Symphonies in Vanilla Minor, in which the opening theme will be announced by sandalwood and new-mown hay, later to be caught up by peppermint, tonka beans and cloves, and reaching a crescendo with patchouli, camphor, heliotrope and life savers in full voice.

Already he can hear the critics, for example, saying: "Prof. Patchouli dispatched the allegro con bay rum with a sympathetic redolence that ravished every nostril."

A fragrant prospect, truly. Not an impossible one, either, as was emphatically suggested by Dr. Bogert April 5, in an address before the American Chemical Society, at Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Bogert is in full sympathy with his French colleague's plan to uplift the olfactory nerves. He sees no difficulty that may not be surmounted. Perfumed preludes and scented symphonies are likely to be quite the fashion in a few years, he thinks.

And why not? he asks. Why should one of the five senses be discriminated against in favor of the other four? Why should the nose be made the drudge of the family, sentenced for all time to such unworthy tasks as detecting the husband's state of sobriety, warning the housewife that the beans have boiled dry and being poked into other people's affairs? Dr. Bogert believes it should be allowed to participate in the finer side of life.

It is the only one of the five that has been so abused, for almost as much has been done for the senses of taste and touch as for those of sight and hearing. Take touch, for example. We have the motor joy ride, the silken undergarment, the upholstered davenport, the patent mattress and a whole range of games and sports. In the case of taste, the process of pampering has gone even farther. Perhaps it is not so extravagant now as it was in the days when a million bartenders bent their wit and imagination upon concocting new combinations to caress the palate, but it is still pronounced.

All the pies, puddings, pastries, ragouts, stews, salads, confections, ice creams, roasts, entrees, hors d'oeuvres and their thousand and one cousins make a concert devised purely for the gratification of that petted sense, taste. If the nose but endeavored to snatch a wee bit of satisfaction from some of these, it was told, in effect, to mind its own business, and the odorous piece was gobbled up forthwith.

As a result of this constant hunger, the nose has committed some foolish excesses. It has so few pleasures that it quite naturally overdoes them. The isolated and outstanding example, perhaps, of a man catering to his olfactory sense, is in the matter of tobacco. And what is the consequence? Being deprived of other forms of amusement, the nose demands so much of this one that it frequently drives its owner to an early grave.

Who can believe that a normal and respectable nose, anticipating an evening of entertainment such as Dr. Piesse proposes, would insist upon saturating itself throughout the day in pipe smoke, dulling its sensibilities, sapping its strength, and rendering its owner a nervous wreck? That would be similar to eating a cheese sandwich before going to a banquet, or sitting out a few phonograph records just before the opera.

It is the theory of Dr. Piesse that the odors have an ascending and descending range, just as notes and colors have. He endeavored, then, to arrange them in the proper order, placing the dull, heavy odors at the bottom of the scale, which ranged upward to those most pungent and shrill.

Starting with the bass clef, three octaves below middle C, and using the musical scale, he places them in this manner: Do, patchouli; Re, vanilla; Mi, clove bark; Fa, benzoin; Sol, frangipane; La, storax; Si, clove; Do, sandalwood. And then, up through a total of six octaves and a fourth, as follows: clematis, rattan, castoreum, pergulaire, balsam of Pere, carnation,

The $50 Highballs of Palm Beach

"Class" of winter guests is determined by willingness to obey prohibition laws and pay the added cost of a clear conscience when satisfying the thirst — International treats start with desire on American soil and fulfillment under the British flag—Riding the air to see a bartender—Radio invitation to drink is one of the season's novelties

ST. LOUISANS who have returned from their winter vacations at Miami and Palm Beach, Fla., brought with them strange tales of new extravagances, including the $50 highball, the "international treat," the radio invitation to the flowing cup, and the thirst engendered on American soil, nurtured in the fuselage of an airplane and quenched in British territory.

A certain proportion of guests at the resorts spend most of their time thinking up odd things to do. Until new conditions were created by prohibition it seemed that the list of bizarre and spectacular "stunts" had been exhausted.

The modern Florida winter wayfarer is a wise migratory bird. He would smile with superior contempt at the old publicity tricks like riding a horse up the steps and into the lobby of the Royal Ponciana Hotel, with the inward comment that it might be all right for a man to make a fool of himself, but it was a burning shame to make a fool of a fine saddle horse.

But even the most blase and case-hardened Palm Beach sojourner in the waning days of the present season was forced to admit that he had seen a few new things.

"Three fours and a pair of deuces. You're stuck for the drinks, old top."

The dramatis personae in this little curtain raiser are a Chicago mail-order magnate and a St. Louisan with a large surplus and undivided profits piled up in the wholesale trade.

A snooping prohibition enforcement agent, if new on the job, might have hidden behind a sheltering palm to watch for further developments after this preliminary skirmish of the full houses. But if not new on the job he would have dismissed the incident as outside his jurisdiction. One who listened closely might have heard him give cryptic utterance to the word "class."

The motives for human action are many and varied. The Chicagoan and the St. Louisan shook dice for the drinks on that broad Palm Beach hotel veranda in the United States of North America.

They were law-abiding citizens. They had no intention of violating the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act. The fateful decision of the dice was not followed by a sly wink at a waiter, whispered confidences to a bellboy, unburdening of a capacious hip pocket or a visit to the loser's room.

No mysterious signal was hoisted to catch the eye of any rum-smuggling craft that might be lying in the offing. Nothing so crude or commonplace as that—for these dice players had "class." Half an hour later they were comfortably seated in the cabin of a seaplane and speeding away from the land of Uncle Sam, bound for Bimini, one of the British Bahama islands, off the southeast coast of Florida. Bimini is one of those places where "a man may have a thirst." What is more, he may quench it, too.

There, in a Bimini bar, the debt—to wit, one highball—was paid. Then the winner and the loser jumped in the airplane again and landed back in Palm Beach in time for dinner. Itemized, the loser's bill was: Highballs, 50 cents; airplane fare, $50. This is assuming that the purchase of drinks extended only to the payment of the obligation. Perhaps there were more highballs to be paid for, but there is no way of knowing, as even the gossiping little birds of Palm Beach and Bimini do not reveal all they see.

Some of the Palm Beach resorters carry their fads with them when they go there for the winter. This season one of the favorite fads has been the radio telephone. Many of those who have winter homes at Palm Peach—homes which they call cottages, but which in some cases are more like palaces—have installed sending and receiving sets and put in much of their spare time "listening in." One of the stories brought back to St. Louis is that one of the resorters was at his instrument one night when he recognized a voice that he had last heard in London nearly 10 years ago.

He heard this voice calling a code signal and giving the location of the speaker as Bimini. He also noted the wave length. It was impossible for him to "cut in" on his old friend at once, but for several successive nights he "fished" for him with messages put out over his sending set, and at last he was rewarded. Listening in at his receiver he heard his friend's voice call his name and follow this up with the invitation: "Come over and I'll buy you a drink. Take the plane at 3 o'clock tomorrow. I'll set 'em up to the ride, too."

Next afternoon the American landed at Bimini. He found his British friend waiting for him and eager to buy the promised drink, which had tacked on to its bill of expense $50 for the airplane service.

The host seemed well repaid when he lifted his glass at the chosen rendezvous and, smiling whimsically at his guest, exclaimed: "Some class I call this, eh, what?"

Class!

Racing experts say horses have it. Students of genealogy say men have it. It is a thing hard to define, but the returning Palm Beach resorters agree that the "classiest" manifestation of the season was not violation of the prohibitory laws—though there was plenty of that.

But those who boasted "class" went about the assuaging of their thirst in a way that enabled them to drink not against the law, but beyond it.

There may have been resultant headaches, but there were no reproaches of conscience.

Who Will Sleep in Ludwig's Golden Bed?

Soap salesman, or a noted beauty?—Odd possibilities have been opened by Bavarian Government's decision to sell the royal palace at auction—Three bidders include a commercial hotel keeper, rich young fiance of a famous dancer, and great composer—Palace is one of the finest in Europe, and has been scene of some romantic bits of history :: :: :: :: :: ::

SHALL traveling salesmen sleep in the golden bed of the Kings of Bavaria? Or shall the Bavarian royal palace become the home of a beautiful woman? The answer is in the hands of the Bavarian Government, which has received certain bids.

The palace is to be sold at auction. King Ludwig and his court have been deposed, and the democratic regime in power needs money. It saw an opportunity to realize a large sum, and recently announced its readiness to receive bids on the palace. Three were received. One was from a man who proposes to turn the palace into a hotel. A second was from a young millionaire of Brussels, who wants it for his prospective bride, who is a noted dancer. The third was from the composer, Oscar Straus, creator of "The Chocolate Soldier," whose wife is a famous Viennese beauty.

So this is the question which the democratic government of Bavaria must decide. For all its pretensions, democracy is new to Pavaria, and the idea of American soap salesmen or packing-house agents occupying the royal bedchamber, as might well happen if the palace became a hotel, is decidedly shocking. On the other hand, the hotel man's bid is said to be considerably in excess of the others, and the Government certainly does need money. The dancer is Mlle. Zerline Bolten, a woman of rare loveliness and charm, but whose antecedents are utterly unknown.

No doubt the Bavarians themselves would prefer to see Frau Straus as mistress of the palace. Not only because her husband is a great man, but because she is known over Europe for her beauty and charm. But, again, rumor declares that the composer's bid is lower than either the hotel keeper's or the young Dutch banker's. It is all very perplexing.

It is not known just how much has been offered for the palace by these rival bidders, but it is said that the sums climb far up into millions of marks.

Situated at the foot of the picturesque Bavarian Mountains, near the city of Munich, the palace offers a vision of architectural beauty to the eyes of the beholder. The exterior is adorned with groups of sculptured figures, the work of the leading artists of Europe. The front of the palace looks toward a blue lake, from the center of which another sculptured group of bronze figures, life size, send up a stream of clear water. The rooms are of surpassing beauty.

The large gallery, famous throughout the world for its treasures, is adorned with marble pillars, marvelous carved candelabra, statuary, consisting of masterpieces of ancient Greece, and priceless figures, which cannot be found elsewhere, made by the masters of the past century. Perhaps the chief features of interest are the huge mural paintings, telling the story of Wagner's classic, "The Nibelungenlied." These paintings are of life-size figures and adorn the walls and ceiling of the gallery.

The royal bedroom, if occupied by either of the beautiful women mentioned, will form a most fitting frame for the fortunate occupant. The bed is built on a four-poster frame, made of solid gold and covered with exquisite carving, unrivaled in its beauty of workmanship throughout the world. Inside the bed, beneath the tapestried canopy there hangs a priceless Raphael.

The spacious grounds about the marble palace, the marvelous gardens and the beauty of the site make the royal palace of Bavaria one of the show places of the world, and while it is understood that the bid of the German hotel keeper is in excess of the amounts offered by the two millionaires, still, the Government has feared some embarrassment should it be sold to the hotel keeper. Traditional love of the people for the homes of their rulers may prevent the present republican Government from turning the palace over for commercial purposes. Many of the prominent citizens have protested against the palace being made into a resort, and the popular opinion is that of hope that the palace will be purchased by one of the two millionaires.

The Bavarian royal family has for generations been the source of many stories of romantic intrigue and mystery. The love of King Louis I for the famous dancer, Lola Montez, and the story of their romance is one of the popular legends of the country. The separation of the King from the pretty Irish girl by members of the royal family and the appearance of the actress in America, where she died (she is buried in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn), has been made the foundation of many novels and plays, and there are other stories told about the royal family that have been made known throughout the world.

The madness of King Otto and the subsequent madness of Ludwig reveal the heritage of insanity in the royal family. The easily swayed minds of the rulers and their various peculiar characteristics have become part of the history of Europe. The story of Wagner and his influence over the young Bavarian King, Ludwig II, and of how he became the real power behind the throne, is no longer a secret, but has been made known to the world. It was under the patronage of easily influenced Ludwig that Wagner reached the height of his power and held sway over the land of Bavaria.

It was to Wagner's interference that the alliance which was about to be formed by the engagement of Ludwig and the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna, only daughter of Czar Alexander II, who afterward married the second son of Queen Victoria, was broken. His influence was also effective in causing the rupture of Ludwig's engagement with his cousin, the Duchess Sophie of Bavaria. It is now generally conceded that had Ludwig never been under the influence of Wagner the tragedy in which his reign and life terminated might never have occurred. But upon a mind hereditarily disposed to eccentricity the continuous exaltation in which the great genius artificially maintained him, together with the excitement of their association, were destined to work havoc and precipitate catastrophe.

And the strange part of the Wagner-Ludwig tragedy was the fact that when the young ruler wrote to him offering his patronage and a home in the royal palace the composer was at the lowest ebb of his finances and was about to be cast into jail for nonpayment of his debts.

This Ludwig was a sybarite if ever the world saw one. On more than one occasion he summoned Wagner and the members of his company from their beds at midnight, and ordered them to give a performance of "Lohengrin," with himself as the sole spectator. As another example, he had a trap constructed in his dining-room floor, because he disliked the presence of servants around the table. When the meal was ready the monarch would push a button and the table, fully set and garnished, would rise through the floor. When he had done, the King pushed a button, and table and scraps vanished from before his fastidious eye.

Another romance which the royal palace harbored was the love affair of the Crown Princess Cecilie of Saxony, when

St. Louis society, which directs Christian invasion of Tibet, will carry on Dr. Shelton's work—Romantic story of 18 years' crusading on the roof of the world—Won the Dalai Lama's permission to open a hospital in the forbidden city of Lhasa—Killed by bandits in mountains

THIS story of adventure may begin about 19 years ago in Cincinnati as well as at any other place or time. From the plains of Southwestern Kansas had been summoned a young man of 27, a veteran of the Spanish-American War who had become a doctor. He was ambitious to be a medical missionary in the Orient.

"Doctor," said President McLean of the missionary society, "take this note out to Dr. Kilgour."

The young physician carried the message to Dr. Kilgour, who put him through a rigid physical examination. Dr. Kilgour, who had made similar inspections of thousands of men, gave the Kansas prodigy a final slap on his broad back and wrote a note to this effect:

"If this man's qualifications in other lines are as good as they are physically, he'll be all right, because he's certainly the best animal I've seen in a long time."

"The best animal" was told by Mr. McLean to go out to the zoo and amuse the other good animals until 7 p. m., at which time the Executive Committee was to meet and pass on his application.

The Foreign Christian Missionary Society, now the United Christian Missionary Society, with headquarters in St. Louis, had offices then in Cincinnati, and the Executive Committee accepted the Kansas applicant after a brief examination as to his qualifications in lines other than physical.

"I was pretty much scared to death when I went in before the committee," confessed the applicant, in writing years later of this incident. That probably was not the only time in his life of 46 years that Dr. Albert Leroy Shelton felt that he was entitled to be "pretty much scared to death," for virtually ever since that episode back in 1903, until Feb. 17 last, when he was slain by robbers in Tibet, Dr. Shelton, armed with surgical instruments and shooting irons, and armored with the grace of God, faced perils day and night such as fall seldom to the lot of man. A sort of admixture of Saint Paul and Theodore Roosevelt, this product of the Kansas prairies pioneered in Tibet as leader of a modern crusade not less perilous than were those in which figured Richard of the Lion Heart. There was, however, a distinct difference.

The old Crusaders sought to recover for Christendom the holy city of Jerusalem, held by infidels. This young Crusader sought to open to Christian civilization the sacred city of the infidels themselves—Lhasa, capital of Tibet, the forbidden land. On the eve of his intended departure for that goal, under written permission from the mysterious ruler of the realm, the Dalai Lama himself, Dr. Shelton perished, another martyr to the cause.

But the United Christian Missionary Society is undaunted. The loss of Dr. Shelton, most keenly felt, is but an incident in the crusade. The society has dedicated itself anew to carry on the torch borne aloft by this Crusader. Another leader will be found, and it is the determination of this missionary society operating from St. Louis to carry on until its emissaries in Tibet shall have established in Lhasa the medical training hospital which Dr. Shelton had conceived and which he had the permission of the Dalai Lama to establish in the sacred city of Lamaism—a degraded type of Buddhism, under which all Tibet, an area as large as Texas and California combined, is without a hospital.

Dr. Shelton at first was assigned to China, but before he started for the Orient he sat in the Coliseum at Omaha and heard a lecture by Dr. Susie C. Rijnhart, herself a medical missionary of the Church of the Disciples. Dr. Rijnhart, lately returned from Tibet, told about the life dream of her late husband, Petrus Rijnhart, which was to penetrate Ulterior Tibet to the Forbidden City and preach Christianity at the very portals of the Dalai Lama.

This Petrus Rijnhart was a Hollander who in early life had migrated to Canada. Having read an old and rare book about Tibet, in which the Forbidden City was described, his curiosity was aroused. At first, apparently, he was seized with a mania to enter Tibet and reach Lhasa merely as a secular adventurer, but after a time he became intensely religious and determined to go there as a teacher of Christianity. In Toronto he talked in halls and at street corners, Tibet being always his theme. With no church organization or missionary society behind him, and without funds, he set out to walk to San Francisco. He made the long trek to Chicago, where he talked in public and took up collections to pay his necessary expenses on the walk to Kansas City. In that city he presented his cause with such appeal that a sum sufficient to buy a railroad ticket to San Francisco was pressed upon him. That was in 1889.

The late Dr. Albert Leroy Shelton.

Reaching finally the borderland of Tibet, Rijnhart passed some years in that land, marrying and becoming identified with the Church of the Disciples. The Rijnharts did heroic work, the husband as teacher and preacher, the wife as physician and surgeon. In 1898 Rijnhart felt that at last the time had come for him to penetrate the interior, to go to Lhasa. With wife and child he started on the long journey over mountain trails. The child died and was buried on a mountain side. When within a few miles of Lhasa his caravan was attacked. Rijnhart was carried off by bandits. It is believed that he was murdered and his body thrown into a river. Mrs. Rijnhart made her way back to the border after a series of experiences well nigh unbelievable. She slept with a revolver in her hand for many nights on the way out. But, undaunted, she wished to continue the work in Tibet, and she had come back to America to win recruits.

Young Dr. Shelton was fired with ambition to take up the work left off by Petrus Rijnhart. He would go not to China but to Tibet. He would go, ultimately, to Lhasa, even to the palace of the Dalai Lama—he, the two-fisted, two-gunned Kansas plainsman, who knew how to shoot a rifle or a revolver as well as he knew how to prick a felon with a lancet or cut off a gangrened limb.

There was nothing effeminate about this Kansas medic. In World Call, the international magazine for Disciples of Christ, published from the St. Louis offices of the missionary society and edited by W. R. Warren, may be found a formidable list of the firearms carried by Dr. Shelton into Tibet.

"Men not armed lose caste in Tibet," Shelton once remarked.

One ordinary .22 rifle.
Two automatic Colt pistols.
One 30.30 high-power rifle.
One Winchester pump gun.
One high-power .22 rifle.
One army rifle.

"All of these," wrote Shelton, "to be used to the glory of God."

Once a churchman wrote a remonstrance against the doctor's audacity in taking chances in the midst of Tibetan and Chinese bandits and bad men generally. Shelton wrote back:

"I know what you think about doing foolish things. I agree that it is not well to run foolishly into danger and needlessly to expose life, and I don't propose to do that. I love life better than most people. I glory in it. But are the missionary's comfort and life more precious than the gospel he carries? God forbid! If they are not, then it is his duty to take the gospel to the last man, even at the risk of his life."

"I'm afraid to go to Tibet, but I am going," said Mrs. Shelton when she learned of her husband's determination to make the for land the field of his life's work. And she went a real helpmate. Before marriage she was Mis Beal of Parsons, Kan., whom Shelton had met she was studying at the State Normal Sch Emporia. She taught school in West China the edge of Tibet, at Batang, where for a doze the Sheltons made their headquarters. When husband was killed she was in Calcutta arrangin the printing in the Tibetan tongue of some trac parts of the Scriptures.

himself. At the headquarters of the missionary society in the Missouri State Life Building they will tell you that Dr. Shelton was not a man of the traditional missionary type; that he was by no means of the meek and humble pattern commonly supposed to characterize men dedicated to the work of preaching Christ to the heathen; that, to the contrary, he was muscularly militant, a sort of two-gun man, always ready in defense of self or family or friends, a big, hearty, laughing fellow, who, like Engineer Jim Bludso of the steamboat Prairie Belle in the John Hay ballad, "seen his duty, a dead-sure thing, and went for it thar and then."

Jim Bludso, however, had no professed religion. Dr. Shelton had. Briefly stated, his theory was that before you preach a strange religion to a heathen you must convince the heathen that your religion is going to benefit him materially. Dr. Shelton believed that the way to the healing of souls lay through the healing of bodies. It was his practice of that theory, persistently and consistently, that gave him his astounding status in the forbidden land. It was by practicing medicine, including surgery, that after 17 years of devotion to his ideal he won over to his side at last the powerful Dalai Lama at Lhasa and that, a year or so before his death, he was invited by that Oriental potentate to go to the Tibetan capital and put his theories into practice.

Shelton grew up in Grant County, Kan., near the town of Ulysses, in the days when nearly everybody in that region carried guns and knew how to use them. In his book entitled "Pioneering in Tibet" he tells how he got gun practice. When he was a small boy he received a gift that delighted him. It was a small rifle. He became such an expert shot that there were times when he made as much money shooting small, fur-bearing animals and selling their hides in Ulysses as his father made from working at carpentering.

This expertness with the rifle stood him in good stead when he reached the border of Tibet and encountered certain superstitions which militated against the introduction of Christianity. It is estimated that in Tibet there are about 500,000 priests, or lamas, of various degrees. Shelton, who had been ordained a minister at San Francisco just before sailing for the Orient, had begun preaching to the natives about the God of Christendom. The lamas heard of him and tried to stop the spread of his doctrines. They had contrived what was known as a charm box. According to their teachings, no man or animal carrying the charm box could be harmed. Shelton disputed this claim. He could disprove it, he said.

Dr. Shelton bought a goat, from whose neck was suspended a charm box filled with lamas' teeth and other charms. The goat was secured as a target. Dr. Shelton selected a rifle from his arsenal and took a shot at the goat. The goat dropped dead. Then the doctor took a shot at the charm box. Lamas' teeth flew in every direction. That little incident turned the minds of many Tibetans toward the Christian's God.

But the most significant of Dr. Shelton's early experiments had to do with surgery. For a long time after he arrived at his station and set up his office as a physician and surgeon nobody would have anything to do with him. Though healing was offered free, the people would have none of it. The fat lamas, when they saw the doctor, would cross to the other side of the road. Socially and professionally he was ostracised. One day the skull of a Tibetan was crushed in an accident. The man was brought to Dr. Shelton, who improvised an operating table from an old barn door, put the patient under an anesthetic and extracted 12 pieces of bone from the man's skull—"one for each of the 12 apostles," as the witty doctor expressed it.

The man got well. "The foreigner killed him," remarked a local lama, "then he fixed up his head, and brought him back to life."

"By all the rules of medicine which I know," Dr. Shelton told the amazed populace, "the man should have died. The Lord has healed him."

Thereafter surgery and Christianity were introduced into Tibet side by side. This missionary carried a Bible in one hand and a scalpel in the other.

Shelton found such need for his services as physician and surgeon that at times he almost collapsed under the strain. On one of his first days in the business of healing bodies he cut off 31 gangrened fingers and toes and amputated the legs of one patient. As his fame spread patients came to Batang from far-distant points. In one case a father and mother walked a hundred miles to thank him for healing their son. The doctor began to make frequent forays into the Tibetan wildernesses on healing expeditions. Usually he was accompanied by a guard of Chinese soldiers, the town of Batang, his headquarters, being on territory claimed by China. Bands of robbers infested the mountain passes and made the trails perilous for all travelers.

But, strange to say, Dr. Shelton always felt safer when he was permitted to go on trips without Chinese convoys. Bandits always needed arms and ammunition and would attack parties of soldiers to get this equipment. As an individual Dr. Shelton felt reasonably safe, because even the bandits had learned to respect him. Their feeling for him had grown out of the fact that he was no respecter of persons.

The very first patient he attended when he reached the border of Tibet was the King of one of the Tibetan provinces. The next patients were virtual paupers. Chinese and Tibetans, lamas and laity, Princes and paupers, good citizens and bad bandits—all were the same to Dr. Shelton if they were suffering and needed a doctor's attention.

The Rev. James C. Ogden, stationed at Batang as a teacher in the school which the United Christian Missionary Society has established there, spent several days in St. Louis at the end of March with his wife and two children, on furlough from the foreign field.

"I am positive," said Mr. Ogden, "that Dr. Shelton was not slain deliberately. The people loved him too much to do that. Even the bandits loved him, and some of them had sworn to protect him. Not one of them would harm him intentionally. He must have been killed accidentally in a fight between soldiers and robbers."

Later advices from Batang confirmed the theory of Mr. Ogden. Thus it is seen that the devoted healer of the bodies of benighted Tibetans perished as a casualty of battle and not as a victim of deliberate murder, he having aroused in them, through his long years of ministering to their physical needs, a spiritual comradeship which gave him what may be termed a charmed life.

In the course of the Chinese-Tibetan War Dr. Shelton was called to Chambdo, an important town many miles within Tibet, which no white man ever had been permitted to visit. The Galon Lama, or high priest of the place requested him to come and succor the wounded. He went only on condition that he should treat Chinese and Tibetans without distinction. One paragraph from Dr. Shelton's book is quoted here:

"We had been invited to dine with the Galon Lama, and in the meantime I went on a tour of inspection to see the wounded, who were housed in three different buildings on beds of straw, rotten, stinking, not a wound less than two months old. It was one of the worst propositions that I ever have had to undertake. We began with the worst, and for 10 days, beginning between 7 and 8 in the morning, I operated as long as I was able to stand up, being assisted by the three men who were with me."

Work like this came to the ear of the Dalai Lama at Lhasa, and when Dr. Shelton told a high Tibetan official of his hope that he might be permitted to go to the capital and found a hospital where Tibetans could be trained as physicians and surgeons to go out into the surrounding country and heal the diseased and minister to the maimed, co-operation was promised. Dr. Shelton was told to write to the Dalai Lama, submitting his proposition. He did so, his letter being indorsed by the official. The Dalai Lama replied, giv-

Stenographer Who Used Her Head

Miss Elsie Lempke, starting at $8 a week, promoted at age of 29 to post of manager of big plant that makes cut-to-order houses—Ambitious to earn as much as the girl who drew $15, she learned details of business when taking dictation—Originated new ideas in construction of homes, a woman's avocation, and now holds a "man-sized job" :: ::

BRIEF but big with import was a bulletin posted recently in one of the principal plants operated by an American industrial corporation which does a business of many millions of dollars every year. Heads of departments read the bulletin with keen interest. Minor officials perused it thoughtfully. Ordinary employes, even down to the office boys, absorbed the fact set forth in simple English and felt the thrill of its significance.

It was the announcement that a new manager had been appointed and that in future all executive orders were to be signed by her—by HER, not by him.

Thus did the men higher up in the company, operating great lumber plants and building mills in which complete houses are constructed for shipment in sectional parts, let all hands in this big plant know that they were to take orders from a woman.

Miss Elsie M. Lempke, the new manager, is a young and attractive woman. At 29 she has stepped into an executive position of importance in which expert technical knowledge, commonly confined to the male sex, is required.

However, inasmuch as a woman may be assumed to know more intimately than a man the requirements of a building intended for a home, and in view of the further fact that Miss Lempke is credited by high officials of the company with having designed some of the best features of the houses it sells, there is excellent reason to believe that her expert knowledge and her physical application thereof contributed importantly toward her advancement to executive authority.

Miss Lempke is a product of Petoskey, Mich., which place she left nine years ago to become a stenographer at Bay City, in the same State. At 16 she had become a school teacher, earning money to pay her way through a business college at Grand Rapids, where she learned stenography and typewriting. Now she is manager of the Aladdin Company plant at Wilmington, N. C., a long distance away from Bay City but less than 10 years away from her first business job as a stenographer at $8 a week. She is manager of the big plant, her friends say, because as a stenographer she was not content to work "by ear" alone, not satisfied merely to take down what her employer dictated and rattle it off on the typewriter, not willing to be a mere mechanical agency for the transmission of business correspondence.

The new manager is said to have taken always what may be described as an intelligent interest in the business that came her way. She wished to understand not only what she was doing, but why she was doing it. She wanted to know not only the antecedents of a letter she took down but likewise the results of that letter. She desired to be of real service to her employer, and she had enough common sense to know that unless she used her brains as well as the tips of her facile fingers she could be worth little.

Elsie Lempke's early ambition was to draw $15 a week. She needed the money. She was getting only $8 in her first job. She had found a place in the office of a big lumber concern at Bay City other than the Aladdin Company, and the other girls sometimes talked awesomely of one stenographer who, having worked herself out of a job with that house because she had reached the limit of $15 a week, had gone presumably to higher emolument elsewhere.

"I remember that I was determined to get as much money as I could," said Miss Lempke, after her promotion to the managership she occupies now. "I thought mostly of getting ahead, so that I might earn fabulous sums—even dreaming that, if I worked unusually hard, I might have my weekly envelope fattened to that dizzy height, $15. I wondered how that other girl had accomplished it, and to appease my curiosity I set to work to do more than transcribe my employer's letters; I began really to read them. For a long time most of them were Greek to me. Eventually I hit upon the plan of first reading the letter which had been written to the boss. This he would hand me as a guide to the address to write upon the reply. Then I carefully read his reply, after I had typed it. If I could not understand it I would wait until another letter came along from the same source, resulting in another reply. Then I would get the old copies out of the files and refresh my mind upon the first correspondence and study the later letters. Before long, of course, I began to understand the sometimes cryptic sentences of the boss; I could almost tell in advance just what he would write in answer to a given letter."

One day the young stenographer caught herself giving vent to an exclamation of disapproval. Her employer had dictated a letter in which he said something contradicting what he had written a little earlier to another correspondent. Miss Lempke bit her lip, trying to keep from saying what she had started to say; but her employer insisted upon knowing what she had to say about the matter. The result was that he found himself caught up in an error, and at the end of the week an extra dollar was found in the girl's pay envelope.

There were several extra dollars, added one at a time, as the weeks passed, but not enough to kick the shining goal of that $15 a week. Miss Lempke soon learned that in the Aladdin offices, close at hand, were two stenographers who drew each $18 a week. That concern was larger than the one for which she was working. Both being lumber industry organizations, the girl felt that she had learned enough about the business to go to the larger plant and make a hard struggle to attain the higher goal—$18 a week. So she went.

In her new job Miss Lempke continued her practice of learning all she could about the business that passed through her hands—into her head. To state it otherwise, she never permitted the current of information to be grounded and lost through the typewriter: she completed the circuit and sent it all into her busy, bright brain, which became a storage battery for future use. Still, however, she was just the same little Elsie Lempke, with never a dream of being even private secretary to the president of the company, for instance—never a dream during the first six or eight weeks save that of finding at the end of some early week a pay envelope padded to $18.

After a time she did achieve an ambition to be something more than a stenographer, her dream mounting beyond that $18 a week. She had been learning many things by observing how others did them. Large salaries were paid to persons who knew a great deal about the business. She determined, more definitely than before, that she would learn everything she could, not only in her immediate department, but in any other department where opportunity offered itself.

Elsie Lempke had the helpful habit. When some of the other girls found difficulty in transcribing their letters she helped them out. She knew more than they, already, and when she assisted them she had the privilege of reading the correspondence in their departments and learning still more, storing it up in her brain-battery along with the rest. Quite naturally, certain high officials on the premises took notice that Miss Lempke had acquired a considerable knowledge of the lumber and building business as practiced there. One day the executive to whom she was, as one might say, immediate inferior suggested that she might lighten his burdens by winnowing out from the mass of correspondence on his desk such letters as she could answer herself, leaving for his dictation only the more important ones.

"How many of the letters have you been able to answer?" he inquired later in the day.

"All of them, sir," was her astonishing reply.

He looked over the answers she had written. "Why, Miss Lempke," he cried, delightedly, "every letter is just what I should have written myself—except one or two—and they are distinctly better than I could have done."

The generous superior in authority saw to it that his stenographer's pay was raised to $18 a week. But that was her goal no longer—it was hardly more than her beginning. She had been with the company but two months. There were 80 other girls doing typing there, some of whom had been on the job three years. Two months later Elsie Lempke was called into the office of the president of the company. He pointed to a small private office adjoining his larger quarters.

"You may go right in there and make yourself at home," he told her. "That is the office of my private secretary, Miss Lempke—your office from now on."

"I do not think I ever shall forget the magic feel of that rich mahogany desk," says Manager Lempke, speaking of that promotion. "I tumbled down into the swivel chair and wheeled myself around. 'Private secretary to the president!' I said to myself, out loud."

The president of the Aladdin Company himself says: "Within a few months I found that I was having just about one-tenth of my usual work to do and that Miss Lempke was doing the other nine-tenths. I don't know just how the process worked itself out. After a time it seemed quite natural to leave to her decisions and plans which, at one time, would have kept me at the office half the night."

Presently the private secretary was promoted. This promotion also came dramatically.

"You've never been very far away from Bay City, I take it, Miss Lempke?" the president asked.

"No, sir," she replied.

"Then you would enjoy a trip to Florida. Go down to Tampa and take charge as manager of the company's offices there."

Having made good use of her opportunity to learn the salesmanship end of the business when she was in humbler positions, Miss Lempke almost doubled sales in the Southern territory. This success, of course, made her still more popular at the home offices, and when a branch plant for producing Aladdin material was opened at Wilmington, N. C., Miss Lempke was recalled from Tampa and sent to the new plant as assistant manager. When the manager there was withdrawn, recently, to take charge of another branch, Miss Lempke was promoted to the management of the plant.

"She was chosen," the president explains, "because she knows more about the business in all its various phases than does any other person. She can step into the shoes of any workman in the plant, or into the position of any executive, and perform whatever part of the company's business or labors might come to her. Many of the features of our houses were designed by her, and she can tell to the fraction of an inch, offhand, just how many square feet of lumber, what kind and quality, and at what cost price, are included in any size of house we build."

Miss Lempke is not, as cynical persons might assume, of the type of business woman who is angular, raucous, fierce, overbearing. To the contrary, she is described as a simple, wholesome, exceedingly attractive young woman. "She is given to smiles and frills," says one admirer, "and is deft in all the more conservative dance steps."

Miss Lempke is said to be the only woman in the United States holding such a position as that to which she has been promoted because of her all-round knowledge of the details and her comprehensive grasp of the enterprise in its entirety.

HISTORIC DOOR, LOCKED 187 YEARS AGO, IS OPENED

Communication restored between haunted gallery and great watching chamber in Hampton Court Palace, blocked up by George II in 1735—Through this portal passed England's kings and queens for nearly 250 years — One of the wives of Henry VIII went through this passage to her execution — Shakspeare, Milton, Cromwell and Daniel Defoe in the long procession of ghostly figures who in life used this door :: :: ::

LIVING men and women as well as ghosts now may pass through a historic doorway in England which for 187 years has been available only for the passage of immaterial phantoms, the kind which, according to superstitious minds, may pass through solid walls.

The door between the Watching Chamber and the Haunted Gallery in Hampton Court Palace is open. In 1735 it was blocked up by King George II. Recent news from London is that the heavy masonry which closed the portal has been removed at last. For approximately six human generations the sealed doorway has been to all appearances but a part of the thick partition between the two spacious chambers.

The reopening of that door reopens many half-forgotten chambers of English history, of monarchical romance and tragedy, of literary glory, of "the spacious times of great Elizabeth" and of other times, before and after, peopled with men and women whose illustrious ghosts glide through the great watching chambers and the haunted galleries of the world's palace of memories.

Peasants now may pass unchallenged through the portal where Princes passed to and fro for more than 200 years. For Hampton Court, since the young Queen Victoria opened its grounds and buildings to the public, has been a place of popular resort for the English people and for visitors from foreign lands. In a book written 20 years ago it was estimated that more than 12,000,000 persons had visited the place since 1838, when the young Queen unbarred the gates. Since then other millions have enjoyed the privilege. Yet, until a few weeks ago, not one had been privileged to pass directly from Haunted Gallery to Watching Chamber, or vice versa, and but few of the millions who have inspected other portions of the vast palace once occupied by generations of British sovereigns were aware that until George II walled up the door there was such direct communication between these two historic chambers.

More than four centuries look down, to employ the Napoleonic phrasing, upon that old door, open and closed. It was in 1514 that Henry VIII, best known to the average person through the plays of William Shakspeare, made Hampton Court a royal residence. Up to this day the old palace is associated more closely with Henry VIII than with any other English monarch, though a long line of Kings and Queens occupied the palace and for two and a half centuries it was the seat of the splendid courts of British rulers.

Henry VIII, followed by his procession of six wives in single file, two of whom he sent to the headsman's block and two others to divorcement, is the one outstanding figure in the history of Hampton Court Palace; for even the great Cardinal Wolsey, who built the palace as it stood originally and who owned and occupied it before the King coveted its magnificence, shrinks into the shadowy background as the fat and formidable figure of Henry stalks again, in human retrospect, through the reopened door from his Great Watching Chamber (or Guard Chamber) into the Haunted Gallery, where at times for centuries, according to local tradition, the ghost of one of his beheaded wives has been wont to wander in the darkness, shrieking.

But greater far than Henry VIII, though but a humble citizen when he lived, is the august figure of another man that glides through the opened door, even as once he walked through that portal a living man. That most illustrious personage of them all is William Shakspeare. Those of high and low degree who now may pass through the old doorway are entitled to feel the thrill of the fact that they are using a door that Shakspeare used when he visited the palace and witnessed the rehearsals of some of his plays in the Watching Chamber. It is known that Shakspeare used this door. The plays were produced on a stage erected in the Great Hall of the palace. Shakspeare himself is known to have taken part as an actor in some of the performances there, in the reign of James I. He was a member of the "King's Company of Comedians" which produced plays in the palace, his name being second on the list.

It is of interest to recall that in 1718, when George I occupied Hampton Court Palace, Shakspeare's "Henry VIII, or the Fall of Wolsey," was enacted in the Great Hall, on the very spot which had been the scene of the Cardinal's greatest splendor and where King Henry himself had sat in regal magnificence.

All the Tudor and Stuart monarchs from the time of Henry VIII, for more than two centuries, with their innumerable trains of courtiers, belong to the ghostly procession which the imaginative mind may picture as passing through the reopened door. They passed through in the flesh, when English history of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries was in the making. Edward VI, son of Henry VIII and Jane Seymour, his third wife and Queen, was born there, Oct. 12, 1537. In connection with the christening of the little Prince Edward we have a story directly connected with the reopened door. Edward was but three days old when he was taken into the chapel of the palace for this ceremony, a most elaborate one in every respect.

The procession was "made, gathered and put in readiness" at the door of the royal nursery, and passed through both Watching Chamber and Haunted Gallery, using the historic door, on the way to the baptismal chapel.

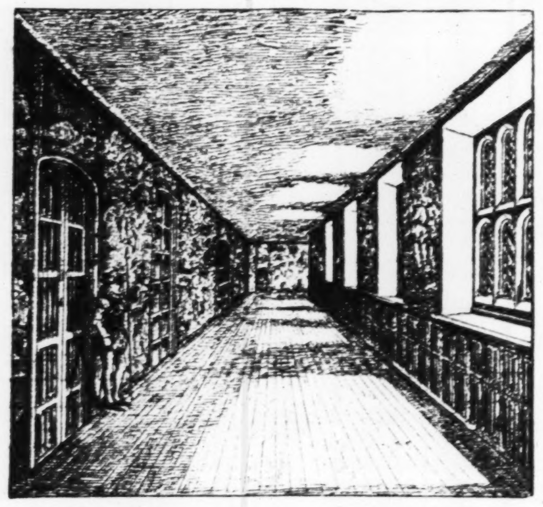
The same child, becoming King of England at the age of 9 years, returned to his birthplace as sovereign less than 10 years later and no doubt passed many times through the door through which as an infant he had been borne beneath the canopy to his christening font.

Citizens of the freer if not merrier England of today who project their imaginations backward into history as they stand in the reopened door may visualize, at will, such figures as the great Queen Elizabeth and her sister, the so-called "Bloody" Mary; Charles I, fleeing from Hampton Court when the Commons rose against him; Oliver Cromwell, Lord Protector, who dwelt during much of his reign in the old palace; Charles II, who came thither upon the restoration and redecorated the palace, laying out the Home Garden in the pattern which to a great extent it holds to this day, and bringing his bride, Catherine of Braganza, over from Portugal; William of Orange and Queen Mary, his wife; the first two Georges and still other monarchs who preceded them.

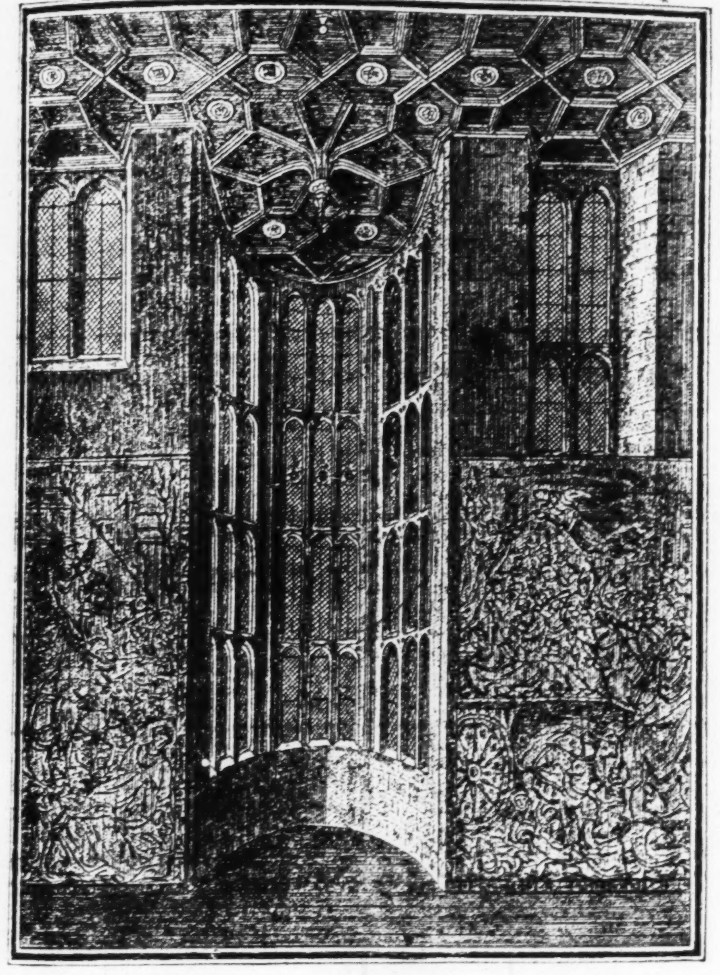
George II, the King who closed the door, was the last of the monarchs to occupy Hampton Court Palace as a place of regular abode and the seat from time to time of his court. We are told that this George had the door sealed up because he willed that the Haunted Gallery should be turned into a habitable room; though just why he wanted another habitable chamber, when the vast palace had already about 1200 rooms, more or less habitable, is not explained. The Haunted Gallery in later years became a sort of rummage room, then at times a picture gallery.

When George III, more or less well known to Americans, came to the throne he refused to make Hampton Court Palace one of his regal residences.

It is not to be believed that any of these found the Haunted Gallery "habitable," inasmuch as that chamber was notorious as the favorite haunt of several illustrious female ghosts, and particularly that of Queen Catherine Howard, one of Henry's executed wives. Jane Seymour, the only one of Henry's six successive wives who died decently at home in her bed as a Queen ought, also is one of those wandering ghosts. She died in the palace. "If we are to credit the assurances of those who believe in supernatural visitations," writes Ernest Law, historian of Hampton Court, "a specter of Queen Jane, clothed all in white, has been seen to emerge from a doorway in the Queen's old apartments and wander about, with a lighted taper in her hand, on the stairs and in the neighboring Silver-Stick Gallery."



The "Haunted Gallery" in Hampton Court Palace.



Bay window in the Great Watching Chamber, Hampton Court Palace.

The same writer gives an account of "another and better-known Hampton Court ghost, the accounts of whose appearances are more definite and circumstantial than are usually forthcoming in such cases." This ghost is that of Mistress Sibell Penn, who became Prince Edward's dry nurse and foster mother just a year after the death of Queen Jane, the Prince's mother. After Edward became King she continued to live at Hampton, where, in 1562, she died. A monument was erected to her, in the form of an effigy of Mistress Penn in marble. This effigy was shifted when the old church was pulled down, in 1829, and immediately afterward the old dry nurse is said to have arisen from her tomb and walked through certain chambers of the palace. "It is even affirmed," says the narrator, "that Mistress Penn's tall, gaunt form, dressed in a long gray robe, with a hood over her head and her lanky hands outstretched before her, has been seen in the Haunted Gallery—a supernatural visitation. * * * Enough probably has now been stated to establish the claim of Mistress Penn to rank among the best-authenticated of historical ghosts."

But there are many other figures, much more interesting than that of Mistress Sibell Penn, who may be imagined as walking again through the reopened door. These belong to the glorious times of English literature. One is that of John Milton, who, as Cromwell's secretary, used to play the organ in the palace. Another is that of "Rare" Ben Jonson. Still others who no doubt passed and repassed through the now reopened door in the long years of the palace's occupancy by British sovereigns before the second George sealed the portal were Daniel Defoe, Sir Philip Sidney and many of the writers and artists of England whose pleasant wraiths still glide through the memories of mankind.

Most tragic of all the memories of those who passed through the door is that of Catherine Howard, fifth wife of Henry VIII. Though it is highly probable that Anne Boleyn, his second wife, who also was beheaded, used that old door from time to time, no special record thereof is available. It is a historical fact that Catherine Howard, whom Henry caused to be executed because of certain indiscretions she was said to have committed in her earlier life, and to which, in fact, she confessed, passed through the old door on her way to the Tower and the block.

The Haunted Gallery is so called chiefly because of a tradition that Queen Catherine Howard's shrieking ghost haunts it. There is authentic record of the unhappy Queen's escape from her own chamber after Henry had ordered her confined there until she could be carried off to execution; that she "ran along to seek an interview with Henry VIII, who was hearing mass in the royal closet in the chapel;" that just as she reached the door she was seized by the guards and hustled back; and that Henry, though he heard her frightful screams, was unmoved.

And it is in this large room, the Haunted Gallery, that the wraith of Catherine is said to have been seen at times, "in disordered garments and a ghastly look of despair, uttering at the same time the most unearthly shrieks, till she passes through the door at the end of the gallery."

VENGEANCE

By J. Storer Clouston

A TWO-PART STORY PART ONE

"DO PEOPLE often really disappear entirely?" asked one of us.

"Alive or dead?" said Carrington.

"Either."

"Among the lower strata of society they disappear easily and often," said he, "but in the upper strata I can only say my own experience is that clean-as-a-whistle disappearances, without trace or clue, are so rare that I should have to know all about the circumstances before I believed a tale of that kind. By Jingo, I can think of one case, though. * * * Well, let me fill a pipe first." (Carrington was having a conscientious but brief spell of pipe smoking at this period.)

• • • • • • • •

"I always take in two or three morning papers and I forget which of them had the item; anyhow, it ran something like this:

"'Strange disappearance of a Norfolk Squire. On Monday last Mr. Herbert L. deF. Vivian-Gryce of Stair Manor, Plogthorp, Norfolk, went out shooting, accompanied by his wife. About the middle of the day, it appears, he suddenly left Mrs. Vivian-Gryce, saying he must return to the house, and from that moment he has not been seen again. Mr. Vivian-Gryce is lord of the manor of Plogthorp and belongs to one of the oldest and best-known families in the county, and the incident is naturally causing much local excitement.'

"I myself read this paragraph with more skepticism than excitement. The month was July, so that the 'went out shooting' seemed a manifest error, and if the details of a story are badly wrong, its general drift or significance is not likely to be very correctly reported. I was, therefore, not at all surprised to see in the next issue of the paper a brief paragraph apparently contradicting the whole tale.

"'The statements about Mr. Vivian-Gryce's departure for home on a visit were quite incorrectly stated,' this second paragraph ran. 'There is no cause for anxiety and Mr. Vivian-Gryce is expected to return very shortly.'

"'As I thought!' I said to myself complacently. 'A mere mare's nest.'

"The next development, however, did surprise me. It took the form of a telegram, signed 'Vivian-Gryce,' asking me to come down to Stair Manor immediately. This summons arrived too late for me to catch a train that night, so I wired back to say I would take the first train next morning, and before midday I found myself being whirled in a luxurious car through typical partridge-driving country—big flat fields of roots, with the hedges cut at intervals to form butts, that made me wish I were some luckier fellow paying an unprofessional visit later in the season. I noticed that it took me only a few minutes to drive from the station to the manor house, and then I was whirling through a spacious park, and presently stopping before a very fine old mansion.

"The weather was glorious, the country looking at its best, and everything I saw told of wealth, comfort, tradition and first-class sport. If the fortunate owner of all this actually had disappeared, either some very strong or some very foul reason must be at the bottom of it, I reflected. And these reflections were intensified when I met the lady he had left behind.

"I found her awaiting me before the wide fireplace of a charming old hall, with an elderly gentleman in clerical attire at her side. Mrs. Vivian-Gryce was a woman who would have knocked me flat had I been a brunette, for it's always the opposite color that seems to do the damage most effectually—or anyhow most swiftly. She was quite young, tall, very fair and radiantly beautiful; with a spirited eye, coils of golden hair and a delightful little trick of puckering up her forehead with each emotion as it passed.

"The gentleman she introduced as her husband's uncle, the Rev. Richard Vivian-Gryce, rector of the parish. He was a fine, upstanding figure of John Bull, who looked as though he were probably more inspired loosing off at partridges behind a hedge than at parishioners behind a pulpit. But a very nice, downright old boy he was for all that.

"'I may explain that I am largely responsible for bringing you down, Mr. Carrington,' said he. 'My niece takes a philosophical and, I cannot but think, a somewhat optimistic view of her husband's disappearance. It was she who corrected the first slightly erroneous paragraph, I may add.' She seemed to make some sign of protest and he turned to her with a serious air. 'Really, Hester, you overdid it, my dear girl, you did, I assure you! I was quite right in insisting on bringing Mr. Carrington down. He will tell you so, I am sure, when he has heard the whole story.'

"From this speech I gathered, and made a mental note of the fact, that it was the uncle who appeared to be most concerned. And yet when she spoke it became instantly clear that she was far from indifferent. Indeed, her concern was so manifest then that one was inclined to suspect a highly sensitive pride of being at the bottom of her attempt to hush the business up.

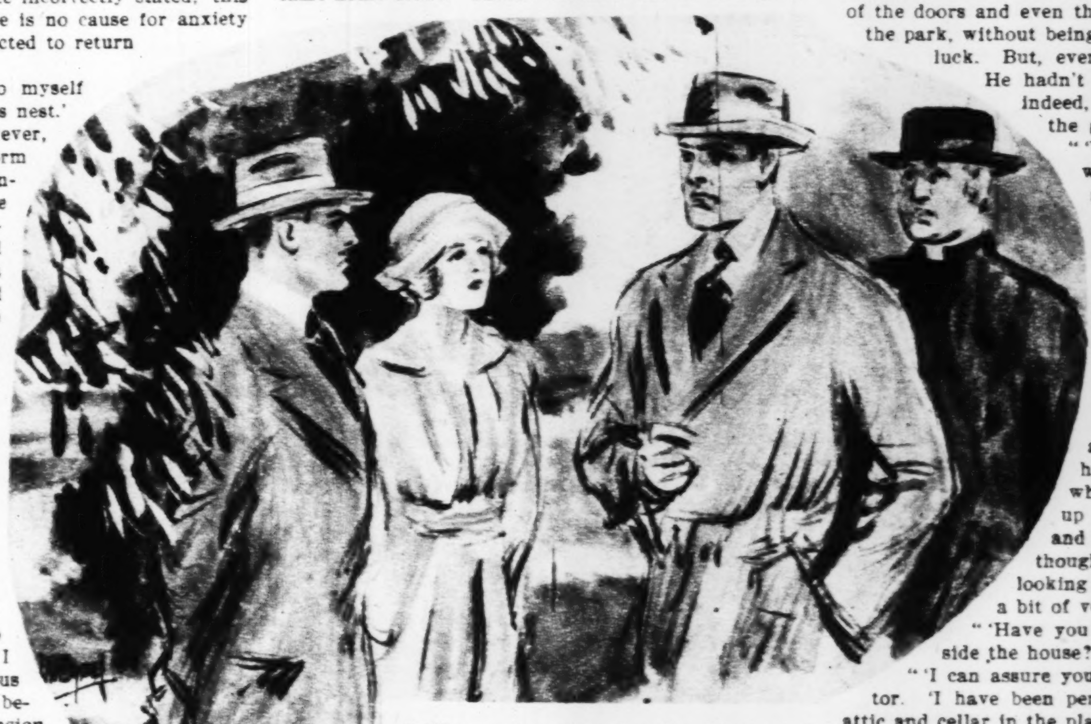
"'It was on Monday morning,' she began, 'I think about 11:30 o'clock, when my husband and I left the house. We were going to visit a farm about a mile away, and as we had to pass through some gorse where there are always a lot of rabbits, he took his gun with him.'

"'Does he generally carry a gun, by the way?' I asked.

"'Oh, no, but the rabbits had been doing damage in the garden, and he said it was time one or two of them were shot.'

"'A lot of good one or two would have done!' observed the rector. 'There are hundreds of 'em in that gorse.'

"'Well,' she said, with a slight flush, 'he did take his gun; and then when we had gone only quite a short way he discovered he had taken the wrong kind of cartridges. Some swanshot for wild fowling he had put in his pocket. So he said he would go back and change them, and told me to walk on and wait for him at the farm. I waited for an hour and he never came, so I came home alone. There I learned that he had spoken to the butler for a moment, gone into the gunroom, and then simply disappeared!'



"'You were seen by the butler,' I said, very calmly. 'He was watching you all the time.'"

"'You mean he was never seen again after he entered the gunroom of his own house?'

"'Never.'

"Here was a clean-as-a-whistle disappearance with a vengeance! The thing sounded so utterly incredible that I am afraid I must have shown something of my feelings in my face, for she flushed again and said, with one of those fascinating little puckers of her brows:

"'I had better call in the butler at once and you can question him. It was he who last spoke to my husband. Will you please ring the bell, Uncle Richard?'

"In a moment the butler entered, a middle-aged man with grizzled hair, a tight mouth, firm chin and quiet eyes. He was one of those well-drilled, perfect servants who form a type apart from the rest of humanity. They live behind a mask, and more difficult people to size up on a short acquaintance do not exist outside the unfathomable East.

"'It was this way, sir,' said Horman, in a quiet, even voice, which exactly matched his face, 'I happened to be passing through the hall, sir, when I saw my master come from the vestibule carrying his gun. I dare say I looked a little surprised at seeing him back so soon, for he says to me:

"'"Horman," says he, "I've taken the wrong kind of cartridges. I'm going to change them."

"'Then, sir, he went through that door there and I followed after him, for the passage leads both to the gunroom and to my pantry further on. I saw him turn into the gunroom, leaving the door open behind him, and a minute or two later one of the maids as happened to pass saw him through the open door bending over a box of cartridges. And that's all I know about it, sir.'

"'All?' I repeated. 'Do you mean to say you didn't hear any sound after that?'

"'Nothing at all, sir.'

"'And you have no idea what can have happened to him?'

"'None, sir.'

"'Was your pantry door open or shut?'

"It was drawn to, so to speak, sir, not actually shut.'

"'Could he have gone down the passage past your room, without your hearing him?'

"'I don't think it likely, sir.'

"'Besides,' put in the rector, 'Horman's window covers pretty well the whole back premises. It is the only window on that side of the house whose view isn't obstructed by outbuildings or trees or shrubbery. If my nephew had gone out by the back, Horman was practically certain to see him.'

"I inquired about the possibilities of his getting out by the front or side doors, where the other servants were at the time, and what chance there would be of anyone being seen by the people in the lodge or the gardeners. It would have been physically possible, I concluded, after putting a good many questions, for Mr. Vivian-Gryce to have slipped quietly out of one of the doors and even through the gardens and out of the park, without being seen, given almost incredible luck. But, even so, where did he go then? He hadn't been seen at the station, or, indeed, anywhere outside or inside the grounds of his house.

"'We have had a spell of dry weather lately,' I said. 'I should like to see whether by any chance there are footprints outside that might give some clue.'

"But even this possibility (slight as it was) had been put out of court. Every flower bed and path on the place had been raked since Monday. This seemed quick and thorough work, but it appeared that Vivian-Gryce had given orders to have the whole place thoroughly tidied up shortly before he vanished, and since then nobody had thought of stopping this work and looking for footprints. It just seemed a bit of very bad luck.

"'Have you made a thorough search inside the house?' I asked.

"'I can assure you on that point,' said the rector. 'I have been personally through every room, attic and cellar in the place.'

"'Well,' I said to myself, 'in the meanwhile the problem of how the man disappeared seems insolvable—though, by Jingo, I mean to solve it! Let us now tackle the problem of why he disappeared—assuming for the moment he disappeared of his own accord. If no cause whatever is disclosed, then comes the question of foul play.'

"We dismissed Horman, and I put the question to them plainly: Did they know of anything in the vanished man's past record that might conceivably account either for his wanting to disappear or for his having an enemy who might have put him out of the way. This last suggestion seemed to upset his wife considerably.

"'I never thought of that!' she exclaimed. 'Oh, it can't be possible!'

"I glanced at the rector. He evidently had seriously considered the possibility.

"Between them they gave me these particulars: Herbert Vivian-Gryce had been a younger son, and rather a rackety one in his youth. He had been in the army for a short time and then gone out to Canada to ranch. There he had lived for several years, till the sudden death of his elder brother made him Squire of Plogthorp and a rich man. He had come home, fallen in love with the beautiful girl beside me within a fortnight of his landing, married her three months later, and lived with her for about six months, apparently in the greatest happiness; and then mysteriously vanished from the ken of man.

"I was shown several photographs of him and given various particulars of his appearance, and I got a picture of a fair, good-looking, middle-sized young man of 29, a bit of an exquisite in his dress, fond of sport, and popular both with men and women—women rather especially, I gathered (though I noted that his wife was reticent on that point and changed it for another as soon as she could). Both she and the rector were emphatic in declaring that they knew of no possible enemies; though they admitted that, of course, they knew nothing, except from his own mouth, of his life abroad. Still, he had never mentioned so much as a quarrel to them.

"I thought over all this for a few moments and then turned to his wife.

"'Pardon my putting the question, but have you any knowledge or suspicion of any event, connected with any man or any woman, that might conceivably have made him go away?'

"She flushed and for a moment hesitated.

"'I suppose most men have a few episodes in their lives,' she said, 'but I certainly have no knowledge of anything that would make Herbert leave me.'

"'Why did you contradict that first paragraph?' I asked.

"I tried to give the question as little importance as I could, but her forehead puckered less agreeably than usual and there was a glint for an instant in her eyes.

"'I didn't contradict it,' she said. 'I merely corrected one or two inaccuracies. Besides, I hate the idea of scandal!'

"'I told you you were wrong,' her uncle began, when he was interrupted by Horman coming into the hall.

"'Mr. Elkin has called to see you, ma'am,' he announced; and looking at him closely, I seemed to see a curious suggestion of suppressed emotion in his face; though of what kind I could not even guess. That mask of his was very perfect.

"'Who is Mr. Elkin?' asked his mistress.

"'Elkin?' said the rector. 'Why, it must be that man stopping at the Stair Arms. Is he a very tall gentleman, Horman? Ah, that's the fellow, then. He brought his golf clubs, I heard, thinking there was a links at Plogthorp! Ha, ha!'

"'Isn't there a course?' I asked.

"'Not within 30 miles!'

"'You had better show him in,' said Mrs. Vivian-Gryce.

"Horman seemed to hesitate for a moment, and then he came forward and lowered his voice.

"'I think I ought to tell you, ma'am, that this Mr. Elkin was hanging about in the spinney at the top of the back lane on Monday morning. I saw him from my window just after the master had gone into the gunroom.'

"We all three stared at him for a moment. The rector was the first to speak.

"This question so exactly expressed my own feelings that I added nothing to it myself. As for his niece, I heard her murmur rather than speak the words:

"'Why have you only told us now?'

"Imperturbable as a statue, Horman answered:

"'I didn't wish to give any unnecessary alarm, ma'am.'

"'Didn't wish,' began the indignant rector. 'Well, anyhow, fetch him at once now!' And when the butler had gone, he added: 'I did give Horman credit for more sense!'

"'Sense?' I thought to myself. 'That doesn't strike me as the name of the missing virtue!'

"Sensations came thick and fast. The man who entered was as fine a specimen of the hard, lean, athletic, open-air Colonial type as I have ever set eyes on. He stood well over six feet, his figure was magnificent, and his face, with its dark-blue eyes with coal-black lashes, compressed lips and slightly protruding chin, was pre-eminently arresting. He bowed with a certain natural grace and plunged straight into business.

"'I don't want to butt in where I'm not wanted, Mrs. Gryce,' said he, without any preamble at all, 'but it struck me I might be some sort of use to you. I come from Canada—heard of Mr. Vivian-Gryce out there—and having some kind of experience as a sort of amateur detective, I thought I'd take the liberty of offering my services to try and track him down. One is sort of interested in a fellow one has heard of out home, you know. I'm not asking any fee. What d'you say?'

"For a moment both Mrs. Vivian-Gryce and her uncle seemed bereft of speech by this cool proposition. Then I saw the rector's eye turn to me and he began: 'We have already,' when I suddenly cut in.

"'Excuse me, rector,' I said, in the most genial and likely-to-appeal-to-a-wild-man-from-the-West tones I could achieve, 'I think you ought to close with this very kind and sporting offer right now, on the spot! A slice of luck, I call it!'

"With the eye furthest from Mr. Elkin I shot a wink at the other two. They tumbled to the idea with creditable quickness, and the rector, in fact, played up to me excellently.

"'This is Mr. Carrington, an old friend of the family,' said he by way of introduction. 'Now, Carrington, you put things to Mr. Elkin as you think—er—well, as a detective ought to have them put.'

"Mr. Elkin had clearly no idea whatever who I was, and I prepared to make the most of the situation. I may say that I gave not the slightest credit to his statement that he was a 'sort of amateur detective.' Three possible alternatives came instantly into my mind. Either he wanted very badly for some reason to find out what had become of Vivian-Gryce. Or he knew only too well, and adopted this audacious method of bluffing us and diverting suspicion from himself. Or, again, he might be in league with the vanished man, and this might be a further step in their plan—whatever it was. As to which of the three was the most likely, my mind was absolutely open.

"'You come from Canada, do you?' I began. 'That's very interesting, Mr. Elkin! Did you see much of Mr. Vivian-Gryce out there?'

"'I told you I'd heard of him,' replied the tall man, in a tone which warned me he would get suspicious if I pressed the point.

"'Mysterious disappearance, isn't it?' said I.

"'I don't know the facts; what are they?' said he.

"I saw that I was up against rather a smarter gentleman than I had bargained for. I gave him the very briefest and baldest outline of the facts, watching him closely the while. He listened without a trace of expression on his face.

"'Then he just went into his gunroom and disappeared?' said he, looking at me with the same sort of Red-Indian calm.

"I was getting no change out of him this way, so I decided it was time to shake him up a bit.

"'Yes,' I said. 'Curiously enough, he disappeared just at the very time when you were lurking in the trees at the back of the house.'

"By Jingo, that did make him sit up! I thought for a moment he was going for me on the spot. He controlled himself, however, but his eyes were very nasty, indeed, as he retorted:

"'I was lurking among no trees! I'm not that sort.'

"'You were seen by the butler,' I said, very calmly. 'He was watching you all the time.'

"The murderous look died out of the tall man's eye, and he fell thoughtful inste .

"'Well,' said he, 'I'll tell you just exactly what happened. Thinking that a cat might look at a King, I was having a look at your house, Mrs. Gryce. We don't have such houses where I come from, and I was kind of interested in the old place. I was standing in that path at the back, when suddenly I saw you, and not wishing to be seen taking a liberty, I stepped in among the trees. That's the truth.'

"'You saw me?' repeated Mrs. Vivian-Gryce. 'But I had left the house long before Horman saw you, and I only came home in time for lunch.'

"The tall man stared at her.

"'Will you swear to that?' said he.

"Her brow puckered angrily.

"'Do you disbelieve me?' she answered.

"'What happened next?' I asked.

"'Nothing,' said he. 'I thought Mrs. Gryce was coming my way, but I allow I didn't see her pass.'

"'Then you waited for her in the wood?' I asked.

"'No, I did not,' he said, with some heat. 'Matter of fact, I turned right away from the path so as to avoid her—as that spy of a butler can tell you, if he tells the truth. In about a couple of minutes I turned back, having rather changed my mind, but I allow I didn't see any sign of her then.'

"'You changed your mind?' I repeated. 'What did you mean to do that time?'

"He stared at me for a moment, very darkly and very shrewdly, and then he sprang up.

"'Oh, I see; you've got a detective here already,' said he. 'In that case I guess I'm not wanted. Good-by, Mrs. Gryce.'

"And with that he strode out of the hall and a moment later we heard the front door bang behind him.

"'No,' said his niece, 'I'm sure he isn't a rascal. He is very striking—looking—very strange'—— She broke off and fell into thought.

"Just then the luncheon gong sounded. What between Horman's presence in the room and the shadow of the vanished host and the mysterious Elkin, it was a silent meal. After it was over I set out on a tour of investigation outside the house. I walked up the back lane past the wood where the tall man had lurked, but here again the mania for tidiness had swept away all traces. This lane or path (for it was really only a wide path) had been recindered and rolled, so that in spite of the dry weather there wasn't a footstep left anywhere. I also drew blank at the lodge, the keeper's house, the village and the station. No one had seen Vivian-Gryce, or even anyone who might be disguised, on that Monday morning, or at any time since. The case was certainly extraordinarily baffling, and I came back to the house very thoughtfully indeed.

"The rector took me into the library when I got back.

"'What do you make of it?' he asked.

"'Very little so far,' I confessed.

"'Is my nephew alive or dead?' said he.

"'If I said one or the other it would be a mere guess,' I replied. 'One can argue that his taking a gun for apparently rather inadequate reasons and then going back on the excuse that he had brought the wrong cartridges, suggests a premeditated plan to disappear; and the absence of any sign of a tragedy, especially no body being found, supports this view. On the other hand, one can argue that it was really quite natural to take the gun, and quite natural to make a mistake about the cartridges, and the fact that he took no luggage—not even, apparently, a toothbrush—with him, is decidedly against the theory that he meant to run away; as also the fact that nobody saw him running. But as yet there really is far too little evidence to say.'

"'But what about that fellow Elkin?'

"'I can give you several guesses about him, but they will only be guesses—till I get more evidence.'

"He was silent for a minute or two and then said, suddenly:

"'By the way, my niece has just received a note that seems to have made her think a bit.'

"I pricked up my ears.

"'I have no idea.'

"'Who brought it?'

"'Unfortunately, the bearer seems to have met her when she was out for a walk in the park. I don't know who it was; and there is no use asking her. She is very close about it.'

"It seemed as though the stars in their courses were working against me. The detective of fiction would have happened to see the lady getting the note, tracked the bearer down and solved the mystery. But ill-luck was dogging my steps considerably more effectively than I was dogging Mr. Vivian-Gryce's, and that very night it overtook me again.

"I had been asked to stay at Stair Manor as long as the inquiry required me, and as I went up to my room I said to myself that it looked at present as if I should be there for some time. My hostess had said not a word, either to her uncle or myself, about the mysterious note, and in fact I had got no farther since I had my talk with the rector. I got into bed, but sleep stayed far away and I had been lying thinking and smoking for a couple of hours when suddenly I heard a footfall on the gravel path outside.

"I slipped out of bed, put out my light and cautiously peeped out of the window, but whoever it was had moved out of sight. In dead silence I sat and listened, and then, all at once, I heard a door softly closing. Candle in hand, and revolver in my dressing-gown pocket, I stole out and had reached the bottom of the stairs and was just crossing the hall when my foot caught in a rucked-up mat. I stumbled and out jumped the candle from the candlestick and fell with a clatter on the floor.

"'Damn!' said I, and very heartily, too.

"I had been heading for the library, where voices were most distinctly murmuring, but the silence of mice descended on them when that candle fell. And then, by the time I had picked it up and relit it, the library door opened and Mrs. Vivian-Gryce stood before me. She was still fully dressed, so I knew as certainly as if she had shouted it at me, that that note had appointed a rendezvous.

"'What's the matter?' she asked, with a slight smile at my appearance.

The Secret of Success with Pastry

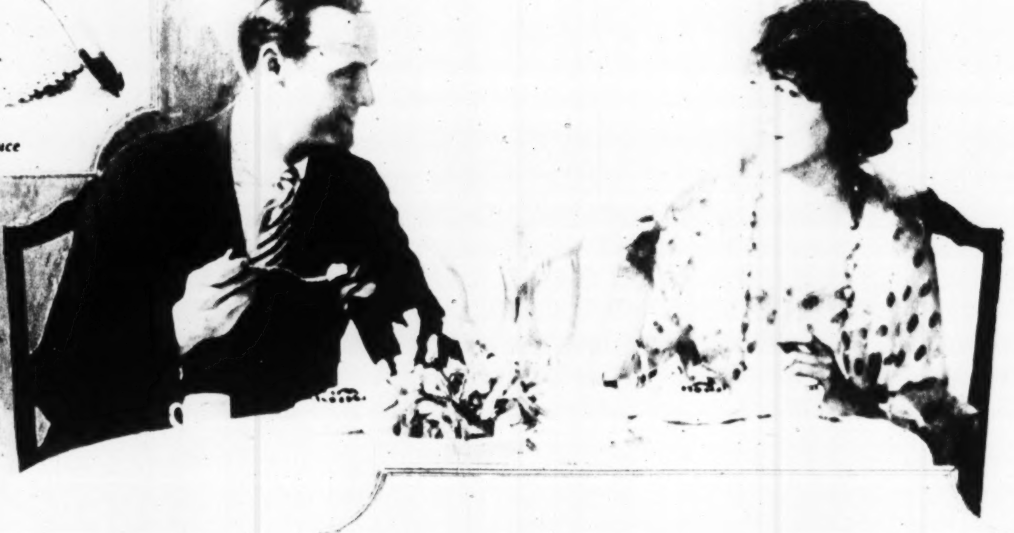
By A. Louise Andrea

Mrs. Andrea was awarded the gold medal as lecturer on food and culinary topics, at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, in 1915; appointed official lecturer on foods and canning for the New York International Exposition in 1918; and recognized as one of the greatest living authorities on food preparation.

PIES! TARTS! DUMPLINGS! What visions of goodies! And always the crowning touch is and will be the pastry—the flaky, tender, melt-in-your-mouth kind.

A perfect shortening is essential, one containing no water, so every drop of oil will help to make a tender crust.

Creamed Chicken Pattie with Cream Sauce



Mazola a splendid shortening

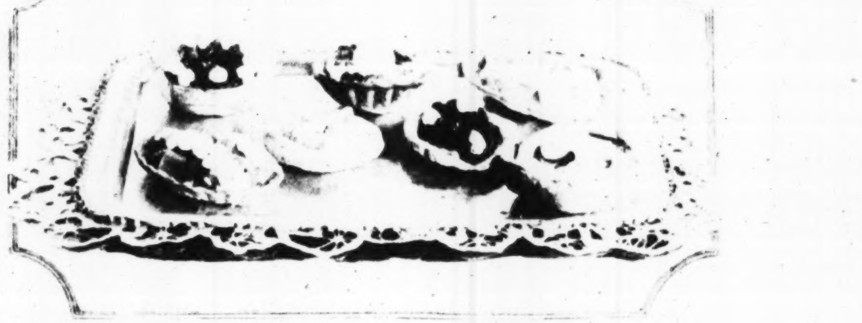
Mazola is a pure oil, containing no water, or curd, as butter does. Use less Mazola than butter. If your recipe calls for a cup of butter, use only three-quarters of a cup of Mazola. This will give a deliciously crisp, tender crust. You will be surprised, too, at the saving this will effect in your pastry-making alone during the year.

Also remember that pastry flour contains less gluten than bread flour, and consequently is less "thirsty." The best home-made pastry flour is prepared by putting three tablespoons Argo corn starch into your measuring cup, filling the cup even full with your regular bread flour, and then sifting.

Be exact in making your dough

Place measured Mazola and ice water in bowl, add salt sifted with flour and mix to a stiff dough with a knife. In this way Mazola will be more evenly distributed throughout mixture.

After combining ingredients, your dough is ready for the rolling pin. Flour board, turn dough on it, and toss to and fro with a knife, so that all surface is coated with flour. Rub rolling pin with flour, and starting from centre, roll out dough toward you, from you, and to left and right, using quick, light strokes.



Fill shells with sweetened fillings and decorate from pastry tube with mixture made from sugar, white of egg and flavoring. Brown in oven.

How to make and bake the pie

The lower crust for a pie should be slightly thicker than the upper as it must hold the weight of the filling when being served. Have pie plate brushed with Mazola and lay rolled out dough loosely on it, letting edges hang over. If there are any blisters lift edge of paste so all air is excluded. Then press edge slightly with palm of hand, and trim with a sharp knife. Now roll out dough for the upper crust. Fold one half on the other, and on fold cut short gashes so that when placed over the filling steam may escape during baking. Place filling in lower paste, then dip finger in cold water and moisten edge of lower paste all round and cover filling with top paste. Dip tines of fork in flour and gently press edges together, trim with a knife.

Pies require a hot oven at first, in order that the lower crust will be quickly baked to prevent the moisture in filling from soaking the lower crust and making it heavy. Later reduce heat so that filling is cooked by the time the upper crust is baked. If crust browns quickly before filling is done, cover with white paper brushed with Mazola.

Shells for tarts

Shells for a lemon meringue pie or tarts are baked on the outside of pans. Roll out dough as for upper crust, lay pie plate, inverted and ungreased, on board, lay rolled dough loosely over the dish. Place another ungreased pie plate, same size, on top so paste is held between the two; trim edges and bake dough—sandwiched, between the two plates, in a quick oven. In about five minutes lift off top plate. If pastry is set (no blisters forming) reduce heat and continue baking without top plate until pastry is crisp and well browned. If blisters form after removing top plate put back for a few minutes and then remove it. When baked, invert the shell so that it lies "right side up with care" on a pie plate. When cold it is ready to be filled.

How to vary your pastry

From the same pastry dough may be made dumplings, cheese straws, pimiento squares, and other dainties. Or try adding some sugar to the flour. Again, a bit of grated lemon or orange rind gives you "something different," and that delicious almond flavor is gained by a judicious blending of almond paste into the dough.

FAMILY PASTRY

5 tablespoons Mazola ½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons ice water 1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder

Put Mazola and ice water in mixing bowl. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together, and stir them into the liquid, mixing with knife into a dough that can be lifted on the knife without crumbling. Roll out as needed.

The greatest sale of any cooking oil

The wonderful economy and high quality of Mazola have given it the greatest sale of any brand of salad and cooking oil.

If you have not yet tried Mazola, get a can from your grocer—once you try it for cooking you will always prefer it to lard and other animal fats.

Your grocer sells Mazola in pint, quart, ½ gallon and gallon cans. The large size cans are most economical.

You need never again have a raw, ragged cuticle

AUTHORITIES agree that hangnails are caused either by neglect or by wrong methods of care. If neglected, the cuticle will grow fast to the nail. As the nail pushes forward, the cuticle stretches until it can stretch no more. Then it splits—and you have a hangnail. Or, if you cut the cuticle with knife or scissors, you are likely to pierce through to the nail root and then you get the same result.

To prevent hangnails, therefore, you must constantly detach the cuticle from the nail—but you must do this without cutting or breaking it, or you will have hangnails just as surely as if you neglected it.

Cutex Cuticle Remover will soften the cuticle, gently loosen it from the nail and take off all hard, dry edges. If you will begin to use Cutex regularly, you will never again have hangnails. Your very first trial will leave your nail rims smooth and even. You will also find Cutex an excellent nail bleach.

New polishes to complete your manicure

Then for the gleaming luster that you want for your nails, try the two new Cutex polishes. Cutex Powder Polish, with just a few light strokes, gives you the highest, most lasting luster obtainable. Cutex Liquid Polish goes on with an absolutely uniform smoothness, dries instantly, and leaves a delightful luster that keeps its even brilliance for at least a week.

Cutex Sets come in four sizes: The Compact Set at 60c, the Five Minute Set at $1.00, the Traveling Set at $1.50, and the Boudoir Set at $3.00. Or each preparation can be had separately at 35c. At all drug and department stores in the United States and Canada.

Beauty Begins with the Complexion!

BEAUTY begins with the complexion—and when the wrong powder is used, it often ends there, too!

Bourjois' [pronounced Bourge-wah] Java* is not merely a powder with a French name, but a fine Face Powder with a French fame—a century-old fame that American women have endorsed.

If you measure its value by the surprising, new beauty it gives you, not by the astonishing, low price it costs you, you too, shall say, "There is no other powder just like Java."

ASHES OF ROSES*

the famous Bourjois hand-made French rouge, as Parisian as Java, and almost as important a complement to your complexion. Both are included in the 12 preparations to be found in the Bourjois Cabinet Assortment at progressive dealers. For the woman who prefers a lighter shade of rouge, we suggest Rouge Mandarine.*

Conspicuous nose pores grow larger if neglected

THE pores of your face are not as fine as those on other parts of your body.

On the nose, especially, there are more fat glands, and there is more activity of the pores. If these pores are not properly stimulated and cleansed, they clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged pores, follow every night this simple treatment:

WRING a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face.

When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and see what an improvement this treatment will make the first time you use it.

Do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from long neglect. But follow the treatment persistently and you will be able to reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati New York and Perth, Ontario.

Dr. Jeanne A. N. Walter

Primordial man—naked and beastial, squatting in gloomy caverns, gnawing bones—was born, lived and died in a hostile world.

Its hostility—and his wretchedness—arose from his ignorance. His handmaidens were Hate and Fear. His sole reliance was his club. He saw in the beasts, forests, torrents, seas, clouds—and even in his fellow man—only enemies. He recognized no ties binding them one to another or to himself. Modern man is born to comparative luxury. Love rocks his cradle and shields his youth. When he goes forth to struggle he wields a pencil—not a club. He relies upon his brain—not his brawn. He knows the Physical as neither master or equal, but as a useful servant. His fellow men and the forces of Nature are his friends—not enemies.

These tremendous changes—from hate to love, from fear to confidence, from material strife to mental control—have been wrought by the slow dawn of Understanding. In direct proportion as he understands Cosmic Law, is man's lot enviable or the reverse.

This understanding will enable you to compel Effects by controlling Causes. It is the "Open Sesame" by which you may throw wide the doors which seem to bar men from the treasure house of Nature. Because of your knowledge, you will have influence and power. Circumstances will favor you in a most astonishing way. If you would go aloft, into the heights, where all that you ever dared think or hope is but a shadow of the dazzling reality, you may do so. Upon receipt of your name and address, I will send you a copy of a book by Mr. Bernard Guilbert Guerney, the celebrated New York author and critic. It affords the inspiration which will put you in harmony with all that is best in life, and as you come into harmony with these things, you make them your own; you relate with them; you attract them to you.

The book is sent without cost or obligation of any kind, yet many who have received it say that it is by far the most important thing which has ever come into their lives.
